Preparing for publication, in One Volume Octavo,

BY J. R. YOUNG,

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS, PURE AND MIXED.

WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. Young has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. Young's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

Price 1s. 1jd. and 2s. 9d. per box.

This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated by unsolicited testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age. These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.

Sold by all medicine vendors. Observe "Thomas Prout, 229, Strand, London," on the Government stamp.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—DELICATE HEALTH.

—In the debility, languor, and nervousness generated by excess of any kind, whether mental or physical, the effect of these Pills is in the highest degree bracing, renovating, and restorative. They drive from the system the morbid cause of disease, re-establish the digestion, regulate all the secretions, quiet the nervous system, raise the patient's spirits, and bring back the frame to its pristine health and vigour. Holloway's Pills increase the appetite, while they secure perfect digestion to all ordinary food, and release the invalid from restraint in diet. In a word, whatever the cause of decline, these Pills place the patient in the position most favourable to recovery, under which the most debilitated regain their strength.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP OF INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 6s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

CLAPHAM COMMON.

UNFURNISHED HOUSES at CLAPHAM COMMON.

Mr. McLACHLAN, of 35, St. James's-street and Clapham-common, is instructed to LET TWO HOUSES in the GROVE, adjoining that beautiful spot, Clapham-common. They consist of dining, breakfast, and double drawing-rooms, and five bed-rooms, with the usual domestic offices, coach-house, stable, &c. The houses have just been put into thorough substantial and ornamental repair, and are fit for immediate occupation. The locality is highly respectable; and as the rents are moderate, and several Indian families reside in the neighbourhood, Mr. McLachlan begs to recommend the houses to the attention of families recently arrived from India. The drainage is warranted. Omnibuses to West-end and City pass constantly. One mile to the Balham Station, for Pimlico, Crystal Palace, Brighton, &c.

CLAPHAM COMMON.—APARTMENTS,

handsomely furnished, consisting of Drawing-room, Dining-room, and Two or Three Bedrooms, pleasantly situated on the South side of the Common.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 7th of April brings the pleasing intelligence of the suppression of the disturbances in Lower Bengal—the ryots, however, declaring that they have been deceived by the Government. Great praise is due to Mr. P. Lyon, of Beniarum, for his resolute defence of his factory against a formidable mob of rioters gathered together from other districts.

"Mr. Lyon—says the Englishman—a single European, with six or seven native assistants, fortunately all of them men from other districts, was attacked in his factory by not less than five thousand natives, who approached in masses from various directions. Mr. Lyon, having a number of firearms, faced the nearest body boldly on its approach, when a couple of shots changed their direction. The body they then joined were advancing upon him, when a river steamer came in sight, and seeing the commotion came to his assistance. The rioters attempted cutting Mr. Lyon off from the river, but he kept up a fire amongst them, and his servants, encouraged by the approach of assistance, behaved well, being armed with swords and axes. The steamer landed a boat's crew; and on another steamer appearing and supplying Mr. Lyon with muskets and ammunition, the mob slowly dispersed, having only plundered some of the offices of the factory, and leaving behind them five or six wounded, and, we believe, two dead. The most remarkable fact, and the strongest evidence of the danger of the situation, is, that of the disabled rioters, not one belongs to that district, nor is an indigo ryot at all."

A deputation of tea-planters connected with Cachar have had an interview with the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, in order to obtain an alteration in the conditions under which they hold land in that province. It is essential to the success of their enterprise that they should hold in fee simple, which important concession they are likely to obtain, though Mr. Grant is believed to be averse to grants for more than one hundred years.

"A native—we quote from the Hurkaru—has at last been punished for forgery, but not by the Sudder. Seebkissen Bannerjee, a very wealthy native, assisted by an apothecary of the name of Crawford, and a native of the name of Kunnye Lall Pall, forged a will, purporting to be that of a brother of Seebkissen. They were tried for the offence in the Supreme Court. The trial lasted for four days, and created the greatest interest and excitement among the natives. On the 5th April Sir Barnes Peacock summed up, in a speech which lasted from 11 A.M. to 5 P.M. The jury retired, and after an absence of ten minutes, brought in a verdict of guilty. Seebkissen has been condemned to fourteen years, and Kunnye Lall to seven years' transportation. Crawford has eight years of penal servitude awarded to him. The excitement was so great among the natives, on hearing Seebkissen's punishment, that Sir Barnes Peacock was for some time insubordinate."

We were mistaken, it appears, in supposing that the mutinous Minutes of the Madras Government had been surreptitiously obtained by the local press. It is now stated that copies were sent to the papers by Sir Charles himself, with a full knowledge of the inevitable consequences. As such a gross act of insubordination could not possibly be overlooked without subverting the very groundwork of discipline, her Majesty's Government have adopted the only course left to them, and by the last mail peremptory instructions were despatched to Madras, appointing Sir Henry Ward, at present Governor of Ceylon, as immediate successor to Sir Charles Trevelyan. The selection is a happy one, though the inhabitants of Ceylon will not easily be reconciled to the loss of the ablest and most popular Governor to whom that island has yet been intrusted.

We regret to announce the death of Horace Hayman Wilson, Esq., M.A., F.R.S., Boden Professor of Sanscrit at the University of Oxford, which melancholy event took place on the 8th inst. Professor Wilson began life as a member of the Bengal Medical Service, and acquired the reputation of being the best European Sanscrit scholar in our Indian empire. In this country Professor Wilson was favourably known by his Grammar and Dictionary of the Sanscrit Language, a Glossary of Judicial and Revenue Terms in use in India, Vishnu Purana, and his translations of Hindu Plays and the Rig Veda. Mr. Wilson was also Chief Librarian at the East India House. He has died in the 75th year of his age, regretted by his friends and by all Oriental scholars.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

The following telegrams were received at the India-office in the course of last night:—

SIMLA, April 22.

Lord Clyde will return to England by the first steamer in June from Calcutta.

The Governor-General to Sir C. Wood.

"I shall leave Simla for Calcutta on the 7th of May."

A disturbance at Peshawur respecting taxes, but founded on a misapprehension, has been greatly exaggerated by the newspapers. All is quiet, and the people satisfied.

BENGAL.

A NEW SANITARIUM FOR THE NORTH-WEST.

A year has not elapsed since the committee appointed to inquire into the best means for the promotion of European settlement in the hill districts of India gave in their report to the House of Commons. With the exception of a certain vagueness which could not well be avoided, that report was calculated to have an important effect. Public opinion did not require to be directed so much as to be informed, and the varied evidence collected was sufficient for that purpose. Lord Stanley was in power long enough to extend guarantees to several companies, and to begin a revolution in the tenure of land. The liberal members of the House who looked upon India as a field for the growth of cotton, or the spread of Christianity, were furnished at once with arguments and information which were irresistible. The numerous facts elicited, and the different opinions called forth by the committee, led to a display of interest and a show of activity which promised the best results. Compared with that promise the results may now seem trifling. The courts are still unreformed, freeholds except in a few spots impossible, the roads few and uselessly bad, and the cultivation of the chief staples only talked about. There is a little more coal, which there are not railway trucks enough to distribute, a little more tea, which cannot get to a market but with difficulty, a little more iron, which lies useless round the smelting furnaces. The only real activity shown has been in Madras, where the local authorities have encouraged the hill settlements and striven to discover new sanitarium which may attract European capital. Freeholds at a cheap rate are possible in the Neilgherries, there are good roads shortly to be connected with the railway; the contract law between the capitalist and labourer has been thrown over the hill districts as well as the Presidency town. The parts of the Ghauts, both eastern and western, hitherto unvisited, are being explored, and as the first fruit Vizagapatam has now its sanitarium at Galikonda.

Far finer than these Ghauts, are the slopes of the Himalayas. Although in possession of Northern India for half a century, we have left their resources undeveloped. Here and there, at very far distant intervals, our military necessities have forced us to establish hill settlements. From Cherrapoonjee on the east to Simla on the west we have as yet only five hill stations. Of these, Cherrapoonjee and Darjeeling in the eastern section are comparatively unhealthy, from the heavy rains, and, in the case of the former, from an unfortunate selection of site. Even with the railway it is a three days' journey to reach it from Calcutta, and the distance in point of time in the case of Cherrapoonjee is greater than from London. On the western section of the Himalayas, stretching from the Kalee river, the boundary of Nepaul, there are the three stations of Nainee Tal, Mussoorie, and Simla. If to these we add Murree for the Punjab, we have a series of only six settlements on the fertile and health-giving slopes of hills which stretch along and form our frontier for 1,500 miles. The stations are distributed at unequal distances, and are not easily reached by roads. They were chiefly obtained from the hill chiefs by an exchange of territory, and whether looked at in a commercial or military aspect, are annually increasing in value to the empire, in importance to the capitalist. Cherrapoonjee is accessible to the troops and settlers of Assam, Darjeeling may with delay be reached by those of lower and eastern Bengal, while the far North West from Bareilly to Peshawur is provided for by the other four.

But between Nainee Tal and Darjeeling there is the long Nepaul frontier of 700 miles. This skirts the districts of Purneah, Bhagulpore, Tirhoot, Sarun, Goruckpore and Oude. We need, on mere military grounds, a sanitarium there. At present invalids from these districts are drafted off, at all seasons of the year, to Darjeeling. The transit through Bhagulpore and Purneah is effected, especially during the rains, at a great sacrifice of life. We need, too, a force in reserve for Goruckpore and Oude. The spot which would meet every object lies seventy miles due north of Goruckpore. It is reached through the Nyakote Pass, past Bootwul, known for Colonel Kelly's encounters with the rebels at this time last year. The road lies through an open, well-cultivated country, with but one insignificant river. The belt of jungle, which elsewhere is from ten to fifteen miles broad, there becomes four. Beyond the first range of hills, and just opposite the Pass, there is a fertile valley, five miles broad, and then a range of hills and table land some 6,000 feet high. A sanitarium established on this plateau would be 215 miles from Dinapore or Benares, 220 from Lucknow, and 250 from Allahabad. The roads from these places meet at Lotun, where the last embers of the rebellion were trampled out by Brigadier Holditch last January. Thence there is a fair road to Bootwul, the great line of communication between West Nepal and the Gangetic provinces. The Terai has just been made over to Jung Bahadoor. We fear it is too late to ask that plateau in exchange, but we might purchase it with other jungle territory. It was thus we obtained Simla in 1819 from the rajahs of Puttiala and Keonthal.

There is one danger, however, attaching to all hill stations which should never be forgotten. Admirable as depots for troops and centres for capital, they become most noxious when they tempt officials to forget that their post of duty is in the plains. India must be governed from Calcutta, not Simla, the Presidencies from the cities, not the hills. There is more truth than exaggeration in the saying, that if ever we lose India, it will be owing to Simla.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ALLAHABAD, March 24.—H.M. 70th arrived here this morning on their way to the Presidency, 800 strong, with many women and children. On their arrival they found to their amazement and disgust that a telegram had just been received from the officer commanding the Benares Division recommending their detention till further orders. We have now three regiments of the line quartered here for the present; H.M. 70th and 75th, and the greater part of the 49th, including artillery, close on 2,700 European troops. Sick-ness is beginning to abate, but cholera is still prevalent. Captain Wymess Smith has taken up his appointment of cantonment magistrate in place of Captain Allan, who proceeds to Agra in the like capacity. Brigadier Fordyce arrived a week ago; he resides for the present at Durrant's Hotel. Brigadier Sherer and family passed through to Agra two days since. All our big-wigs seem leaving us. Mr. Reade, now nearly the father of the Civil Service, retires for good a week hence. Mr. Thornhill, our commissioner, goes home immediately, but is expected to return. Mr. Lodwick, civil auditor, returns to Bombay in consequence of Mr. Corfield's transfer to Calcutta.

BALLIA FACTORY, March 22.—I beg to inform you that, yesterday morning, in the attack made by the ryots on the Ballia Factory two men were killed and five wounded; the bodies of the two killed were this day removed to Berhampore, and the wounded are still in the Mofussil, but will follow them afterwards. Mr. P. Lyall was alone in the factory when the ryots attacked it. Mr. Lyall being alarmed called the assistance of a steamer passing; the commander, on seeing the crowd on shore, stopped the engine, and came with muskets to the rescue. One ryot, by name Goloomee, snatched a gun from Mr. Lyall, but Gocool Sing, a servant of the factory, wounded the above Goloomee with a tangee or axe, when Mr. Lyall, the captain, and others of the steamer, in self-defence commenced to fire with ball, by which two of the insurgents were killed and five wounded; of these, three or four belong to Mohadebar, Saccoparah of Uncoorah Factory in Gazeenagore. About 1,000 ryots of the village Kalapancee with clubs and weapons, with one Lall Chand at their head, came to assist the ryots of Ballia in the attack. When they attacked the factory there were about one hundred and fifty men, and shortly afterwards they amounted to about 1,500 to 2,000 from the adjoining villages, but on seeing their friends fall they retreated. The assistant magistrate of Jungypore has come up to the Ballia factory where the affray took place, and is investigating the case. Mr. Lyall, jun., to prove the assault of the ryots, has detained the captain and others of the steamer to give evidence before the magistrate, when they will leave for their destination. Mr. Lyall has applied to Mr. Wood, the assistant commissioner of Rajmahal, to investigate, since a letter had come to light wherein it clearly shows that the ryots about Ballia and Nimtolah factory have all agreed to act against the factories; the papers concerning this affair were forwarded to Rajmahal when about 200 of the ryots attacked the peons and destroyed the papers. Mr. Wood has arrived, and 10 Goorkha sepoys are on their way to Ballia to arrest the parties concerned. The deputy-magistrate of Iremarree has sent a Jemadar and 10 Burkundazes to keep the peace.—Englishman.

AN INDIAN RAILWAY.—The North-west journals periodically complain of the disgraceful management of the Allahabad and Cawnpore line of railway. The complaints are not without foundation. There is an absence of European superintendence. Drunken soldiers and railway employes are allowed to travel without check, and drunken engineers not unfrequently to drive the engine. At the termini all seems desolation. Native clerks, who are ignorant of English, give out the tickets, refuse to receive Bank notes in payment, and force passengers to weigh their own baggage and see it put in the van. At Berhampore, the half-way station, one master has to attend to two trains, coming in on a single line of rails at the same time from opposite directions. The carriages are filthy, and at night rarely supplied with lamps. No lady dare travel by the night train. Every traveller who is forced to avail himself of it reaches his destination at the rate of twelve miles an hour. Complaint, when it is possible to find out a European authority, produces only drunken insolence. Such was our experience on two occasions.—Friend of India.

LAHORE, March 27.—We are threatened with an irruption of Singhs. The Rajah of Puttiala is, for the first time in his life, about to visit Lahore. It has been a point of honour with himself and his ancestors not to do so before; the Sikhs pretending to look on him as a dependent, an imputation which he and his family have steadily resisted. He comes attended by some six or seven thousand followers, and is to stop at Umritsur for a few days, to initiate his son in the mysteries of Sikhism, the preliminary ceremonies having been performed at Nundpore. Sir Robert Montgomery returned several days ago, from his trip to Sealkote, and is deeply engaged in the arrangements for the new system of taxation, which is, we hear, to be inaugurated by a grand proclamation now preparing (and probably issued by this time) by our late Commissioner, Mr. Richard Temple.

INDIAN LITIGATION.—The great Paul Chowdry case has advanced a stage. In one shape or other it has occupied the courts for the last forty years. The right of Mr. A. B. Mackintosh to estates in Nuddea, Jessore, and the twenty-four pergunnahs, yielding Rs. 40,000 a-year, was lately decided in the local courts. The native defendants who have been fighting so long, and have not the shadow of right, will still appeal to the Sudder, and then to the Privy Council. And then only a fifth of the whole case will be decided! The Paul Chowdry suits are not fully understood, we believe, by more than two men now living, and have in them more of the elements of romance than any which ever occupied Chancery for a century.

SLAVES IN AFGHANISTAN.—A Peshawar missionary gives the following account of Kaffir slaves in Afghanistan:—"Every man of property has some, among the Barukzias, the clan to whom the present ruling family belongs; all the confidential servants are Kaffir slaves, and young Kaffir boys are kept to attend on the females in the harems. The price varies from Rs. 40 to Rs. 500. Girls are sold by the span; fine strong ones of good looks bring as much as Rs. 100 a span, and there are instances of some having been sold for their weight in silver. They are said to be very handsome. They are usually captured through the agency of Nimchas, which is a designation of Kaffirs who have been made Muhammadans, or their descendants." The Kaffirs inhabit a district of the Sufeid Koh hills which bound the Cabul valley on the south. Their features and language point them out as an Aryan race.

THE ANDAMAN ISLANDS.—In January last a boat from the S. S. Sesostri was sent ashore on the Andaman Island, to the south of Port Blair, for water; one of the guard of the watering party incautiously went into the jungle, when he was immediately attacked by the savages and severely wounded, the guard fired upon them and wounded one native, who was immediately carried off by the savages, and they contrived to wound two men of the guard besides the first. The Superintendent of Port Blair reports that the savages are quite untractable, and look upon all the rest of mankind as their enemies. The Governor-general has ordered that the aborigines are not to be meddled with except in self-defence, and that the lands around Port Blair should be cultivated, so that the colonists should no longer be dependent on other countries for their supply of grain.

A DRUNKEN MAGISTRATE.—In his evidence before the Colonisation Committee Mr. A. Forbes mentioned the case of a civilian who was habitually drunk, but was not dismissed the service. Sir John Lawrence, afterwards examined, objected to such a statement when not accompanied by the name of the culprit. The Hurkaru now gives his name, Mr. Limond, joint magistrate of Backergunge, since dead from the effects of intemperance. In October last the Lieutenant Governor became aware of Mr. Limond's character. He was in the habit of deciding cases without taking the trouble to comprehend them, in such a way as to prevent appeal. Mr. Grant very properly censures Mr. Davidson, the commissioner of Decca, and Mr. Alexander, the magistrate of Backergunge, Mr. Limond's immediate superiors, for not representing his conduct to the proper authorities. "The Lieutenant Governor must hold the commissioner of the division specially responsible for not having brought this blot in the administration of his division to notice. But for the inquiry ordered by Government it is impossible to say how long, or in what higher offices, Mr. Limond might not have continued to betray justice."

THE BANK OF BENGAL has caused no little irritation in Calcutta by refusing to cash notes the numbers of which, not their values, had been altered. Several cases of this kind have recently occurred. In one, the third Judge of the Small Cause Court decided that the bank were not bound to pay. The reason assigned was that the numbers of both halves of the note were illegible, that probably they were halves of different notes the value of which had been already paid under a bond of indemnity. To compel the bank to pay in such a case would be to induce fraudulent holders of lost halves to use them in obtaining payment a second time. It rests with the bank to take proper precautions against forgery. In any case the bank are such gainers by the loss or tear and wear of their circulation that payment would have been at least politic in the present case.

THE MINTS.—In the month of February the Calcutta Mint received from Government in bullion or coin Rs. 4,89,537, and from merchants Rs. 21,28,917, and coined Rs. 41,33,482. The Madras Mint received respectively Rs. 246, and Rs. 304,502, and coined Rs. 3,11,875; while the Bombay Mint received from merchants Rs. 27,90,972, and coined Rs. 16,98,000.

MONGHYR, March 16.—Of news from this I have little to record, and that not of a very cheering character. The season is now getting hot, but the nights are cool, and yet sickness is very rife among my people. One of my servants is now dying outside my tent, and the lamentations of his wife are interrupting my letter to you. Along the line in some places cholera has broken out, and the terrified coolies are deserting the works by hundreds. The sick are usually left to die on the roads of hunger and thirst; or else, if very weak, are eaten alive, the first night by jackals. One poor darogah I picked up and carried to camp, but he died in spite of my efforts the next day, though he relished the grog I administered to him vastly. The worst is that I do not see how any law or enactment of Government in a wild country could prevent this cruel practice of deserting the sick. The sick man is deserted, dies, and is eaten to the bone in the course of 24 hours, and who is the wiser? This much I know from personal observation, that the coolies on the railway stand in as much, if not more, need of protection and an agency, as those who embark for the Mauritius. However, it will work its own cure; for, as labour becomes scarce, it will rise in value; and I greatly fear that the large mortality of the last few years among the railway coolies will much delay the work. I was yesterday pitched in a pretty valley, miles from any village; and on one side, the hills, clothed with a burning forest, afforded a most magnificent spectacle at night. The jungles are burnt in order to encourage the growth of the new grass on which the cattle feed. In spite of the flames, which were but a few hundred yards off, a hyena kept about the camp; and one evening managed to kill a goat. Tigers in these hills are very numerous, but usually confine their depredations to cattle. It is only old tigers with no teeth who are driven to become man-eaters, and they become so from that circumstance; that is, generally speaking.—Englishman.

THE KOOKIES.—We (Englishman) have received the following authentic information regarding the inroad of the Kookies of Tipperah into the British territories. Bands of men led by Keshen Chunder Thakoor, Mudoo Churn Thakoor, Oody Churn Thakoor, and Prakit Sonaputee, attacked villages belonging to the British and the Tipperah Rajah, destroying all before them; they burned thirteen villages and plundered fifteen more, killing men, women, and children, and much cattle; 185 bodies had been found, but many more were lying in the jungles. It is ascertained that they carried off upwards of five hundred human beings into captivity, and all the cattle they could manage. The magistrate of Tipperah having succeeded in getting the aid of troops from Dacca, confidence was beginning to be restored, and people were returning to their villages. The ringleaders are relatives of the rajah of independent Tipperah, who are at feud with him, and who have been banished from the rajah's territories. They joined the Kookies in order to revenge themselves by bringing upon him the displeasure of the British authorities. The rajah's condition is that normal state so well described by our Lahore correspondent, a condition of debt and impecuniosity. He is not able to provide a sufficient number of men to protect his own States or to prevent such horrible raids as the one which has just occurred. The Government of India must interfere, and the object of the malcontents will to some extent be obtained. It is to be hoped, however, that they will not altogether escape that punishment they so richly deserve.

DELHI, March 25.—Since my last there has been very little stirring, excepting dust and hot wind, in Delhi. I may, however, add another exception, and that is, our esteemed deputy commissioner, Mr. P. H. Egerton, who left for Umritsir a few days ago. May his shadow (a tolerably long one at sunset) never diminish! Mr. Plowden is to act as deputy commissioner until the "right man in the right place" arrives; but rumour with her thousand tongues has not yet taken upon herself to list his name. Whoever he is, it is to be hoped he will bring with him a stock of good health and powers of endurance, for he will find the office no sinecure. We have had a sprinkling of notables through the station of late, most of whom are homeward bound. Mr. Thornton, judicial commissioner of Lahore, is still here: Captain Cripps, deputy commissioner of Ferozepore (the hero of Googaira), and Captain Lewin, among them. The Postmaster-general N. W. P. is still here; may his visit be a long one, and fraught with good to the letter-writing community. I hope he will travel from this to Simla and put the dawks and dawk bungalows in order as he progresses. Writing of Simla, the Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief will be at Kalka about the 5th April, and I don't suppose they will remain at the foot of the hills for any length of time. Lord W. Hay, deputy commissioner of Simla, was to have left on the 21st current to meet and escort his distinguished visitors to their mountain homes, where, rumour has it, great preparations are being made for their reception, by the house proprietors they have patronised. The Commissariat slaughter-house outside the city was destroyed by fire the night before last. The fire was, I believe, accidental, but it a curious fact that Government buildings generally catch fire quicker than those of the natives. I suppose some inquiry into the cause will be instituted. The Commissariat beer has failed, I am sorry to say, and what the troops will do nobody can tell; they can't get on without beer, so I suppose some speedy arrangement will be made to supply the deficiency. The weather is waxing hot daily—sickness on the increase. Every second person one meets has a Delhi sore somewhere or other; and so fully persuaded are people of their incurable nature, and that the doctors can only experimentise upon them, that no one applies to a medical man for relief. Has it ever occurred to the medical men of Delhi that the wells inside the city may possibly require purification? It is a known fact that, as soon as it became known that the British troops were inside the Cashmere Gate, the inmates of many a zenana threw themselves down wells to escape what they imagined a worse fate at the hands of the conquerors. Independent of this, many of the wounded were flung into wells during the last days of the siege; and it is equally well known that those wells, excepting those suspected of concealing treasure, have never been dragged or in any way cleansed. Putting that and that together, do you not think that a guess at the cause of these terrible sores might be made, and a remedy found? It is a curious fact that many old residents who live in Delhi, though not living in the city before the outbreak, who never suffered before from this scourge, are now completely crippled, hands and feet. The Mahomedans are up to their old tricks. A Persian work was submitted lately to the proprietor of the Indian Punch printing-office for publication. That gentleman submitted it to the deputy-commissioner, who pronounced it "not to be printed," as it advocated the total extinction of Christians, and by him it was forwarded to the commissioner. Nothing but this prohibition is the result! In my opinion the man who tried to get it published should be severely punished. The murderer of the Thanadar, in Chitlee Kubbar, has been convicted and sentenced to be transported for life. To Mr. Murphy, extra assistant-commissioner, the credit of capture, trial and committal of the murderer is due.—Englishman.

ADVANTAGES OF FOREIGN TRAVEL.—The Englishman says so great a craving for flesh has seized the convicts in the Andamans that even Brahmans have been caught stealing poultry. Government has accordingly ordered a large supply of cattle particularly goats, to be sent for the use of the settlement. The natives luxuriate on pigs, but that is a step too great for either Hindoo or Mahomedan at present. The sepoys of the three Poorbenh regiments in China have always been in the habit of bartering their surplus supply of rice for animal food.

THE CHUTTER MUNZIL in Lucknow, the palace occupied by the Kings of Oude previous to the erection of the Kaiser Bagh some years ago, has been divested of the marks it bore of the capture of the city, and fitted up as assembly-rooms. Colonel Seymour and the officers of the Bays gave the first ball which it has witnessed to the residents on the 22nd March. Two years ago the Chutter Munzil was a stronghold of the rebel court.

H.M.'s 60TH R.R.—The governor-general publicly acknowledges in the Gazette the services of the 1st battalion of H.M.'s 60th Royal Rifles under orders for England. The regiment landed at Bombay in October, 1845. In 1848 it went through the campaign of the Punjab, was present at the capture of Mooltan, at the battle of Goozerat, and in operations against the tribes on the Peshawur frontier. It was at the siege of Delhi and Bareilly, and participated in the final operations in Oude. Lord Canning "assures its officers and men that the estimation in which their services are held by the Government of India confirms to the full the respect and admiration with which they are universally regarded."

THE PUNJAB.—The Gazette notifies the changes in the Punjab administration consequent on the departure for England of Mr. Thornton, judicial commissioner, and for the Hyderabad assigned districts of Mr. C. B. Saunders.—Mr. A. A. Roberts, judicial commissioner; Mr. R. N. Cust, financial ditto; Mr. P. N. Egerton, commissioner, Umritsur; Capt. F. R. Pollock, ditto, Rawul Pindee; Capt. U. N. Cox, deputy commissioner, ditto; Lieut. Minchin, ditto, Dera Ismael Khan.

DIJHALL KHAN, the grandson of Dost Mahomed, is now at Constantinople, on a visit to the Porte. The visit is private, the Levant Herald says, and occasioned by a quarrel with his father, Akhbar Khan. Dost Mahomed is now so old that the movements of his family have some political interest.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, April 9).—There has been a continuance of inactivity in the Produce Market during the last fortnight. Few ships were loading. Raw Silk: Notwithstanding the unfavourable accounts from home, parcels of fair qualities have been engaged on arrival at the extreme prices last quoted. Silk Piece Goods: The extreme prices on the raw materials have induced holders to become firm; but shippers will not operate unless at reduction. Cotton has been in limited shipment for China. Supplies are arriving gradually, and prices are looking down. Saltpetre: In consequence of some purchasers having entered the market at a time when stocks are generally low and supplies short, owing to the unavailing state of the rivers, prices of all qualities have taken an upward tendency. Shell Lac has been in good demand, but supplies are very light. Some shippers are eagerly buying whatever they can get at advanced prices. Oil Seeds: Linseed has been effected to some extent by the high rates of freights, and as most of the English shippers are operating very sparingly, prices are on the decline, though they have not gone down to that extent which was expected; the stocks in the Bazaar being light. Good Palma is now at Rs. 2-9 to 2-12. Rape Seed: Though the new seed has commenced arriving, no business has yet been reported for shipment. The only purchasers are the local crushers at 2-10 to 2-12 which are the ruling rates. Oils: Castor Oil has continued to engage inquiry for Great Britain and other places, and we quote present price at Rs. 10-8 to 11-12. All other descriptions scarcely shipped; but they are in steady local demand. Hides and Skins: Good cow green's slaughter-hides continue in fair request for Great Britain; but little has been done for other places. Horns have continued in fair request at full former prices. Jute and Hemp: Jute has continued to show the same attention as before, and a steady business has been done at full former value. Good qualities are gradually getting scarce and command extreme prices. Present quotations are good picked at Rs. 16. Low to middling at Rs. 12 to 14 per bale. Borax and Tincal have been in limited request, and prices have had no change. Farmerie: A limited business has been done, and we quote price at Rs. 2-12 to 2-15.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, April 9).—Business has been much curtailed by increased tightness of money, closing of the native commercial year, and the total wreck of one of the Ganges Company's inland steamers, the Mirapore, proceeding up with a valuable cargo of Piece Goods. The market generally has been very quiet. We do not, however, report any fall in prices, as fortunately imports during the last fortnight have not been large, and further supplies to hand are expected to be light. The stocks in the hands of importers being rather moderate, holders have shown some firmness, which have tended to maintain prices. Little business done during the past fortnight for Dacca, Moorsheadabad, and other marts in Lower Bengal. In Mule Twist little has been done for local requirement. Little or nothing has gone out of Calcutta, as there are no buyers from the districts; prices show no change. In Metals the market continues dull; sales are very limited, and confined to local speculation.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LADY TREVELYAN has introduced a most sensible reform into the laws which govern English society in India. In consequence of the heat of the season, her time for the reception of visitors at Guindy, is fixed at between 9 and 11 in the evening. Were Lady Canning to sanction a similar arrangement, it would reform a most tyrannical law. Sunset or evening and not noon should be the "calling" hour.

VACCINATION.—In Madras, the number of persons vaccinated since 1855 is as follows:—1855, 410,372; 1856, 381,562; 1857, 363,740; 1858, 358,726. The local authorities seem to feel regret that the Government of India will not sanction the enforcement of vaccination by law, but find consolation in the fact that all candidates for the uncovenanted service must produce a certificate that they have either had small pox, or have been vaccinated. Why not go the whole length of Denmark, where a certificate of vaccination is necessary before marriage?

BELLARY.—A Brahmin, calling himself Ashtan-danalo, or some such name, has lately been exhibiting at Bellary extraordinary powers of memory; he is able simultaneously to concentrate his attention on twelve or more different subjects. He performed the other day before a large audience of influential natives of the place, and gave proof of a truly wonderful scope of memory. At this exhibition he played two games of chess and one of cards without looking at the boards. While thus engaged, verses in Tamil, Telugu, Marhatta, Hindustani, Persian, and Sanscrit were dictated to him; the words of each verse being given promiscuously, but with the number of their order. The Hindu Calendar for three days was at the same time read to him; a bell was struck, and several small pebbles were thrown at his back. The above occupied about three hours, after which he remained perfectly silent for one hour, and then, to the intense amazement of all present, he named every one of the moves on the chess-boards, every card played, and by whom, repeated all the verses correctly, with the words in proper order, gave the calendar verbatim, and to crown all, told the number of strokes on the bell, and how many pebbles had touched his back. This man has been exhibiting his powers of memory in Bombay, Poona, and other places, and holds among other testimonials, one from Lord Elphinstone.

THE RAILWAY.—The Madras Times brings some serious accusations against the management and the employes of the Madras Railway. If true they account for the fact that the Railway, with largely increased traffic owing to reduced fares, still pays no better than it did with its former prohibitory charges. Until lately there has been no proper supervision in the receipt and delivery of stores and materials. Cash was regularly paid without checks or vouchers. On every district of twenty-five miles there are three engineers and a resident engineer, who have nothing to do. There are "frauds in every form and of every phase, frauds against sample, frauds in measurement, frauds in addition, subtraction, and multiplication, frauds in coolie hire, and in bandy hire, frauds in iron and steel, in tents, timber, and gunny bags, in paints, paper, and wheel-grease. Everything that is touched is tainted with fraud." The official atmosphere of Madras seems heavy with fraud and insouciance combined. The military commission will make strange revelations of wasteful expenditure in other departments than the railway.

PENSIONS AND TITLES.—On the 3rd of last November Colonel Arthur Cotton brought to the notice of Government the claims of V. Virannah Garoo, "who has been the right hand of all the officers who have had charge of the works in the Godavery Delta." He recommended that a title of honour should be conferred upon him, and that an absolute grant of land, free of all demands, to be settled for ever on him and his heirs, whether direct or adopted, should be made. These recommendations were strongly supported by the Madras Government, and the Secretary of State, on the 8th February, approved of "a grant of land of the annual value of Rs. 500" being assigned to sub-engineer Virannah. The necessary arrangements are to be made for making over the land, and measures will be taken in the Public Department "for the bestowal on Virannah of a suitable title of honour." M. Rungah Carloo, sheristadar of the district of South Arcot, is likewise to have a pension and title bestowed upon him. It appears from a minute by Mr. Morehead that he was undoubtedly "the person who effected the revision of South Arcot." He has been 41 years in the service of Government. The Madras Government recommended that a pension for life to the full amount of his salary (Rs. 700 per mensem), with a reversion of Rs. 100 per mensem to his grand-nephew and heir for his life should be bestowed. The Secretary of State, on the 20th January, "had no hesitation in confirming the rewards" proposed by the Madras Government; and "entirely approved" of the bestowal of a suitable title upon M. Rungah Carloo.

REDEMPTION OF THE LAND TAX.—With regard to the redemption of the land tax on the Neilgherries, Government on the 16th of March observed as follows:—"On the questions raised by the board in their proceedings, the Government resolved to direct that where a proprietor of land in any of the Nilgiri Stations desires to redeem the land tax on it, whether the land shall have been obtained from Government or from a 'native Pattadar,' he shall be permitted to do so at the rate of the tax or quit rent then actually payable, without reference to any contingent liability to the higher rate of tax on one kani, on his erecting a house." Colonel Faber and Mr. Knop have redeemed the land tax on their property at Ootacamund. In submitting the title deeds to Government the Board of Revenue said:—"Mr. Thomas requests the orders of the Board as to whether the above amounts should include the quit rent due for 1859, the applicants having submitted their requests before the close of that year, but not having as yet paid the money into the treasury, and states his opinion that until the date of its payment they are liable to the quit rent, independently of the twenty years' purchase money. The rules do not specifically provide for cases of this kind, but it seems to the Board that the claim of Government to quit rent or assessment ceases only from the date on which the purchase money is paid or deposited with the collector, and that when redemption takes place in the course of a year the quit rent or assessment should be ratably distributed over the whole year and demanded for the broken period preceding redemption." Government on the 17th observed that the view taken by the Board was correct, and desired that all collectors might be instructed accordingly.

THE EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT AND THE VERNACULARS.—The following is an extract from a despatch from the Secretary of State for India (dated the 22nd December) on this subject:—"It should henceforth be made imperative upon all Europeans appointed to the Educational Department to pass within a given period an examination which shall prove that they possess a sufficient colloquial knowledge of the vernacular language of the district in which they are employed, failing which their services should be dispensed with. All persons now employed in the department should be required to satisfy the director of public instruction within a given period that they possess such a knowledge. The pecuniary rewards should only be given for highly distinguished acquirements in the native languages. Ordinary colloquial acquaintance with them is indispensably necessary to the efficient performance of their duties by those who are employed in the department of education, and must be insisted upon by Government." The director of public instruction has been requested to give effect to these orders.

PROGRESS OF CIVILIZATION.—An action for breach of promise of marriage was lately brought before the Subordinate Judge of Ootacamund for the first time in a Mofussil Court. Miss Amelia Wright, the young lady, obtained a verdict of Rs. 5,000 damages, with costs amounting to 1,000 more, against a Mr. William Chambers. The details of the suit are not published.

JUBBULPORE, March 16.—On the march of the 3rd Madras European Regiment to Jaulnah, cholera had attacked the camp. Captain Dancy had fallen a victim to the epidemic, and 10 other officers and 20 men had been carried off in 24 hours. [The above extract, taken from the Englishman, is evidently erroneous. Instead of "carried off" we should probably read "attacked" —A.T.M.]

EDUCATIONAL CHARGES.—During 1858-59 the sum expended on education in the Madras Presidency was Rs. 508,151, being an increase of upwards of a lakh on the preceding year. Of this sum Rs. 40,354 was given as grants-in-aid. The annual cost of educating each pupil in the Presidency and other Government Colleges, was:—

	Students.	Rs. each.
" Law " .....	15 .....	219 10 0
Zillah Schools each .....	170 .....	42 11 8
Lower " .....	67 .....	5 8 4
Normal School .....	569 .....	86 10 7
Industrial School, Agricultural Dept. ....	70 .....	48 13 6
Industrial Dept. ....	40 .....	330 0 0

As these figures are exclusive of the amount paid in fees, the cost to the State of each pupil is about half that in Calcutta.

BOMBAY.

BREWING IN INDIA.

In the year ending April 30, 1859, malt liquor valued by the Customs at Rs. 10,71,611 was imported into Bombay alone from the United Kingdom. Everybody drinks beer. The strong and healthy drink it "to keep up their strength;" the ailing, to be made stronger; many, because they "really can't do without it;" more, because (whatever they may say) they like it. It is the prop of both gentle and simple, benedicts and bachelors, maids, wives, and widows. Of the fair sex, some get it from the canteen, and seeing no need of apology do not attempt one, but refresh forthwith from the pewter. Others pay court to it at dinner-time alone, to exorcise a certain "sinking," and in public eschew the very name, however more grateful than an ice the malt might be. We are a beery people, and in India the beverage is a pukka "institution." Yet it is all imported, and, as we have said, to the tune of very big figures, which represent, we may add, a hundred and sixty thousand gallons! If we could brew this ourselves, now, we should probably do so at half the price we pay, or, in other words, we might drink double as much for the same money—which is probably what the reform would amount to.

The experiment of brewing in India has been tried, and not unsuccessfully. Some twelve years ago, Captain John Ouchterlony, in a "Statistical Memoir of a Survey of the Neilgherry Mountains," gave the result of his experience in the matter, gained on those hills. He had brewed several casks without a single failure in malting, fermentation, or fining; and the testimony in favour of the beverage being unanimous, he addressed the commissary-general on the subject, offering to carry on further trials at his own expense, if only a copper could be lent him from the Commissariat stores. "I was not so fortunate," he mildly says, "as to receive a reply to this letter, beyond a message through a third party; and this absence of encouragement prevented me from following the matter further; but for my own use I continue the manufacture, with a success which convinces me that it is only necessary to extend the scale upon which my operations are carried, and to secure practical knowledge in the more important details of the process, to ensure the most complete realization of my anticipations." The beer brewed by Capt. Ouchterlony was of the following strength—

6 bushels of barley..... } per hogshead.
72 lbs. sugar .....
7 lbs. hops (from England)

It was calculated, allowing for the inferiority of hill malt to English malt, that this beer was of equal strength with that brewed at home for the tropics. The entire cost (materials, fuel, labour, and sundries) was somewhat less than eight annas per imperial gallon.

But an experiment threatens us now that will throw both past and present, if it succeeds, into the shade. A proposition is before Government from a gentleman who is no stranger to India, having for its object "the supply of all India with a better ale than I ever saw sold out of canteen at 2d. per bottle." The Bombay Government is in possession of all the details, and we are happy to learn that there is every disposition to forward the scheme if the Home Government decide, as we hope they will, that it shall have a trial. The projector professes to be independent of temperature, and would brew between November and February, at a temperature of 40° Fahrenheit. There is no limit to the quantity that could be made at one time, and there would be no occasion for any opening of a cask, once bunged, until it arrived at its destination. The reopening of the arrivals from England, and consequent exposure to the air, results, we need hardly say, in great loss. The projector has been most open in his proposals, offering to go over his plan step by step with any party or parties whom Government may appoint, and he would also instruct a Government servant on every point of the manufacture. He asks, in return, for a contract for two years, thereafter surrendering his rights to Government, who would make, he has shown, a million sterling per annum by the monopoly. Before long we hope to be able to say more on the subject. What we have now said will attract, we suppose, some attention, both here and at home—consumers and brewers looking at the matter with very different eyes.—Bombay Times.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, March 30.—The London mail of the 10th February arrived here on the 24th.

A number of vessels have arrived, since the despatch of last mail, with troops belonging to the British expeditionary force, but no troops from France have yet arrived. Sir Hope Grant still remains here, but leaves for Shanghai shortly; and it is understood that Chusan will soon be occupied by the Allied force, if the Chinese refuse the ultimatum.

Nothing has transpired as to what answer the Chinese Government has made to the moderate demands which Lord John Russell, in his despatch of November 10th, directed Mr. Bruce to make upon it, but there is a general conviction that it will not condescend to make a full apology, and that it is prepared to enter on war. The ultimatum was only given, we are informed, to the Chinese authorities on the 8th of this month, so at least a week must elapse before an answer can be expected. Those who know most about what is going on in the neighbourhood of Peking, know best that they know little or nothing about the matter, and give no credit to the innumerable reports which are flying about.

A popular ferment has again been got up in Shanghai among the Chinese about the coolie trade, though there is not the slightest ground for it at present; and it appears to have been got up for political purposes.

A sound emigration system, however, through the exertions of the allied commanders and Commissioner Parkes, has been established at Canton, in conjunction with the Chinese authorities. We are also glad to be able to state that his Excellency the Governor of Macao has resolved to make great changes in the coolie trade as conducted at that place, and to approximate it as far as possible, to the Canton system. The trade is entirely closed for the season on the last day of this month, and Snr. Guimaraes, whose period of office has been continued for some time longer, has already given notice to the coolie brokers that it will not be re-opened except on conditions different from those on which it has hitherto been conducted.

A report has been current at Shanghai to the effect that there has been a collision between the Russians and Chinese, and that the former were on their way to Peking to claim indemnity for the massacre of a number of their own countrymen upon the Chinese frontier; but we attach little importance to it.

The accounts of the progress of the rebels are said to be exaggerated, and we can well believe it, as men's minds are at present in a most unsettled and timorous state. The report that the city of Hu-chau had fallen into the hands of the rebels, had been contradicted. Another baseless report is that Nankin had been retaken by the Imperialists.

From Japan the only intelligence is that the murder of the two Dutch captains, which we noticed in our last summary, was perpetrated in private revenge for the execution of three Japanese on the ground of complaints made by some Dutchmen resident at Yokohama. The foreign Consuls called on the Japanese authorities and demanded that every step should immediately be taken that would lead to the apprehension of the murderers, and this was eagerly promised by the authorities themselves. A guard of 25 men had been landed at Kanagawa, from a Russian corvette, for the protection of foreigners. The British minister at Jeddo is said himself to go about armed. It is very singular that while the Dutch and English have thus so much difficulty in getting on with the Japanese, the Americans appear to be on the most amicable terms with them. And it is specially remarkable that while our merchants are crying out that the Japanese wish to render the treaties inoperative, they themselves are rebuked by their own minister, and the Japanese give the most striking proof of their willingness to enter into relationship with foreign nations, by sending a high mission to the United States in an American steamer.

The trial of Captain Saunders of the barque Chin Chin for firing at and wounding some Chinamen on board a Customs' boat at Swatow, has been the exciting local subject of the fortnight, inasmuch as the new Customs' service, as well as Captain Saunders, was partly on its trial. The jury decided not only that Captain Saunders was not guilty, but also that "he was perfectly justified in resisting the armed boat." This verdict was received with great cheering by the audience in court. The judge's summing up was against the accused; and the enthusiasm with which the verdict was received proved the strong feeling existing against the new Customs' service as at present constituted and carried on. The owners of the Chin Chin have commenced an action against Mr. Lay, for delaying the voyage of their vessel, and have claimed 3,500 dols. damages.

The committee appointed to decide on the plans of water-works for this city, have awarded the prize of 1,000 dollars, offered by Sir Hercules Robinson, to Mr. Rawling, of the royal engineers, who has proposed the construction of a large reservoir at Pok-foo-lum, connected with two smaller ones above the Tai-ping-shan. His elaborate plans and report reflect the greatest credit on Mr. Rawling, and we are glad to learn that Sir Hercules Robinson, with his usual sagacity, has proposed that he should go home to purchase the necessary materials, and should afterwards superintend the execution of the works.

Another matter of local importance is the placing the peninsula of Chim-sa-tsoy, or the Kow-loong peninsula opposite Hong Kong, under the control of the British Government. It has been leased to them by the Governor-general of the two Kwang; and Colonel MacMahon of the 44th Regiment, having occupied it with the detachment under his command, has issued notice that no further settlers will be allowed to come there in future, and, while at the same time protection will be extended to all orderly people already located there, all thieves and outlaws will be proceeded against with severity if they attempt to conceal themselves within its limits.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, April 11.—During the fortnight we have had the unsettled weather of the little monsoon—some rain, and at Colombo strong wind and a heavy sea. The preparation and shipment of coffee have, of course, been hindered. Still the export of coffee is large. Seven ships have sailed:—six for London, and one for Falmouth. They took away 49,740 cwt. of coffee, in the proportions of 39,332 Plantation, and 10,415 Native. The weather now looks as if it would remain settled for a time, until the regular monsoon sets in about the beginning of May. There has been a good blossom over several of the coffee districts; but, except at the altitude of Newera Ellia, the complaint of oppressive heat is universal. This is our hottest season. If the rain does not hold off too long, the prospects for next crop are good. As regards the present crop, the exports of plantation to date are far in excess of previous years, but a falling off in native places our total export of coffee slightly below that to the same period last year.

The revenue of our Island for last year amounts to the unprecedented sum of £745,183, while the value of our imports deducting specie and bullion is £2,314,707. It may be instructive to compare these figures with the returns for 1839, when the great coffee enterprise was then only in its infancy. It appears that 20 years ago our revenue was only £372,013, while the expenditure exceeded that sum by £11,579. How different is our financial position now. The total expenditure exceeds £700,000, and yet a handsome surplus is left yearly in the public exchequer to be expended on "works of acknowledged public utility."

The total value of our trade in the concluding years of three decades, is as follows:—

	1839.	1849.	1859.
Exports .....	375,608	1,206,249	2,524,751
Imports .....	661,920	1,347,549	3,474,487
Total .....	£1,037,528	2,553,698	5,999,233

It will be seen that the trade of Ceylon has increased nearly sixfold in 21 years.

The Customs' revenue of 1859 reached the large figure of £223,870, of which £179,295 was derived from imports, while the exports yielded £37,849. This amount, compared with the receipts of 1858, shows an increase of £38,904. Ceylon is certainly advancing.

We are as yet without definite intelligence as to our railway, but all evidence points to a prosecution of the scheme. The first portion of the line, including a tramway from the terminus, along the lake side and (ultimately) to the Custom-house, is "progressing." Meantime a hot discussion has arisen as to the cost and chances of success of the irrigation works at Batticalao. The surveyor-general has proceeded thither in the Pearl; and the Governor, it is understood, will visit the works in July. The immigration scheme, seeing that it as yet presents itself to the community as a gigantic engine for collecting taxes, is, of course, intensely unpopular. But there are signs that next season it may be found really useful. In the Northern Circars, whither Captain Graham is about to proceed, numbers of coolies are reported available; and from the southern districts of the Madras Presidency Captain Graham believes that some 30,000 are ready to come. The worst of the matter is, that the steamers are not likely to be out from England in time. But probably sailing vessels will be, as much as possible, employed.

The pearl fishery has closed after yielding nearly £37,000 to the revenue. The confirmation by her Majesty of the new Kandian marriage law has been announced, and we suppose we shall speedily have what is so much wanted, a regular registration of births, marriages, and deaths, on the English model.

The appointment of so eminent a man as Mr. Creasy to the office of Chief Justice of the Colony has given much satisfaction here.—Ceylon Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

SINGAPORE, April 5.—Orders have recently been received for pushing on the completion of the barracks on Government hill, and steps are being taken for acquiring a large piece of ground about two miles from town, on which it is intended to form a cantonment for European troops. We should be glad to learn that similar measures were about to be taken for making this a permanent naval station. The central position of Singapore as a place of rendezvous seems to be recognised, but its utility would have been much increased had there been more adequate means for the refit and coaling of men-of-war and transports. The jetty which was taken from Mr. Clunis does not admit of vessels of large size going alongside of it, and they have therefore to be coaled in the stream or at any of the P. and O. Company's wharves.

JOHORE.—It is stated that 1,500 Chinese have been killed by tigers since the 1st of January, 1859, in the pepper and gambier districts. On one river alone 400 men were killed within fifteen months.

JAVA, March 27.—Lieut.-general van Swieten, Commander-in-chief of the second expedition against Boni, arrived at Batavia on the 16th March. On the 13th February a treaty between Holland and Boni was signed, by which the latter acknowledges the sovereignty of Holland, renounces all unjust claims on some parts of Celebes, and restores to the Government the islands of Bonerate and Kalao, formerly granted as fiefs to Boni—cedes a part of the kingdom of Boni to the Netherlands India Government, and gives further guarantees for continued quiet and peace. A separate act defines the territory ceded to the Government, consisting of the districts of Sinjai, Kajang, Old Bulekamba to the river Tangha, which forms the boundary on the north, and the islands Balunruce, Liang-liang, Kambow, Kading-aring, Poi-poi, Kanalo, Kanalo-dua, and Lanre-aurang. Possession of the islands of Bonerate and Kalao are resumed by the Dutch Government, these places having under Boni afforded asylum to pirates. The new King of Boni is to take up his residence at Tipulue, an islet near the mouth of the river Chinrana, and only separated by a small channel from the mainland. When the Commander-in-chief left Boni, the contracts with Wajo and Luwu had not been signed, but it was expected that they would ere long be concluded at Makassar. The news from Banjermassing is scanty. The following telegram, received by way of Surabaya, contains information to the 17th of March. The expedition to Kandangan against the party of Demang Lehman has been completely successful, with a loss of only a very few killed and wounded on our side. A position was afterwards taken up at Amawang. The Montrado was busy in the Kapuas repressing the symptoms of disaffection which showed themselves there. A landing division from the Montrado and Bali had taken a bunting in Sungi Kanamit, in effecting which a sergeant-major of infantry was killed. Reinforcements are being sent to Banjermassing, but three companies of the 13th battalion of infantry, which it was supposed were destined for that quarter, are, according to the Surabaya Oostpost, to be sent to the island of Flores.

Claim to Allowances by Capt. Fanshawe.

Financial Department, Fort William, March 21.—No. 22.—The following resolution is published for general information:—

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India, in the Financial Department, dated March 16, 1860.

Read a letter from the Government of the North-Western provinces, No. 124a, dated 17th ultimo, with enclosures, submitting for consideration and orders a question connected with the allowance of Captain Fanshawe, of the Post Office Department, and proposing a general rule to hold good in similar cases.

Read also a report from the civil auditor, Fort William, No. 825 of 29th ultimo, on the above subject.

Resolution.—Captain Fanshawe, who originally held the appointment of inspecting postmaster, Meerut division, was subsequently appointed postmaster and superintendent workshops at Allyghur, the salary of the two offices being however the same, viz., Rs. 400 each per mensem.

2. After his nomination to Allyghur, Captain Fanshawe also continued to discharge the duties of the Meerut division, and the question now submitted for consideration is, what allowance he is entitled to draw for performing the duties of two appointments.

3. Captain Fanshawe claims the full salary of his substantive and a moiety of the acting appointment, the claim being supported by the Postmaster-General, North-Western provinces.

4. The Agra civil auditor suggests that, as a general rule, to hold good in similar cases, when an officer holding a permanent appointment is required, by the exigencies of the State, to discharge the duties of another or second office (not subordinate to his own), he shall receive a moiety of the salary of the appointment in which he is officiating, in addition to the full salary of his own appointment, provided that no extra expense be entailed on the Government.

5. In submitting the case, the Government of the North-Western provinces remarks:—"As the Post Office Department is entirely under the control of the Government of India, the Lieut. Governor can give no decision on this question, but refers it to His Honor in Council for disposal, both as regards the particular case and the general suggestion."

6. On this reference the President in Council is pleased to approve the rule proposed by the Agra civil auditor in similar cases not otherwise provided for under the established rules, and also to direct that Captain Fanshawe's case be settled in accordance therewith.

Ordered that a copy of the foregoing resolution be sent to the Government of the North-Western provinces, in reply to the letter above adverted to.

Ordered also, that a transcript of the resolution be sent to the departments*, Governments†, and officers‡ noted in the margin, for information and guidance.

Ordered also, that the foregoing resolution be published in the Official Gazette for general information.

Camp Deenanuggur, March 17.—The 1st battalion of H.M.'s 60th Royal Rifles is about to embark at the Presidency to return to England.

H.E. the Governor general cannot allow this very distinguished regiment to leave the country without publicly acknowledging its services in India.

In October, 1845, the 1st battalion 60th Royal Rifles landed at Bombay, from England.

Towards the close of 1848 it formed part of the column of troops from the Presidency of Bombay which co-operated with the army of Bengal in the campaign of the Punjab. The battalion was engaged in the siege of Mooltan and in the capture of that fortress in January, 1849; at the battle of Goojerat in February of the same year; and in the brilliant pursuit of the fugitive hosts of Sikhs and Affghans which terminated in the establishment of the British Power at Peshawur.

While at Peshawur for a considerable period the battalion distinguished itself in several operations against the border tribes.

In 1857, soon after the breaking out of the late mutinies, the battalion was engaged in the important action on the Hindouin; and having joined the army before Delhi, its services were pre-eminent in the memorable siege and capture of that stronghold of the rebel forces.

The battalion subsequently formed part of the retreating column under Col. Sir J. Jones, which, marking its progress by successive victories over the rebels and mutineers, proceeded into Rohilcund and assisted in taking the city of Bareilly.

Subsequently the battalion participated in the final operations in Oude, directed and carried to a completely successful conclusion by the Right Hon. the C. in C.

But it is not more by the valour of its officers and men, conspicuous as that has been on every occasion, than by the discipline and excellent conduct of all ranks, during the whole of their services in India, that this regiment has distinguished itself. The Governor general tenders to the battalion his warmest acknowledgments for the high example it has set in every respect to the troops with which it has been associated in quarters as well as in the field; and he assures its officers and men that the estimation in which their services are held by the Government of India confirms to the full the respect and admiration with which they are universally regarded.

In bidding farewell to the battalion, the Governor general desires that it will accept his best wishes for the welfare of every officer and man belonging to it.

Military Account Books.

Hd. Qrs., Camp Sealkote, Feb. 29.—In continuation of G. O. of 15th October last, and under instructions from Government, the C. in C. is pleased to direct that officers commanding regiments shall consider it their imperative duty to see that the books of invalids, time-expired, and discharged men, proceeding to Europe, are regularly and properly posted up before they leave their corps; and that an extract from the regimental records, showing distinctly the men's claims, be prepared in duplicate, and one copy forwarded to the Fort adjutant, Fort William, and the other given to the officer taking charge of the soldiers.

2. H.E. is further pleased to enjoin that the account books in question shall on no pretence whatever be taken from the men, so that they may be able to produce them at any time for the inspection of the Fort adjutant, who, in the event of any officer commanding a corps neglecting to furnish him with the before-mentioned documents (or a corrected account if necessary), will include in his remittance roll the amount appearing in the soldiers' account book to be due to him, and recover from such officer so failing in his duty any difference in excess which may subsequently appear to exist between the amount entered in the account book and that shown in the regimental records to be at the soldier's credit.

3. The remittance rolls should include all moneys bona fide the property of the soldier, which he may desire to remit; and the usual certificates should in all cases be given to him.

The Law of Medical Certificate.

Fort William, March 21, 1860.—Notification.—The following extract from a despatch from the right hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 90 of 1859, dated Sept. 20, is published for general information:—

Para. 69. It appears from these papers that in a recent case where a servant had submitted, in support of his application to retire on a pension, a medical certificate* of his unfitness to continue to perform the duties of his office, the Bombay Government granted the applicant sick leave, pending a reference to the Home authorities.

70. This course your Government disapprove, and have decided that "when a servant on application for pension has been declared by the medical officer to be unfit for further service," he should at once be discharged, and that if a pension be subsequently granted, it should count from the dates specified in the Financial Resolution of Feb. 21, 1856, which laid down rules as to the commencement of pensionary allowances.

71. In cases in which a servant of Government may be discharged under the circumstances mentioned, her Majesty's Government consider that even if it be necessary to refer the question home for decision, it will be proper to allow the pension to commence from the date on which he ceased to be borne on the effective establishment.

Accidents on River Steamers.

Head Qrs., Camp Juggutpoora, March 20, 1860.—In consequence of the frequent occurrence of fatal accidents on board river steamers and flats conveying soldiers to and from Calcutta, the C. in C. is pleased to direct that when these vessels are employed to transport troops sentries shall invariably be posted on their decks to prevent the men from sitting on the rails or even approaching the sides, especially at night.

* Letter dated 23rd February, 1859, No. 29, paragraphs 359 to 361. Have informed the Government of Bombay that their ruling in respect to the grant of sick leave to servants who have applied for pension under medical certificate, is incorrect.

Staff of the Gwalior Force.

Head Qrs., Camp Dussooha, March 23, 1860.—With reference to paras. 4 and 5 of G. O. of 20th Jan. last, constituting the Gwalior Force a 1st class brigade command, on the same footing as the Rohilcund and Saugor districts, the C. in C. is pleased to notify that from the date of departure of Brigadier general Sir R. Napier, K.C.B., from his late command, the appointment of assistant adjutant general of the Gwalior division is to be considered to have been abolished, and the following staff fixed for the new district:—

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE SWINGING FESTIVAL.

A MINUTE by the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal on the suppression of the Churruck Poojah, indicates a very satisfactory progress towards a higher order of moral feeling on the part of the people of Bengal. The barbarous custom is so evidently dying out of itself that His Honor wisely objects to issuing any immediate and positive prohibition as both inexpedient and unnecessary. It is sufficient, he says, for each Commissioner to discountenance it in his own division by the exercise of his moral influence, and by securing the co-operation of the native gentry in the neighbourhood of the place where such exhibitions are expected to take place. To do more than this would tend to excite the suspicions of the ignorant, and cause them to regard any official interference with this quasi-religious ceremony, as a fresh proof of the Christianising designs of the Government.

In several important districts the practice has already fallen into desuetude. In Behar it only occurs at long intervals when a number of Bengalees have assembled near large towns at the time of the Poojah. In the Tirhoot and Shahabad districts it is quite unknown, and throughout that division its entire suppression may easily be effected by judicious conduct on the part of the police. In the Bhaugulpore division it occasionally takes place, the swingers being men of a low caste, or rather of no caste at all, and exhibiting themselves as a means of gain, and not from any religious motives. In Assam, Arracan, Darjeeling, and Cachar no such cruel exhibitions are either tolerated or attempted. Though existing in the Rajshahye division, it does not prevail to any great extent, and the Commissioner expresses a doubt as to the effect upon the spectators being more demoralising than "many other constantly-recurring sights which accompany Hindoo festivals—such, for instance, as the Hooly." In the Nudda division the custom is still very generally observed; but, according to Mr. Reid, it is nothing more than a huge sham; "the swingers, for the most part, being suspended, not by the skin, but by cloths passing under their arms and loins. Even where the skin is pierced, and canes passed through it, the swingers are suspended by hooks passed through the latter." The swinging, besides, is entirely a voluntary act; the motive being usually the prospect of earning one or two rupees, and perhaps a small quantity of sweetmeats. There are instances, however, of its being performed in fulfilment of a vow. Throughout the Burdwan division the exhibition is decidedly popular, though the Commissioner, like Mr. Reid, declares it to be a "mere make-believe." The performer, he says, being first drugged to a state of insensibility, the skin of the back and shoulders is pulled up from the flesh of the body, and the hook passed through the cuticle. "A strong cloth is then passed round the chest and body, and over the loop of the hook. The man is thus suspended and swings," the whole of his weight supported by the cloth or band, which passes under his chest. Mr. Young does not consider the swinging as so demoralising as the filthy pictures and images which are exhibited at all Hindoo festivals, and recommends that "its suppression should be left to the spread of education, and to the feelings and wishes of the better classes of the natives themselves." Much the same opinion appears to be entertained by the commissioners of the Dacca and Chittagong divisions, but not by Mr. Cockburn, the commissioner of the Cuttack division.

"The practice, he says, is undoubtedly a cruel one, and the result of the grossest ignorance or cupidity. The parties who consent to have hooks fastened into their backs and are raised up to a considerable height above the ground, and swing round until exhausted with pain and fatigue are usually, he understands, of two classes, viz., those who have made a vow to swing if they get some good or blessing previously denied, and those who take a part in the spectacle for the sake of the pice and cowries distributed by the spectators. Nor is it less certain that the practice is a demoralising one, and in truth could it be otherwise, when large crowds of people of both sexes, young and old, assemble for the express purpose of witnessing their unhappy wretched fellow beings suffer, applauding their conduct, and encouraging them to further endurance. There are other practices, Mr. Cockburn observes, of a similar barbarous kind, which should not be lost sight of in considering measures for putting an end to the swinging. Two years ago, for example, he is informed that at one place in this division, in addition to the swinging, no less than 418 fire trenches were prepared, and at a given signal fires were lighted, and as many men deliberately walked over the lighted charcoal. Besides which, there were several men with hooks in their tongues, one of whom appeared to suffer intense pain, while the scene altogether was most revolting, and seemed more like hell than earth."

What would Mr. Cockburn have said had he been called upon to express an opinion on the Farnborough tournament? What would he have thought of the hereditary and representative legislators, the military and naval officers, the squires, philosophers, poets, and divines who were there assembled, "for the express purpose of seeing their unhappy, wretched fellow-beings suffer, applauding their conduct, and encouraging them to further endurance?" Perhaps it would be as well not to descant too severely on the barbarism of the Hindoo spectators at a swinging festival, or of the Spanish Don at a bull-fight. The mote in our brother's eye might, perchance, be less visible, were it not the reflection of the beam that is in our own.

Finally, the practice is reported to be on the wane in Chota Nagpore, though not to be summarily suppressed without exciting great dissatisfaction. Time and common sense are its deadliest foes.

SIR CHARLES TREVELYAN ON MR. WILSON.

If it be true that a house cannot stand that is divided against itself, the condition of our Indian empire is at this moment far from satisfactory. The Government of Madras having been intrusted to a public servant of a self-reliant character, a sharp thorn has been driven into the side of the Supreme Government. Sir Charles Trevelyan is not content to be a mere puppet, moving as it pleases Lord Canning to pull the strings; besides, was he not specially chosen for the purpose of making certain administrative experiments, we will not say in corpore vili, but in the tranquil presidency of Madras? Something approaching to an "autonomy," to use a pedantic, but now generally accepted phrase, was, therefore, the logical sequence of his appointment under such peculiar circumstances, and Sir Charles is evidently not prepared to abate one iota of the power and dignity of his office. For this we should be little disposed to find fault with His Excellency provided he confined himself to a respectful vindication of his authority, or a calm exposition of his views. As a responsible governor, he is clearly entitled to a certain degree of liberty, both of action and speech, but then he is bound to avoid any direct collision with his superiors, and to refrain from indulging in scornful and sarcastic remarks. Had he done so in commenting upon Mr. Wilson's financial statement his minute would be unexceptionable—for we assume that its publication was really accidental—whereas the force of his objections is greatly weakened by the bitterness of his tone, at times approaching to derision and defiance.

Sir Charles begins by justly remarking that the subject of finance is a sealed book to the natives, and one hitherto unread by European officials in India. That Mr. Wilson's propositions should be acceptable to his own countrymen is not surprising, seeing that he sets out with reducing the duty on the principal articles of European consumption from 20 to 10 per cent., and by removing all duties from the principal raw materials of our home manufacture. These advantages fully compensate the mercantile interests for the impost of an income-tax, but they in no way benefit the natives, who are about to be subjected to three new taxes of a singularly unpopular character. The necessity of establishing the finances of British India on such a footing that there shall be a surplus of receipts over expenditure is universally recognised; but the question remains as to the most desirable and most practicable means of accomplishing that object. It is stated that the capital of the debt of British India has increased from £59,441,052 in 1857 to £97,851,807 in the present year, and the annual interest from £2,525,375 to £4,401,029. This is, undoubtedly, a fearful increase, but the burden is not greater than the country can safely endure. Let the debt, then, be accepted as its stands. No reduction can be effected without additional taxation, which is always an expensive process, and "a great deal more is taken from individuals than goes to the State."

The precariousness of the revenue derived from opium was assigned by Mr. Wilson as a reason for not placing too much reliance upon it. Sir Charles, however, sneers at such cautious forethought, and remarks that the same observation had been made ever since he entered public life, and yet the revenue had steadily increased. But surely this is not inconsistent with its precariousness. So long as it does last it is likely to form an abundant source of income, but it may cease any day without a note of warning. The contingency may not be very near at hand, or it may not be very distant, but in any case no prudent financier would trust implicitly to a source of revenue liable to a sudden interruption. Nor is it fair to say, as does the Governor of Madras, that it is proposed to levy new taxes in order to create an insurance fund against the possible reduction of the opium returns. Were these certain of continuance, a lower rate of income-tax would probably have been suggested; but had this been done, and the importation of opium into China stopped by reason of a war, how was the deficit to be supplied? The imposition of an income-tax at all is in itself a desperate remedy, but to attempt to increase the rate originally fixed would be an act of determined suicide.

The essential point, however, as Sir Charles remarks, is to ascertain the exact amount of the deficiency to be hereafter made good, and on this Mr. Wilson affords scarcely any information. The right honourable gentleman contents himself with estimating the deficit for the year 1859-60 at upwards of nine millions and a quarter, and for 1860-61 at six millions and a half sterling—at the same time expressing his dislike to prospective budgets. For this he is taken to task by "the Indians' Friend," who describes an English Parliamentary Budget as nothing else than a calculation of the income and expenditure of the next year, and a plan for disposing of the surplus, or supplying the deficiency, as the case may be." It ought to be so, perhaps, but Mr. Gladstone has assuredly not acted on this convenient plan, further than coolly telling the House that next year's deficit will amount to at least twelve millions, for the supply of which he carefully avoids making any suggestion. In the absence of any sufficient data to show the correctness of Mr. Wilson's vague estimate, Sir Charles challenges the sum total, and denies the necessity for any such excess of expenditure over income as £6,500,000.

"We wish to see"—he says—"whether the asserted deficit of £6,500,000 includes any charges which will not recur, like the large payments to be made next year for the Carnatic and Tanjore debts; and whether allowance has been made for the extensive redemption of public debt, which forms part of the new currency measure; or for the great increase in the revenue of this presidency, which is fully sustained this year, with a large addition arising from a more full collection of the salt tax, to which we have been giving—as we said we could—particular attention. One saving we know to have been greatly understated. Mr. Wilson says, 'Allowing for a decrease in the military charge of £1,740,000, for which arrangements have up to this time been made,' the arrangements which have been already made for the decrease of military charges in the presidencies of Madras and Bombay alone amount to more than this; and no notice whatever is taken of the far larger amount which may be saved in the Bengal presidency, or of the further considerable reductions which may be effected in this presidency if the present tranquil course of events is not interrupted."

But whatever be the deficit, there exists on the other hand an immense hoard of unutilised money in the different public treasuries, amounting to £19,600,000, which may be conveniently and advantageously reduced by means of a well-considered paper currency. After all, the most legitimate mode of readjusting the balance-sheet is by a diminution of expenditure. With a large additional taxation, it would be necessary to augment the salaries of the subordinate civil employes, so that nearly as much would be lost in the one way as would be gained in the other. This, however, appears to be a somewhat arbitrary statement on the part of Sir Charles, and quite as inexact as the estimates with which he finds so much fault. He further asserts that an additional taxation would require the retention of "the whole of our overgrown, embarrassing, exhausting Native Army," and this fact cannot, we fear, be denied or gained. But the main cause of the present deficiency is the immense military establishment which is still maintained in the teeth of the peremptory instructions sent out to the Indian Government by the Secretary of State. If the native army be gradually disbanded, with the exception of a small force to relieve the Europeans of harassing detail duties, the necessity for an increased taxation would in a great measure be removed. Instead of this, the disaffected Bengal army is actually stronger than it was previous to the mutiny, while the faithful armies of Madras and Bombay are being steadily reduced. In the Madras presidency the civil police are taking over charge of jails and treasuries, and performing escort and other civil duties, while the native regiments are being concentrated with the European troops at a few central military stations. If the same course were pursued in the Punjab and North-West Provinces, "a state of security, of general contentment, and of financial prosperity," would be eventually and surely attained.

"Here, therefore"—continues Sir Charles—"we stand in a position of great advantage at the turning point of two policies. If we determine upon reducing a large portion of our native army and improving the condition of the remainder, the financial difficulty will be overcome; we shall have a feeling of security which we have not enjoyed for many years; and we shall be free to work out those improvements in the different branches of Indian administration upon which the prosperity of the country depends. The result of this policy may be as clearly foreseen as anything in human affairs can be. But it will be far otherwise if we use our strength to impose upon the people of India a new system of taxation which is extremely distasteful to them; which is not justified by any necessity; and which is totally unsuited to the present state of society in the country."

The natives of India are wedded to precedent, however oppressive, and suspicious of every innovation, however beneficent. Accustomed from time immemorial to a despotic form of government, "it has always been observed, that while they are extremely patient under established grievances, they are always disposed to meet new impositions by active or passive resistance. They would take the restoration of the Transit and Town Duties as a matter of course; but the introduction into India of direct taxation is calculated to arouse all their latent feelings of opposition." Mr. Wilson's reference to the Institutes of Menu is next quietly ridiculed—Sir Charles alleging that they "stand in about the same relation to modern India as the Anglo-Saxon Institutes do to modern England."

With regard to the exemption from the new system of taxation claimed by Madras and Bombay, it is urged, not without a semblance of reason, that it is unfair to punish the people of Madras and Malabar for the offences of the people of Oude and Rohilcund, with whom, moreover, they have no sympathies, and no affinity of race or tongue.

"In this presidency," Sir Charles goes on to observe, "we are in the midst of a series of well-considered reforms which, carried to completion, will change the face of the South of India. The people are in excellent temper; the Government has their full confidence; and a very few years will suffice for the accomplishment of the object. A new survey and settlement are in progress, whereby the land tax will be moderated, equalised, and fixed. The vast number of small landed estates, hitherto free from land tax, spread over the face of the presidency under the name of Inams, are being converted into freeholds, subject to the payment of a quit rent commutable, at the option of the holder, for a single payment at twenty years' purchase. Freeholds are likewise being created in favour of the holders of building land, and of lands in the hill ranges suited for the cultivation of coffee and other products of European enterprise. The formation of the new police is going on in most of the districts of the presidency under circumstances of difficulty from which the introduction of the same institution into Ireland and England was not exempt. We hope, with the sanction of the home authorities, shortly to commence the amalgamation of the Supreme and Sudder Courts into a single High Court, and to strengthen and improve the subordinate courts. Above all, we have just completed the first general revision that has ever been made of our Native Revenue Establishments. This strikes at the root of the greatest evil with which the South of India has been afflicted—the redundant number, and the ill-paid irresponsible character of the native revenue officers."

All these hopes for the future, however, will be nipped in the bud, if the new tax-ordinances are introduced. The European officials are already tasked beyond their strength, so that a large native machinery would have to be employed in the collection of these odious imposts. It would be a perilous measure to attempt at the same time a reduction of the army and an augmentation of taxation; nor is it called for. If the army be cut down as low as the real exigencies of the State will permit, there need be no occasion for new taxes.

Sir Charles next proceeds to show that Madras already contributes more than its just share to the burdens and defences of the empire; being called upon to bear charges which do not strictly belong to that presidency, nearly equal to an annual sum of one million and a half. Deriving no revenue from Hyderabad, it is charged with all the civil and military expenses of the ceded districts, besides being required to garrison the Burmese provinces.

Sir Patrick Grant, as is his wont, records his "cordial and unqualified concurrence" with "the most conclusive Minute of our President;" but Mr. Maltby goes further, and adds some weighty arguments against the proposed income-tax. Such a mode of taxation, he says, can only succeed "when the governors and the governed have the same national feelings and interests, and where education and a representative system give a high moral tone and political enlightenment." Such is clearly not the case in India, where tradition has taught the people "to seek relief from over taxation by concealing their means; and from oppression, when it becomes unbearable, by revolt." Hitherto they have submitted to our rule because it was mild and equitable, but will they continue to do so under the goading of novel and hateful taxes? Nowhere is an inquiry into a man's income favourably received, and in India it is likely to excite peculiar repugnance and alarm. A feeling of estrangement would certainly ensue, and in many places overt and active opposition may be expected, which will only be overcome by the exhibition of military force—a very dangerous instrument for the collection of taxes. In the Madras Presidency the consequences, Mr. Maltby considers, would be more disastrous than elsewhere.

"We have," he says, "none of the great Bengal Zemindars to whom the measures of our administration have given princely incomes of a description which can be easily ascertained. Our provinces have also comparatively few native merchants and bankers of moderately large means. The wealth of the country is less than in Bengal, and is spread with more evenness over the community, so that great numbers would have to be taxed to produce a revenue of any consequence to the State. This would necessitate the employment of a large body of tax-gatherers at a heavy expense; and as their private interests and feelings would be against the Government, and the people have numerous methods of concealing their incomes, the ultimate gain to the Treasury would be small. On the other hand, what general demoralization would arise from the corruption of the tax-gatherers, the fraudulent evasions of the people, and the opportunity which would be given for exactions and the indulgence of private enmities by preferring charges of perjury and fraud! The social fabric would thus be disorganized, and the time of the officers of Government would be occupied with these matters to the neglect of their ordinary administrative duties."

For these and similar reasons the honourable member recommends an application to the Supreme Government to suspend the inauguration of their proposed measures, so far as the Madras Presidency is concerned, until reference shall have been made to the Secretary of State. Mr. Morehead, another Member of Council, expresses his assent to the minutes of the President and Mr. Maltby, and affirms that "a sullen feeling of dissatisfaction already exists wherever Mr. Wilson's scheme of taxation has been understood by the people." Such is the general tone and line of argument adopted by the mutinous Government of Madras in commenting on Mr. Wilson's financial statement. As the production of the papers themselves has for the present been declined by the Secretary of State, we have deemed it our duty to acquaint the public with their style and tenor.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 4.

INDIAN AFFAIRS.

Mr. KINNAIRD wished to ask the Secretary of State for India whether, as lately stated in the public prints, a Bill had been brought into the Legislative Council of India making the non-fulfilment of a contract to grow indigo on the part of a ryot a criminal offence; whether he had any objection to lay a copy of such Bill upon the table of the House, and further to inform the House if such Bill had been introduced as the result of any authorised inquiry, and, if not, on what other grounds the Legislative Council propose to make the breach of a merely civil contract a criminal offence; and if he would not require that a Commission should be at once appointed to proceed into the interior of Bengal to inquire and ascertain the circumstances which had led to the complaints of the Bengal cultivators?

Mr. VANSITTART said he had also given notice of a question on the same subject, whether the Secretary of State for India could state that the agrarian disturbances were confined to the districts of Baraset, Nuddea, and Moorshedabad, or whether they had extended to the adjoining districts of Lower Bengal; also, whether it was true that the Legislative Council of Calcutta, at the recommendation of Mr. Wilson, had passed a law, after a sitting of a few hours, making the non-fulfilment of an indigo contract a criminal offence; and, whether, in consequence of that proceeding, a feeling of deep exasperation had been excited among the peasantry, which had rendered it necessary for the indigo planters to secure, for their protection, the services of discharged soldiers and sailors lounging about Calcutta? He believed that the conduct of the magistrate of Baraset had been most unjustly assailed to atone for offences of Mr. J. P. Grant, Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, who had made a breach of civil contract a criminal offence, in consequence of which it was necessary to have a large amount of police and military constantly patrolling about to keep order. If such a state of things were allowed to continue the ryots would be ground down to the utmost possible distress. Up to the time of the last mail Lord Canning had not returned from his itinerant tour in the North-West Provinces, but Mr. Wilson had propounded his unworkable, fanciful, and perhaps attractive financial scheme, which had had a somewhat similar effect in the impression it produced to a financial scheme produced in that House. Of course the power of the minister in the Legislative Council in India was all but despotic, and therefore whatever he proposed was sure to be adopted.]

Colonel SYKES wished to ask the Secretary of State for India when he purposed taking the judgment of the Council of India upon the report of the Committee on the Reorganisation of the Indian Army, and whether he would lay the result upon the table of the House, with the papers promised, and at what time? If the Board of Council in India now possessed the same powers as the Board of Directors formerly possessed he need not have brought this subject forward, because in the latter court any member could bring forward any motion he pleased for the consideration of the court, in the same way as hon. members were accustomed to do; but there was no such power in the Council. The consequence was that the members of the Council might be dummies or not, according to the policy of the Secretary for India. There was, however, one exception only, and that was with regard to the financial grants, which could not be made without the sanction of the Council. Now, the reorganisation of the army was a great financial question, and millions might be wasted or saved, therefore it was a matter for the Council to decide.

Mr. SMOLLETT said it was time they had received some information on the reorganisation of the Indian army. There was but one opinion throughout the country, and that was that a large local force must be maintained. Seventy-four regiments had ceased to exist, and yet there were seventy-four colonels, seventy-four lieutenant-colonels, seventy-four majors, and seven times seventy-four captains still on the pay list of regiments which did not exist. The expenses of the Indian army amounted to something like £20,000,000 sterling per annum. He thought the present state of things was a disgrace to the Indian department, and most detrimental to the public service.

Sir C. WOOD said he would not enter into the question of the state of the Bengal army then, but he must say that they would find very few officers belonging to the disbanded regiments who were not employed in one way or another; and he believed that little or no expense had been incurred in the payment of those officers. Although there were seventy-four regiments disbanded, the officers belonging to those regiments ought not to be deprived of their pay. The complaint of the hon. gentleman was that those officers were paid although the regiments had been disbanded. That was a question not affecting India alone; it was one of imperial importance, and the question of the reorganisation of the Indian army must be determined upon imperial considerations. He was now in a position to state that he hoped next week to be able to lay the required papers on the table of the House. He now came to the question of the indigo planters and the ryots. He quite agreed that the relations between the indigo planters and the ryots were anything but satisfactory. His hon. friend (Mr. Kinnaird) seemed to think that no steps had been taken on the subject; but he could inform him that an Act was passed in the Session of 1859 which he hoped would produce much improvement when it came into operation. The relations between the parties were these. The zemindars were the proprietors of the land, and thus they became the landlords of the ryots for a certain number of years, binding them to grow a certain quantity of indigo, and to deliver it at a certain fixed price. In order to enable them to do this the planters were in the habit of making advances to the ryots, so that the ryots were always indebted to their landlords; and no doubt this state of things was most prejudicial to the ryots and their interests. That was no doubt in accordance with the law, but it was perfectly well known that their power was carried beyond the law, and far beyond those relations which ought to exist between landlord and tenant. The ryots had objected for years past to grow indigo in that way, as growing rice was more profitable, and no doubt that had led to a determination on their part to combine together not to perform their contracts, and to resist anything done on the part of the indigo planters. And if it were true that soldiers and sailors had been brought from Calcutta to assist the indigo planters, it could not have been on account of any law having been passed. Application had been made to the authorities at Calcutta, but he was not at that moment in a position to furnish information as to what had been done. The only information he had was conveyed in a private letter, dated 23rd March, stating that it was the intention of the Legislative Council to introduce a measure for the purpose of dealing with this subject. But it did not appear that it was the intention of that Bill to subject the infraction of civil contracts to criminal proceedings. The object was to give summary power to magistrates in civil cases. There was some time ago an Act authorising magistrates to proceed criminally in these cases; but it was repealed by an order of the Court of Directors. The new law, whatever it was, was only to be a temporary Act, and then a Commission would be issued to inquire into the whole question affecting the indigo planters and the ryots.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MAY 8.

FINANCES OF INDIA.

Colonel SYKES rose to move that a humble address be presented to her Majesty for copies of the minutes in council of the Governor of Madras, dated the 20th day of March, 1860, and of the minutes of the other members of the Madras Council, upon Mr. Wilson's Budget; together with any correspondence of the Secretary of State for India in Council with the Governments of India and Madras upon the imposition of the income-tax; and of dissents (if any) of members of the Council of India.

After some remarks by Mr. VANSITTART and Mr. BUCHANAN,

Sir CHARLES WOOD said, in reply: The question for the House to bear in mind is the position of the Indian finances. It was my duty last year to state their position. They have received the fullest consideration of Indian statesmen, and the Supreme Government in India, after the fullest deliberation, and after having taken the opinions of the best authorities, have come reluctantly to the unanimous conclusion that the course which they have taken, coupled with a large reduction of expenditure, is the only one which offers a fair prospect of equalizing expenditure and income. Having refused last year, and rightly refused, I believed, to give a guarantee for the Indian loan, I do hope the House will leave the responsibility for the arrangement of the Indian finances to the Government in that country, who, after all, must be better able to judge on what footing they ought to be placed. I quite agree with my hon. and gallant friend that large reductions ought to be made in Indian expenditure. I have impressed that on the Indian Government, and I am happy to say that last week we received news from India of reductions to a larger extent than we anticipated. The House may be assured that I do look to a large reduction of expenditure rather than to a large increase of taxation for equalizing expenditure and income; but for the present the Indian Government have come to the conclusion that both are necessary for that object. With regard to the production of the papers, I hope my gallant friend will not press for them at the present moment. They only arrived here last Saturday; other questions besides the mere question of the Budget are involved in them, and it is only right that the Indian Council should have the opportunity of giving them a full consideration. I feel the necessity of producing them before long as strongly as my hon. and gallant friend, and in a week or ten days I may have no objection to laying them on the table, coupled, however, with other papers, without which it would be impossible to come to an adequate conclusion on the subject.

Mr. KINNAIRD presumed that after the statement of the hon. member (Mr. Vansittart) the financial scheme of Mr. Wilson would be brought under discussion on some future occasion. He would suggest, therefore, that instead of these desultory discussions the Secretary for India should fix a time when, all the papers on the subject being before the House, the whole subject of Indian finance should be gone into. In this way the right hon. gentleman would save both his own time and that of the House.

Sir C. Wood said that it would, of course, be his duty sooner or later to bring the finances of India under the notice of the House. The Indian accounts had been received, and were being prepared for printing. As soon as they were printed they would be laid on the table of the House; but until they were produced it would be impossible to fix any time at which to enter upon the question, nor in the present state of public business was it possible for him to do so if even the papers were now ready.

The motion was then by leave withdrawn.

CALCUTTA AND SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY.

The directors state in their report that since the first half-yearly meeting, held on the 30th of November last, they had completed the shipment of the materials required for the permanent way, of which they had received advices of the safe arrival in Calcutta of about 2,000 tons. Almost the whole of the rolling stock had also been shipped, two locomotive engines only remaining to be forwarded. Attention had been given to supplying other necessary materials. Iron girders were in course of construction, and would shortly be completed for the bridge over Tolly's Canal, and the necessary contracts were being entered into for iron girders for the bridge over the Pallee River, nearly midway between Calcutta and the Mitalah. Those two were the only bridges of any size required on the line. The Board had been enabled to make their shipments at very moderate charges. While the directors had allowed no intermission in carrying out the various measures affecting the interests of the company in England, the officers of the company in India had not intermitted their exertions. The directors continued to share in the hope expressed by Mr. Schiller, the company's agent, as to the completion and opening of the line in about twelve months from this date. The latest letters from the agent extended to the 23rd of March, and were of the same satisfactory nature. The balance-sheet for the year ending 31st December last, duly audited, showed that of the capital of £250,000, the amount realized on shares in England and India up to that date was £131,941, of which £76,977 consisted of payments in full in England. These latter had hitherto rendered a call upon the shareholders unnecessary, and if a similar rate of payment in anticipation of calls continued, the necessity for a further call, which the directors must otherwise shortly make, would be postponed. The amount required to complete the £5 per share in full on each share was £3. 17s. All the shares of the company were now placed out, 47,130 shares being held in England and 2,870 in India.

The report of Mr. J. A. Longridge, the consulting engineer, states that on the 21st of February last the earthwork on about eighteen miles (out of 28½ miles) of line was completed, and that ballast burning was proceeding along all parts of the line. The brickwork of the bridge over Tolly's Canal was in a forward state, and a large quantity of bricks was on the ground at the Pallee river, where the foundations for the bridge were being excavated. Upon the whole, he thought the progress of the work very satisfactory, and such as to give every reason to hope that the line would be open for traffic soon after the end of next cold season.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DEATH OF GENERAL SIR WILLOUGHBY COTTON.—It is with regret that we announce the death of General Sir Willoughby Cotton, G.C.B., and K.C.H., which occurred Friday morning, May 4, at his residence in Lowndes-square. Sir Willoughby, like his kinsman Field Marshal Viscount Combermere, had achieved an honourable career in the army, his services having extended over a period of upwards of sixty years. He was the only son of Admiral Cotton, cousin of Lord Combermere, and a nephew of Sir Willoughby Aston Willoughby, and was born in 1783. When in his sixteenth year he left Rugby School to enter the 3rd guards, as ensign. In 1805 he commenced his active military career, when he accompanied his regiment in the expedition to Hanover. After his return from Germany he was, in 1807, engaged with his regiment in the expedition to Copenhagen, where he was appointed Deputy Assistant Adjutant-general to the reserve, under the Duke of Wellington, and was present at the battle of Kioge. In 1809 the gallant officer accompanied the illustrious Duke to Spain, and served as Deputy Assistant Adjutant-general to the light division during the whole of the campaign of the retreat to Torres Vedras, and the subsequent advance, the former containing a series of skirmishes, and the battle of the Coa, under General Crawford. In 1811 he returned home on his promotion, but rejoined the army in the Peninsula in 1813, and served until the close of the war. He was present at the Battle of Vittoria, commanded the light companies at the passage of the Adour, and the pickets of the 2nd brigade of guards at the repulse of the sortie from Bayonne, besides other engagements of minor importance. He had received the war medal and three clasps for Busaco, Vittoria, and Nive. For some years he commanded the 14th foot. Like many other distinguished ornaments of the British army, he had seen considerable service in India. The deceased general had passed many years in that country, having commanded a division of Sir Archibald Campbell's army in the Burmese war. He was appointed to the command of the 1st division of the Bengal army destined to take part in the Afghanistan war in 1838-39, under General Sir Henry Fane, and afterwards of General Sir John Keane, in which army were many names illustrious in the military annals of the country, among others, Nott, Dennie, Sale, Willshire, Wheeler, Outram, and Havelock. Sir Willoughby was present at the storming and capture of Ghuznee on the 23rd of July, 1839, at which he commanded the reserve which entered the city after the storming party had established themselves inside. His name was most honourably mentioned in the despatches of Sir John Keane, and in those of the Governor-general, Lord Auckland. In October, 1839, he relinquished the command of the Bengal forces, then in camp near Cabul, to assume the command within the Bengal and Agra Presidencies. He was from 1847 to 1850 Commander-in-Chief at Bombay, and was second member of Council in that Presidency. For his meritorious services he had received the Order of the Bath of all the grades, being nominated a Grand Cross of that Order in 1840. He was made a Knight Commander of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order in 1830; and had conferred upon him the Order of the Dooranee empire of the 1st class at Cabul, in September, 1839. The Colonelcy of the 98th Foot was given him in 1839, from which he was removed to the 32nd Foot in April, 1854, which becomes vacant by his death. His commission bore date as follows:—Ensign, 31st October, 1798; lieutenant and captain, 25th November, 1799; captain and lieutenant-colonel, 12th June, 1811; colonel, 25th July, 1821; major, 22nd July, 1830; lieutenant-general, 23rd Nov., 1841; and general, 20th June, 1854. The late general married, on the 16th May, 1806, Lady Augusta Maria Coventry, eldest daughter of Geo. William 7th Earl of Coventry, great grandfather of the present peer. It is not generally known that the late Sir Willoughby was the great friend of the late general Sir Henry Havelock. They were together in the first Burmese war, and Havelock was one of his aides-de-camp while he was with the army in Afghanistan. The late General Havelock, then captain in the 13th regiment, modestly dedicated to the late Sir Willoughby his interesting "Narrative of the War in Afghanistan in 1838-39," in token of his "grateful recollection of his numerous acts of kindness since 1825, when Captain Havelock first served in the same army with him."—Times.

Memoirs of Major-General Sir Henry Havelock, K.C.B. By J. C. Marshman. Longman and Co.

The distinguished part borne by General Havelock in suppressing the late rebellion in India, and the prominent position he so long held in the eyes of his fellow-countrymen, were such as fully to justify the publication of these memoirs. Many readers, however, will regret that Mr. Marshman should have preferred to paint the hero in full-dress uniform, to sketching the man in the midst of his domestic circle. The notices of his private life and character are far too meagre, and in reality add nothing to what was previously known of him. On the other hand, so far as his military career is concerned, he is placed on a pedestal out of all proportion to the figure he actually made. Indeed, the impression produced on the reader by Mr. Marshman's biography is not unlike that which results from the perusal of an historical romance. We are startled by the discovery that the great victories with which we are most familiar, and for which we hold certain names in high esteem and honour, were chiefly due to an officer in a very subordinate position, whose existence even, until a very recent period, was unknown beyond his own immediate sphere. There is no doubt that Sir Henry Havelock was conspicuous throughout life for the intelligent and conscientious discharge of every duty intrusted to him, but we certainly were not prepared to learn that wherever fortune was favourable to the British arms, it was because his counsels were followed, or that all our disasters and short-comings were attributable to the neglect of his advice and warnings. But such is the inevitable conclusion at which we must arrive if we take his biographer's statements and commentaries without reservation. General Havelock's criticisms on particular military manœuvres are given as though they were infallible, as though his opinion on any disputed point were to be held equivalent to a final judgment from which there could be no appeal. This is a great blemish, because it imparts a dogmatic tone to the entire narrative, and tends to present the subject of the memoir in a hard and unsympathetic manner, that diminishes our interest in the man, without in any way increasing our admiration of his talents as a warrior. The chief merit, therefore, of this work arises from its being a faithful and convenient record of Indian warfare, from the first campaign in Burmah down to the evacuation of the Residency at Lucknow. The style, it may be added, is simple and unaffected, and the general "getting up" of the volume altogether unexceptionable.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.
 "A very entertaining volume, evincing great research. It is surprising what a fund of incidents and facts the author has brought together, and placed before us in an attractive form. The work is just the one suited to a soldier, inasmuch as it may be taken up to while away an hour, and laid down at any moment, without losing its thread, or weakening its impressions."—United Service Magazine.
 "Second to none of its class in merit, 'Curiosities of War' teems with authentic anecdotes of the British Army. We recommend our readers to buy the book, the perusal of which will endear yet more the British Army to every Englishman. The author has done both the service and the public a favour, by the publication of 'The Curiosities of War.'—Standard.
 "Noble deeds, loyalty, and heroism, in every phase of military life, are chronicled with graphic skill, and the book will doubtless give an impetus to the spirit of the day."—Sunday Times.
 "One of the most interesting chapters is 'Woman in Battle.' The book abounds with interesting scraps and anecdotes; it will be of great value to the military student."—Court Circular.
 "Mr. Carter has a natural taste for accumulating strange or curious stories, incidents, and traits. His book will be amusing and instructive to all."—Chatham News.
 "Will fully repay those who are daily becoming more and more interested in the public feeling that it is necessary to be fully prepared against any emergency that may arise against the liberties of the country."—Bell's Weekly Messenger.

This Soldiers' Book and Military Compendium is full of the most interesting anecdotes and incidents relating to various regiments, and contains the origin of every infantry corps, together with names and heroic deeds of the recipients of the Victoria Cross, arranged regimentally.

AN INTRODUCTION to the GRAMMAR of the SANSKRIT LANGUAGE, for the Use of Early Students. By H. H. WILSON, M.A., F.R.S., &c., &c. 8vo. Cloth, 18s.

London: WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street.

BY J. R. YOUNG,

(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College),

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS,
PURE AND MIXED.

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. Young has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. Young's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

JOHN WHITE, Manufacturer, 228, Piccadilly, London.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS

Have been used freely by millions of human beings, of both sexes and all ages, in every part of the world; and while the public press has teemed with authenticated cases of extraordinary cures in a vast variety of diseases (such as indigestion, scorbutic eruptions, and liver complaints), there is not on public record a single case in which their use has been attended with a bad effect. None when using HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS need suffer the hope of cure to be counterbalanced by the fear of injury. They are peculiarly mild in their operation, and yet they never fail to effect a complete and permanent cure. Whilst using them no special restrictions are required.

114 YEARS AGO JNO. NEWBURY

Dr. JAMES'S POWDER at his Warehouse in St. Paul's Churchyard. Since that time it has been vended by members of his family, who have, one after another, succeeded to the business. The most eminent of the medical profession prescribe this famous medicine in cases of FEVER, RHEUMATISM, VIOLENT COLDS, &c. Great care should be taken to guard against spurious imitations, of which there are several, by observing on the Government stamp the name—F. NEWBURY, No. 45, ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD, London.

PULVERMACHER'S GALVANIC ANTI-RHEUMATIC CHAIN-BANDS FOR SELF-APPLICATION.

Unequalled and certain as are the effects of the Chain-Bands in all kinds of Rheumatic Pains, still more remarkable and speedy is the relief they afford in Neuralgia, Tic Dolorieux, Head and Toothache, etc. Even the most inveterate cases of Paralysis, Epilepsy, Deafness, Gout, Sciatica, Lumbago, Indigestion, Nervous Debility, etc., disappear in a comparatively short time. Prospectuses, recording a vast number of private cures and extracts from numbers of scientific works, sent free. Chain-Bands, 6s., 10s., 15s., 22s., according to power.

J. L. PULVERMACHER and Co., 73, Oxford-street, adjoining the Princess's Theatre, London, and all Chemists.

THE MAGNESIAN EFFERVESCENT is

the most agreeable and effective remedy in all cases of Gout, Rheumatism, Acidity, Heartburn, Indigestion, and Biliary Affection, Nausea, Fever, Thirst, and Sea-sickness. It is highly recommended by the profession, and will be found especially valuable to those going to India or travelling in warm climates; as a mild and efficacious saline aperient it stands unequalled, and will be found peculiarly adapted for delicate females and children. To be obtained through all respectable chemists, and wholesale from Messrs. BAXCLAY, Farringdon-street (put up in stoppered bottles at 4s. 6d. for India), and smaller size at 1s. 10d. and 2s. 9d.

LENTUM, A NEW COMPOSITION

for Artificial TEETH and GUMS, recommended to Invalids and all who suffer from Indigestion. Its flexibility and lightness give the greatest power in mastication, avoiding all pain or pressure on the gums, without springs, wires, or any unsightly gold. It supports all loose and tender teeth, and does not require the extraction of stumps. Prepared only by

Mr. ALFRED JONES, SURGEON-DENTIST to Her late Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, Her late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France.
64, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.
At Home from Eleven till Five.

TO SUFFERERS with CORNS and

RUNIONS.—Ask for a Box of YOUNG'S CORN and RUNION PLASTERS, which will eradicate corns or bunions in a very short time. Be careful that you have YOUNG'S—the name is printed on the label; all others are imitations. Price 6d. and 1s. per box, or by post for thirteen postage stamps. Address H. YOUNG, 31, Shaftesbury-place, Aldersgate-street, E.C. May be had at most chemists throughout the world. Agents wanted abroad. N.B.—A Liberal Allowance to Wholesale Dealers.

TO FAMILIES PROCEEDING TO INDIA

and the COLONIES.—Owing to the difficulty experienced in procuring REALLY GOOD DRESSING-CASES, TRAVELLING and CARRIAGE-BAGS at the Colonies, Families and Ladies and Gentlemen proceeding abroad are invited to inspect the Stock of DESKS, DESPATCH-BOXES, WORK-BOXES, FINE CUTLERY, KNIVES, SCISSORS, and other FANCY ARTICLES, at 52, NEW BOND-STREET, which will prevent the annoyance so often experienced abroad in purchasing worthless exported articles.

Sole Manufacturers—WILLIAMS and Co., 52, New Bond-street, London, W.

 Office in London: 1, MOORGATE-STREET.
 The next investigation, for the purpose of declaring a Bonus to the Policyholders, will take place on 31st January, 1861, and all Policies in the Participating Class, effected prior to that date, will share in the profits then to be divided.
 The whole of the Profits of this branch are divisible, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, amongst the insured.
 The last Bonus declared by the Company was at the rate of £1. 7s. 6d. per cent. per annum on the amount insured, a return which, when its very moderate scale of premiums is considered, has rarely been exceeded by any other Office.
 As an illustration of the proportion which the additions already made to Policies bear to the sums paid by the assured in the shape of Premiums, it will be sufficient to state that a Policy for £1,000 taken out in 1836, on a life then aged 25, and upon which £503 have been received by the Office, has been increased by successive Bonus additions to the sum of £1,331. 1s. 10d., the increase being equal to SEVENTY PER CENT. on the Premiums paid by the assured.
 All Policies are guaranteed by a subscribed Capital of upwards of One Million Sterling, an accumulated and invested Premium Fund of over £350,000, and the unlimited responsibility of upwards of Seven Hundred Shareholders.
 A. P. FLETCHER, Secretary.

MARSHMAN'S LIFE OF GENERAL HAVELOCK.

Now ready, in One Volume, 8vo., with Portrait, price 12s. 6d.,

MEMOIRS of MAJOR-GENERAL SIR HENRY HAVELOCK, K.C.B. By JOHN CLARK MARSHMAN.

"All the events deserving of record to the close of the career of this true soldier and great and good man, are clearly and vividly narrated by Mr. Marshman."—Naval and Military Gazette.
 "Written without any affectation in style or sentiment, the narrative is in our opinion interesting throughout. The biographer of Havelock has much of the eloquence which belongs to sincere and necessary statement, rising unconsciously into unadorned poetry, from the Danteque exhibition which he gives of striking characteristic realities."—Spectator.
 "This biography is the production of a scholar and a gentleman, and does full justice to the great qualities and noble career of the hero whose life and death it celebrates."—Observer.
 "It is at once a very able and a very interesting work. . . . The book, which will add greatly to Mr. Marshman's literary reputation, is likely to enjoy an extensive popularity; and it derives additional value from the author's thorough acquaintance with all the historical events with which the career of Havelock was associated."—Overland Mail.

CEYLON: An Account of the Island—Physical, Historical, and Topographical; with Notices of its Natural History, Antiquities, and Productions. By Sir JAMES EMERSON TENNENT, K.C.S., LL.D., &c.

The improvements in the present edition consist in the introduction of new matter in numerous places, the careful revision and correction of the old, the re-engraving of some of the illustrations, and the insertion of several hundreds of additional references in the INDEX.
 "Dans ce remarquable ouvrage, nous voyons l'auteur tour à tour se produire comme historien, archéologue, économiste et naturaliste; et dans ces différents rôles, on rencontre toujours en lui un écrivain simple et élégant, un narrateur clair et précis, un minuteur et profond observateur. Il serait difficile de trouver dans ces volumes une seule page qui ne présentât de l'intérêt au lecteur. Soit qu'il parcoure les forêts à la recherche des espèces végétales les plus curieuses, soit qu'il suive dans ses repaires l'insecte ou l'animal sauvage, soit qu'il étudie les mœurs des habitants et l'origine des différentes races dont l'île est peuplée, il sait répandre des trésors d'observation et de science, sans cesser un moment d'être un guide aimable."—Revue Contemporaine, Avril.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

It is amusing to observe that the majority of the Indian papers received by the Bombay Mail of the 27th of April have taken up Sir Charles Trevelyan's minute as altogether unanswerable. Their nine days' wonder of Mr. Wilson's financial statement has given place to an equally intelligent admiration of the insubordinate Governor of Madras. The question of the propriety of publishing objections couched in such disrespectful language, and almost amounting to an incitement to revolt, never enters into their appreciation of his conduct. They are simply delighted at the demolition of their late idol, just as a child would rejoice over a compound fracture sustained by its blue-eyed doll. The Supreme Government has received a check and an affront, and that is looked upon as a triumph, and a legitimate subject for congratulation. The Bombay Gazette, however, affords an honourable exception to this strange infatuation, and severely rebukes "the reckless conduct of the official conspirators of Madras." Mr. Wilson himself observed, in the Legislative Council, that, "The Government of India have taken such steps as are due to the public interest and their own position, in order to obviate the serious and grave mischief which it is possible may be caused by this act of what I cannot but call wanton indiscretion." After attempting, with moderate success, to refute Sir Charles's objections, the Finance Minister proceeded to correct certain misrepresentations as to the provisions of the income-tax which have found their way into print:—

"For the purposes of the Bill"—we quote from the Bombay Gazette—"the country is to be divided into tax circles, identical with the present revenue districts.

In the presidency towns there will be one Board of Commissioners for general assessments and appeals, and a special commission for secret assessments. In the Mofussil the collector, with the help of commissioners unconnected with the Government, will determine ordinary cases, and there will be, as in the presidency, a special commissioner for private cases. The production of books, papers, or accounts of any kind will in no case be compulsory, but an appellant may, if he choose, produce evidence of this sort in aid of his claim for reduction. Great latitude will be left to native communities to assess themselves in the aggregate by means of punchayets, or in any other way they may prefer; but every individual will have liberty to demand that he should not be subject to an aggregate assessment. Any one will be empowered to compound by one payment for three or five years, beyond which term Mr. Wilson is persuaded the income-tax will not be necessary. Zemindars are to be assessed on the principle that their income is equal to half the Government rent; those who can prove that their yearly profits are less than this will be granted a proportionate reduction. Finally, appeals will be heard with closed doors, and all parties will be sworn to secrecy under heavy penalties."

The Bill was read a second time on the 14th April, and will no doubt be passed without further alterations. The real difficulties to be encountered will not be felt until it is carried into execution. Already a riot has taken place at Peshawur, through the absurd rumours on the nature of the tax which were circulated among the natives. It was reported that it would fall upon every man, woman, and child, that even the dead would not be exempt from its action—two rupees eightannas being demanded from every corpse—and that the operation of the Bill would be retrospective. Inflamed by these ridiculous reports, a disorderly mob surrounded the house of the commissioner, and was only dispersed by a charge of a troop of native cavalry.

Brigadier Chamberlain has again entered the hills at the head of a considerable force, to chastise the insolence of the Wuzerees. Disturbances are also stated to have occurred in the Khasia Hills, on the North East frontier, and the Jyntiapore thannah is said to have been destroyed by a party of hill-men. Nor are the accounts from the Nizam's territory more favourable. The Nizam himself is spoken of as sunk in debauchery, and averse to public business. He is fortunate indeed in his minister, but even he is powerless to restrain the Arabs and Rohillas from the perpetration of all sorts of atrocities.

Lord Canning was shortly expected at Calcutta, having hurried down from Simla on the first intimation of Sir Charles Trevelyan's escapade. Lord Clyde remains at that favourite sanitarium, but is expected home in the early part of July. The command of the Indian army has devolved on Sir Hugh Rose from Friday last, and that of the Bombay army on Sir William Mansfield.

Sir James Outram, we regret to state, has been compelled to repair to Ceylon, in the hope of restoring his shattered health; and during his absence Sir B. Frere will act as President of Council. The Bombay papers record the departure of Sir Cursetjee Jamsetjee for Europe, with several friends and followers. As the Parsee Baronet proposes to spend £70,000 in the course of his travels, he may reasonably expect a cordial reception both in London and Paris.

Brigadier Coghlan has been appointed to preside over a commission for investigating the present complications in the affairs of Muscat and Zanzibar.

ANOTHER FRONTIER REVOLT.

We extinguished rebellion in the very heart of the empire only to commence a series of petty frontier wars. The Rana of Nugger Parkur only last week sentenced to transportation for fourteen years, the Waghers lately extinguished, the Kabool Khail Wuzerees just quieted, the Kookees whose destructive raid into the plains has not yet been avenged, have successively demanded the attention of small armies within a period of eight months. A force is now collected at Dera Ismael Khan to chastise a second tribe of Wuzerees, who recently attacked one of our cavalry outposts. And now we have intelligence of a rising, which may become serious in the North East. The Khasias of Jyntiapore have revolted.

A force consisting of some three or four companies of the Sylhet Light Infantry has been sent out from Chirra against them, under Lieutenants Buist and Waterland, and it is reported that another force left Sylhet, commanded by Lieutenant Ross, to check the progress of the hill people on the plains of Sylhet. They have burnt down the Jyntiapore thannah, and have driven away the Darogahs and destroyed the records in the other two thannahs on the plains. The force in the hills has had several skirmishes with them. But the Khasias will not stand fire. Their arms are bows and arrows, swords and spears, long knives and billhooks. In the fastnesses of their native hills they are troublesome. The hills furnish no supplies for the troops, and convoys must always be escorted by a guard of soldiers.

Jyntiapore was annexed to the British dominion by proclamation in 1835. The Rajah had ordered the kidnapping of four British subjects for the purpose of human sacrifice. His possessions in the plains were accordingly confiscated, and he relinquished his hill territory of his own accord, retiring to Dacca on a pension of 500 rupees a month. The district consists of a strip of ground running from the river Soorma on the plains of Sylhet to the valley of Assam in the north, separating the higher ranges of Khasia Proper from Cachar. It contains about 200 villages, and nearly 4,000 square miles in area. Under the native princes this province was divided into twelve districts, under as many separate heads called "Doloi." The immediate cause of the present revolt is said to be an attempt on the part of the Chirra authorities to tax their lands, and to introduce certain innovations into their customs, and the traditional method of ruling in their villages. They have never been happy under British rule. They assign many reasons for their discontent. They complain of injustice in appropriating the jewels, ornaments, and valuable personal property of their Rajah, when their country was annexed. They complain that the claims of the former landowners were not recognised. They were dispossessed in a body, and the lands were settled with the ryots then in possession, under a sort of Ryotwari system. That dispossessed body of men, thus reduced to beggary, along with their pensioned Rajah and his family, have been living among the people, and keeping their minds in a state of constant irritation. Few individuals of the generation which saw the country in the palmy days of the native Rajah remain. But another generation has risen, and the traditional and national sense of the wrongs which they complain of has been intensified.

It has burst out into a national revolt. It must be speedily put down. Many lives have already been lost, and many more will. With wild tribes of this description force must be used. A dash, a few sharp military strokes, and a simple offer of peace on mild terms, would be the best policy. Complaints may then be investigated, and justice, if necessary, done. Otherwise an insignificant affair may be converted into a long series of raids on the part of the innumerable tribes residing on our eastern frontier.—Friend of India.

THE TALOOKDAREE MAGISTRATES.

The experiment of creating a native magistracy in Oude is evidently to have a fair trial. The rules recently prepared and published by Mr. Wingfield are studiously designed to preserve at once the dignity and the responsibility of the talookdar. The deputy-commissioner is forbidden even to criticise, much less to censure, his acts. Any hostile comment must be sent to the chief commissioner, who reserves the power of modifying or withholding the opinion. The talookdar is invariably to be addressed with honour, and treated rather as a pupil to be trained than a subordinate to be snubbed.

The powers of the new magistracy as now defined are very extensive. The talookdar will hold an open cutchery every day, as, indeed, he has done from time immemorial. The hall must be free to everyone, a provision the chief commissioner ought rigidly to enforce. It will be the most effective check not only on the talookdar, but on the class who are really to be dreaded—the underlings who will strive to pervert his power to their profit. Serious charges will be either dismissed or sent at once to the European official. The procedure will be that of a non-regulation province, the talookdar or some near relative writing down a short abstract of the depositions like an English magistrate. The Indian system of written depositions taken at a distance from the judge and liable to be made up by the amlah is strictly prohibited. Charges such as burglary and theft the talookdar will try, but the proceedings will be sent up to the deputy-commissioner, who will pass sentence himself, thus acting in fact as a Criminal Court of Appeal. In cases of assault and affray, trespass, fraud, abduction, forgery, and false complaint, the talookdar will punish, but he is specially instructed to prefer fine to imprisonment. It is an object in Oude to avoid the increase of the convict population, and fines and stripes are substituted for other secondary punishments to a degree not without danger to the cause of justice.

All cases of a less heinous character will be decided by the talookdar himself without appeal. His power in these cases is limited to imprisonment for six months and a fine of Rs. 200, but he can inflict an additional six months in lieu of a fine. That power wielded by the owner of the land is quite sufficient to make him absolute master on his estates, to place him in a position of irresistible authority. It is also on the other hand quite sufficient to enable him to maintain order, and to put down that never-ending series of petty but unpunished crimes which is the opprobrium of our administration.

It seems to be a very general conviction in Oude that the talookdars will at once begin to abuse their powers, but the fear rests, we believe, on very slender foundation. An Asiatic judge, unless he takes bribes, has as little motive for committing injustice in ordinary cases as a European. He may be biased in favour of a priestly defendant. He would certainly do injustice against a European if he obtained a chance. But in the mass of cases among the tenantry he has little reason for partiality, and very great reason to seek that reputation for iron justice which in India, as elsewhere, will cover a multitude of sins. The danger with a native potentate is not of injustice, but of indolence. When the king sits in the gate, the oppressor is always risking his head. It is when he has buried himself in his harem that oppression, secure of impunity, becomes unendurable. Mr. Wingfield has taken precautions to compel the talookdar to do his own work, but it is on this point that the most jealous vigilance will be required. The deputy-commissioner should attend the native darbar as often and as unexpectedly as possible. At first the Rajah's dependants will be cautious, but as the scheme becomes established, a gang of courtiers will grow up round the central figure, the procedure will become loose, and abuses become as rank as in our own Courts.

It is in matters of civil right that the tehsildar has most temptation to abuse his authority, and in civil cases his authority, though wide, is strictly limited. His power is that of a collector, but every case can be appealed to the deputy-commissioner. The main duty, however, will be to hear complaints against his own tehsildars, and it is in this point that most will depend on the character of the talookdar. There is little chance of appeal, except to himself, and as the collection of the rent is involved in the authority of the tehsildar, the landowner has every temptation to support his agents against all the world. He would do so, however, as simple zemindar; and the only effect of the rules is to legalise, and, therefore, moderate a power the exercise of which it is impossible to prevent. The practical restraint will be not the record, but the certainty that a tehsildar who is incessantly quarrelling with the tenantry is an expensive luxury.

The rules as published strike us as singularly honest. There is no arrière pensée, no disposition to give the talookdar a barren honour hemmed round with restrictions till it is rather a vexation than a privilege. The talookdar is really a magistrate, and his conduct in that new capacity will settle the most important of all Indian disputes. If he shows, as many natives have shown, a determination to do justice, to allow of no oppression save what he may immediately command, and to regard the ryots as the springs of his own wealth, he will obtain and deserve a new position in the policy of the empire. A ruling aristocracy fairly linked into the British system would be a political support worth the sacrifice of anything, save justice. If, on the contrary, he rules, as most natives do rule, solely for himself, leaves all power to his entourage, and shuts his eyes to all oppression not immediately dangerous to his own ease, the experiment must be abandoned, and Government rest content to rely only on the bayonet, and dispense what justice they can to a suspicious people through an alien magistracy.—Friend of India.

THE MADRAS PROTEST AGAINST TAXATION.

The secret of the "official documents" has oozed out. Sir Charles Trevelyan and his council have taken their stand against Mr. Wilson. Their minutes have been published in the Madras Times, and there are the usual inquiry, alarm and threatened suspension of underlings, through whom, it is supposed, they were communicated to the editor. The impression, however, is current in Madras that the Governor is not sorry at their publication, if he was not privy to the fact. Whatever may be the issue, Mr. Wilson and Sir Charles Trevelyan are committed to policies so opposite and to opinions so contrary, that the position of one of them is seriously affected. The latter is prepared, we believe, to stake his position on the result. It is evident that the author of the minute cannot remain Governor of Madras if Madras is to be taxed according to Mr. Wilson's plans. When the Financial Statement of 18th February reached Sir Charles Trevelyan he was on his tour through the presidency. Alarmed at the extent and the character of measures against which he had protested previously, he at once hurried back to consult with his colleagues, and the result of the consultation is in the minute surreptitiously published. Apart from the ill-disguised feeling with which the opinions of Mr. Wilson are met in several passages, the objections of the Madras Council require examination. They are fraught with political importance. They are briefly these.

Mr. Wilson's financial statement may be masterly, but it is quite unsuited for India. Formed after the English model, and embracing the latest improvements of finance, it would have been an admirable measure to bring before the House of Commons. In England, from the system of representation, the decision arrived at would have been with the general consent of the people affected. The details would have been criticised by an enlightened public, and the conclusions adopted only after full discussion. To introduce measures into India which are the latest growth of English constitutionalism, to apply them without check, and in the absence of data, is most dangerous. The very fact that the measure has been made popular with the ruling class, by modifying the tariff in their favour, should lead us to distrust our first impressions. It is to the tens of millions of natives that we must look, not to the white aristocracy. Yet there is the debt, and the whole of our finances calls imperatively for permanent reformation. The debt has been increased by the mutinies forty millions sterling, and now stands at nearly ninety-eight millions, involving an annual payment in interest of four and a half millions. Let us accept it. It is not heavy when we look at it in the light of our increased revenue. It is only in the proportion of two and a half to the revenue, while the English debt is in the proportion of eleven to one. Develop the resources of India, and improve the administration, and it will cease to be felt. The opium revenue is not so precarious as is asserted. It has gone on steadily increasing, and there is no prospect of the cultivation of the poppy being extended in China. Even if there were, it is better to run the risk of a falling off in that item than to face the danger of imposing three such taxes as those on tobacco, trades, and incomes. How, then, is the deficit to be met? Mr. Wilson estimates it at six and a half millions in 1860-61. But where are the details of this estimate? It is well to condemn prospective budgets as Mr. Wilson does; but if we are to have English taxes, let us have the English safeguard of a minute estimate. There is no "frankness" in withholding it. The Madras Government is more interested than the public can possibly be. It is responsible for the wealth of thirty millions. The deficit will, no doubt, be much less. The revenue is increasing, the public debt will be partly redeemed by the new currency, the military reductions will be greater than Mr. Wilson seems to suppose. Still, whatever the amount may be, there is no reason for haste. There will be at the end of this month cash balances to the extent of £19,600,000. The paper currency will utilize these.

But if the national balance sheet must be re-adjusted, it should be done by reduction of expenditure not by additional taxation. By the former, we dispense not only with actual outlay, but with part of the machinery necessary for carrying on the administration. We thus turn unproductive tax-consumers into tax-payers, and add to the labour market the swarms of underpaid native officials who in Madras prey on the vitals of the people. No financial result can be obtained by reducing civil salaries. We must look to military expenditure. The Madras army has been already largely reduced. The new police is taking the place of the sepoy army. Something has been done in Bombay. But it is in Northern India that there is the greatest field for reduction. Numerous levies and Sikh regiments, the old army and the military police, still flourish; "establish an efficient civil police and limit the native troops to the number indispensably required as auxiliaries to the European force absolutely necessary." The new system of taxation is distasteful to the natives. To force it upon them would require a strong army, which would eat up the increased revenue, besides imperilling the existence of the empire. Why should Madras be forced into rebellion to bear the burdens of Bengal? It was never so prosperous, nor its revenues so thriving as at present. The land tax is being fixed, enams are being converted into freeholds, the products of European enterprise cover the hills, the new police is being organised, the Supreme and Sudder Courts are about to be amalgamated, the native revenue establishments are being revised. To let loose the agency necessary for collecting taxes on so contented a population would be to undo it all. The European officials are already too burdened to work the requisite machinery. And Mr. Wilson proposes to introduce his "three tremendous taxes" blindly, and to apply them to the varied peoples of India on no reliable data. There is no such folly in the case of reduction. "By the end of next year or soon after," income and expenditure, according to Sir Charles Trevelyan's plan, will be equalised to the full extent. Madras alone will yield more from the reduction of expenditure than the most sanguine estimates of the results of the three taxes. At present the surplus of the presidency proper is a quarter of a million sterling, and the average annual surplus since 1846-7 has been 70½ lakhs of rupees.

Unanimity in the Madras Council is very rare, but for once its members agree. Sir Patrick Grant and Mr. Morehead follow their chief. Mr. Maltby modifies the strength of his remarks somewhat, though agreeing substantially with his colleagues. The political danger is great; Madras is very poor; it will be impossible to collect the new taxes; the licence tax is abstractly just, but would yield little if it supersedes the present moturpha revenue; if the Income-tax must be carried out, its collection should be confined to one district of India as an experiment; in any case wait, suspend the proposed measures, refer to the Home authorities.

We need not recur, as we have so often done, to the desire of Madras for complete independence, which underlies the whole of the protest. Federalism may be the best thing for the empire, but as yet it is a unity. Nor need we do more than allude to the selfishness of the plea for exemption—that Madras has not mutinied, exposed by Mr. Wilson in his speech; to the delusive belief that Madras has paid an annual supply of seventy and a half lakhs for the past fifteen years; to the unfair imputation on Mr. Wilson and the insult to the European community—that the reduction of the twenty per cent. duties in the tariff was effected as a bribe for popularity on the one hand and support on the other. Europeans can afford to bear the insult. They have consciences, they do not love fraud as a rule; on them will the new taxes fall most heavily; it is they who are prepared to welcome taxation, which alone will save the empire. They are sick of anarchy, and are glad to be governed. Apart from all this the objections reduce themselves to two. The new taxes will excite revolt, which it will require a large army to suppress; the deficit will be quenched without taxation by reduction of expenditure.

As to the former, the Council wrote their protest in ignorance of the details of the taxes which they oppose. None condemned the tobacco excise more strongly than ourselves, when it appeared that a tax of 8 annas a seer was to be levied on the leaf. The fact that the impost will not, on the article as it is usually adulterated, exceed half an anna a seer, and will practically but little affect the consumer, removes from it all objection. The licence tax is admitted by Mr. Maltby to be abstractly just, to be old, to be suited to the traditions and habits of the people of India. In Madras it will be simply an extension of the existing moturpha. It is excessively light, and will add largely to the exchequer by the great sweep of its incidence. The petty trader and artisan are not too poor to pay one rupee a year for the security which they enjoy under our rule. The real difficulty is confined to the income-tax. In the first place that is but a temporary expedient created to meet a deficit which in a few years it will extinguish. The tax will cease in five years. Not only so, but provision is made for adapting it to meet the wishes and customs of the natives. The rich may compound by paying a lump sum, the poor are mulcted to the extent of but 2 per cent., a punchayut may levy the amount due by any district according to the usage or expressed desire of the tax-payers. That the collecting agency will be large, and the means at first intricate we believe, but a year's experience will make the machinery of the taxation work more easily than that for the collection of the land revenue. If Madras is so much poorer than Bengal, Madras will have the less to pay.

As to reduction, the Madras Council seems to be under the impression that if once the new taxes become law, all attempts at revision of expenditure will cease. Mr. Wilson has emphatically pledged himself to extensive reforms in the military charges. His plans for a strong European force, a small native army, an effective police, are more thorough than Sir Charles Trevelyan's. While the taxes are levied in such a way as to reduce discontent, where it exists, to a minimum, reduction and increase of revenue will go hand in hand in extinguishing the deficit, and will render its recurrence impossible. The effect of reduction will not be appreciable all at once. Nor can it be on the large scale imagined by Madras. What is to be done in the meanwhile? Is the empire to exist on the cash balances? By Sir Charles Trevelyan's vague plan the finances might be righted twenty years hence; by Mr. Wilson's an income-tax will become unnecessary in three.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

REWARDS TO NATIVES.—The Governor-general has ordered a khillut to be presented to the Rajah of Dalbhoom, in Singhbloom, for his good conduct during the disturbances, and a village to be given to Sao Mankee for his loyalty, in the same district.

STATE OF BENGAL.—The Bengal Hurkaru says, that as a sign of the extent to which the disorganisation of society has proceeded in the Moorshedabad district (the chief seat of the indigo disturbances), the Postmaster-general of Bengal has issued a notice to the effect that as bearers are not to be procured at present at Berhampore, dakh cannot be laid through that station from the Calcutta or any other post-offices until further notice.

A REFRACTORY RAJAH.—The Government has at last decided to take stringent measures against Rajah Ram Sing to bring him to his right senses. The above-mentioned Rajah, our readers will remember, is a semi-independent chieftain of the Cossyah Hills. This man some time ago levied a sort of cess on all itinerant merchants, as well as on all goods passing through his territories. The British Government desired him to do away with this tax, but he appears to have refused to do so. Troops have already been despatched to that part of the country to enforce the orders of the Government.

A COMMERCIAL FAILURE.—We have to announce the failure of the respectable Armenian firm of Messrs. Owen Brothers. The cause of this is believed to have been over-speculation in country produce and losses in Rangoon and Batavia. Their liabilities are said to be four lakhs of rupees, but they are expected to declare a good dividend, perhaps twelve annas in the rupee.

BAEOD DUKINARUNJEE MOOKERJEE, who received a jagher in Lucknow from Government, is the author of a pamphlet in praise of her Majesty the Queen of England and the whole Government of India. He applied to the Supreme Government to send copies of his work to England to her Majesty and the members of the Government. The President in Council declined doing so, as the Government, except in very special cases, did not send presentation copies of literary works to her Majesty.

EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT.—It is now settled that all European masters in the educational department must acquire a knowledge of the vernacular of the district in which they are employed, failing which their services will be dispensed with. The next thing to be done is to raise their salaries; for no competent European possessing any acquaintance with the native classics would continue on the miserable pittance doled out in the department.

RETRENCHMENT.—Mr. Wilson's proposition to reduce public expenditure as much as practicable is now being carried into effect in every department of the public service. By a recent revision of the establishment attached to the Irrawaddy flotilla, a saving of Rs. 16,000 has been effected by Government.

A NATIVE CIRCULAR.—We take the following translation of the circular sent to the ryots in the Moorshedabad district from the Phoenix:—"To the inhabitants and Mondols of Chamra Chouck Barari village. We are writing you that we, the inhabitants of some 20 or 25 villages, have consulted together not to sow indigo any more; if any amla of any indigo factory force you to do so, then you will drive them away; if they oppress you, give us notice by message or dunka (drum); if hearing these words any one do not agree, then if it be a Hindoo he will eat beef, if a Mussulman he will eat pork. To defray the expenses of lawsuits each ploughman will pay one rupee, coolie eight annas, and women eight annas. If any one do not consent to this counsel, then their fathers are asses. When you will hear the dunka on the side of Pathorkoonda and Banka then you will assist them. Know this well."

THE NAWAB NAZIM OF MOORSHEDABAD having a desire to visit Europe lately applied to Government for permission to do the same, as also for an additional allowance of 25,000 rupees a month for his expenses whilst travelling. The permission to travel was granted by the Governor-general, who was of opinion that every possible encouragement should be given to Indian noblemen to visit England; but instead of the additional monthly allowance required by his Highness, a grant of 80,000 rupees was proposed from the Nazimat Fund.

NATURALIST FOR CHINA.—The Asiatic Society petitioned Government that a naturalist should be sent with the China expedition, and Mr. Blyth, of the Asiatic Society's Museum, was proposed as a suitable man. But Lord Canning has negatived it. This is much to be regretted; the expense would have been a mere trifle, while the interests of science in a terra incognita would have been materially advanced. Lord Dalhousie took a very different view in the Burmese expedition.

COMPENSATION.—The Secretary of State has repudiated the recommendation of the Governor-general to distribute the whole crore of rupees, sanctioned for compensation to sufferers by the mutiny. The State Secretary only admits the amount of adjusted claims, and no more. There will, therefore, be no rateable sum to be paid should the claims be less than the crore, and the unhappy sufferers must be content with receiving one third of their losses as admitted by the Commissioners.

MR. EDEN has been called upon by the Lieutenant-governor to submit an explanation of his conduct with regard to the charge brought against him of exciting and abetting the insurrection of the ryots in Bengal, and that that gentleman has submitted a most able one. We trust that for the clearing of the characters of both Messrs. Eden and Grant it may be published if deemed satisfactory, and if not, that nothing may prevent Mr. Grant from punishing Mr. Eden as he deserves.

H.M.'s 42ND HIGHLANDERS.—The following address was delivered by Brigadier General Sir R. Walpole, K.C.B., in front of the troops assembled at Bareilly on 7th April, 1860. "I have been directed by the Commander-in-Chief in India to present to you, Quartermaster J. Simpson, Corporal A. Thompson, Privates J. Davis and Duncan Miller, all of the 42nd Royal Highlanders, the Victoria Cross, which her Majesty has been pleased to confer on you to commemorate acts of distinguished bravery performed before the enemy during the recent campaign in India. This decoration is the most honourable that a soldier can wear, having been instituted by the Queen, and being conferred equally on all ranks of the army, for acts that deserve to be remembered by the present generation, and handed down to your successors. In the present instances, Quartermaster Simpson and Corporal Thompson earned this honour by rescuing wounded comrades from the hands of an implacable enemy—a noble act of distinguished courage. Privates James Davis and Duncan Miller were selected from a small band of the 42nd regt., who against immense odds, by their discipline and valiant behaviour added fresh laurels to those already worn by that fine corps, and maintained the honour of their country and of the service to which they belong. It is particularly gratifying to me to be the person selected to present the decorations, as all these acts of valour were performed while the corps formed part of a force serving under my immediate orders, and I was a witness to the very distinguished conduct of these soldiers, and of the regiment generally. To the young soldiers present, many of whom have joined the 42nd regt. since the termination of the campaign, I wish to give the following advice:—Imitate the conduct of these brave men, assist in maintaining the discipline of your corps, follow in the footsteps of the distinguished soldiers who have preceded you, and thus sowing the same good seed, you may expect and hope to reap the same reward."

THE BATTLE OF BENIAGRAM.—On the night of the 19th of March, Mr. Patrick Lyon was sitting in his factory of Beniagram, entertaining his brother, Mr. T. Lyon, and Mr. Wood, deputy commissioner of the Sonthal Pergunna. After spending the evening pleasantly together, they went to bed, but were aroused about 1 a.m. by a servant coming in to tell them that drums were heard beating in the villages to the south of the factory, some three or four miles distant. They sat up for some time listening to them, and wondering what they signified, for they had then no reason to fear any attack upon the factory, as there were then no rumours abroad about the intentions of the ryots. On the next day, Messrs. T. Lyon and Wood, apprehending no danger to the factory, left Mr. P. Lyon there. About 8 o'clock of that evening one of the servants came in to say that men were assembling in the adjacent villages, and soon after Mr. Lyon heard drums beating all around, accompanied by the terrific yelling of an immense multitude of people. Mr. Lyon, fearing a night attack, posted all his burkundazes in and around the bungalow, and frequently went out to reconnoitre during the night fully armed. The horrid sounds continued till between 12 and 1 a.m., when they died away, and all was quiet. About half-past seven on the morning of the 21st it was reported that the people were assembling in large numbers on every side of the factory, at about three-quarters of a mile distant. Large reinforcements were seen through the telescope of the anxious planter to be continually arriving. About eight a.m. the different bodies, numbering in all upwards of five thousand men, began to converge towards the mat bungalow occupied by the solitary European with his six or seven burkundazes. Those from the south (and this was the most numerous body) came to within about a furlong of the factory, and there halted. Those from the west began advancing rapidly and more boldly. Mr. Lyon, fearing that he might be attacked on all sides at once, thought it necessary when this body arrived within about sixty or seventy yards of the factory to give them a couple of shots, which had the effect of turning them back from that direction. The greater part of this body seemed then to disperse. The smaller portion took a circuitous route to join the body coming from the south, which now began to advance with loud shouts and yells. Just at this moment the smoke of a steamer appeared in sight, which some of the factory people soon hailed. She turned round and steamed up abreast of the factory. Mr. Lyon then went out to the bank of the river, about 100 yards distant from the bungalow, to ask for assistance. On seeing this the rioters began to advance along the bank of the river, so that Mr. Lyon, afraid of being cut off from his men who were guarding the bungalow, was forced to raise his rifle to his shoulder, with the intention of intimidating them, at the same time walking towards the bungalow. Thinking that he fled, the rioters made a rush upon him. Mr. Lyon then stopped, faced them, and fired his rifle twice amongst them. One of his servants immediately took the rifle from his hand and gave him another double-barrelled gun, which he also discharged. This seemed to stagger them a little, but they still continued to come on. Mr. Lyon then fired several shots with his revolver, and at this moment the jemadar and burkundazes of the factory rushed in and commenced cutting right and left with their swords and battle axes. The assailing party then retired a short distance, and immediately afterwards four officers of the Pioneer steamer landed to Mr. Lyon's assistance. On seeing this the great body retreated about a quarter of a mile, and a boat's crew was left in the factory, the captain of the steamer promising to return and anchor off the ghat at night. On the steamer's leaving, the rioters began to re-assemble, and a number of men armed with spears and shields were seen going about among them, and endeavouring to excite them to another attack, but seemingly with not much success, as they collected in groups, some sitting down, seemingly consulting together. Little more than an hour had thus passed, when the Chunar steamer hove in sight, and Mr. Lyon went on board to ask for assistance. The Chunar turned round and anchored above the mob, whereupon they began to withdraw, and shortly after dispersed. Mr. Lyon received a supply of eleven muskets and bayonets with ammunition from the Chunar. The rioters were armed chiefly with sticks, but a considerable number had spears and shields. They attacked the dufferkhanah of the factory, and broke open several boxes, and carried off their contents, consisting of cloth, money, papers, &c.—Hurkaru.

CAN THIS BE TRUE?—Our readers will doubtless remember the graphic accounts which frequently appeared in our columns some months ago, from the pen of "Our Behar Correspondent," describing the ravages of the epidemic which swept over the districts from Gya to Benares. They will also, perhaps, recollect how earnestly the same writer exhorted the Government to send supplies of quinine for the use of the sufferers, as they would thereby, at a trifling cost, be enabled to save the lives of thousands. We ourselves, fully satisfied of the truth of the accounts, strongly urged on the Government the adoption of some immediate measures of relief. It would have been, perhaps, utopian, to expect that such representations or arguments should obtain from celestial heights a timely and seasonable remedy; such results we have ceased to expect, and are not astonished, therefore, to find that, with the exception of one isolated attempt to relieve the mass of suffering humanity in a single district, no further efforts of benevolence were made. The agitation, however, was not entirely without effect. After thousands and tens of thousands had been swept from the face of the earth by a disease which a few grains of quinine would have effectually stayed, the usual heavy machinery of the Indian Government commenced its slow and stately movement. When the disease was at its height, the business of the courts nearly stopped, the railway works brought to a standstill, and the bosom of the Ganges studded with floating corpses; then, a high local officer first dipped his pen into the ink, and deigned to make an official representation. When the plague had nearly run its course the medical department took up the cue, and the superintending surgeon called for reports from his subordinates. By the time that the appointed number of victims had passed into the land of shadows, the fact of a general desolation having occurred was officially laid before the Government, and the Lieutenant-Governor had the opportunity of performing the office of a national coroner on a large scale, and sitting on some 100,000 dead bodies! The official reports submitted entirely corroborate the statements of "Our Behar Correspondent," not only as regards the extent of the epidemic, but the certainty also with which it yielded to the most simple treatment. In the jail at Patna, under the able treatment of Dr. Sutherland, there were not more than seven or eight deaths in the year, though no less than 527 patients were attacked with the disease. In Shahabad not a single case that came into the hands of Dr. Hutchinson was fatal, while hundreds were dying in the town and suburbs!—Englishman.

CALPEE.—The 8th company of Sappers and Miners, under command of Lieutenant Colaghan, are now employed destroying the fort of Calpee; on the 3rd April the whole of the left front was blown up, the demolition being most complete and satisfactory. On or about the 10th about 900 feet of masonry, being the front face and bastions, were to be destroyed by the explosion of mines; and by the 15th the fort would be levelled to the ground.

DEATH OF MAJOR MACPHERSON.—The Calcutta papers announce the death, on the 16th April, at the residence of his brother, Dr. Macpherson, of Major Macpherson, political agent at the court of H.H. the Maharajah of Gwalior. "As a political officer, (says a Bengal contemporary) the deceased possessed great abilities, and was one of the foremost among those who rendered important services to Government during the most critical period of the mutiny. Prior to the appointment of the deceased officer at the court of Scindia, he had rendered important services in the Kote districts, where he exercised an influence by force of character similar to that of the late General Nicholson among the tribes of the Punjab frontier. Now that Sir Robert Hamilton and Colonel Durand have retired from the Indian service, it will be difficult to find a successor to Major Macpherson. The old race of politicals is dying out. With the policy of annexation in the ascendant, to which we have reason to know, from our personal knowledge of the late political agent at Gwalior, Major Macpherson was opposed, the diplomatic department of the empire no longer commands the services of the flower of the Indian army. The loss of Major Macpherson will be deeply felt in Central India.

DERA ISMAEL KHAN, April 6.—Preparations for the expedition against the Wuzerees are approaching completion. It will leave Tak about the 15th. General Chamberlain is here, and leaves for Tak on the 10th. The force will consist of Guides, 1st Punjab Infantry, wing of the 3rd Punjab, 25th (Goorkhas), wing of 4th Punjab Infantry, wing of the 1st Sikhs and 4th Sikhs, the Peshawur Mountain Train and some Artillery, from Kohat or Bunnoo, and Dera Ismael Khan; also 100 sabres 3rd Punjab Cavalry, and 100 sabres Mooltanee Cavalry. Tak is a place on the right bank of the Indus, thirty or forty miles from the river and a hundred and fifty miles S.S.W. of Peshawur. This is to be the starting point of the expedition.

LIEUT.-COL. TODD.—The following district order has been issued by Brigadier McCausland, commanding Gwalior district, on the abolishing of the appointment of assistant adjutant general to Gwalior division, viz.:—"Morar, 6th April, 1860.—With reference to the G. O. C. in C. of the 23rd March, 1860, abolishing the appointment of assistant adjutant-general of the Gwalior division, Captain Scott, of H.M.'s 71st H.L.I., officiating major of brigade at Morar, is directed to receive charge of the records and books of the office from Lieut.-col. Todd, and to perform the duties of district staff until further orders. Although but a short period under his command, Brigadier McCausland cannot allow Lieut.-col. Todd, of H.M.'s 14th Dragoons, to leave without expressing the gratification he has received from the able manner in which that officer has carried on the duties of his office, which has been so fully acknowledged by Brigadier-general Sir R. Napier, late in command of the Gwalior division."

THE RYOT DISTURBANCES.—We learn, says the Englishman, that in the course of the investigation of cases against ryots, at Kishnaghur, for refusing to fulfil contracts, an agent or Mookhtear was discovered instigating the people to resist and to deny their engagements. The man was seized, brought before the magistrate, tried, and sentenced to six months' imprisonment, and a fine of 200 rupees, with an additional six months in case of non payment. We hope some exertion will be made to trace out the antecedents of this agent, for it is supposed that he has been employed by others, and men of more importance, to fan the flames in the indigo districts. We also hear that a few ryots have been fined ten rupees each, and threatened with imprisonment for refusing to fulfil their contracts.

PESHAWUR, April 5.—One of those canards which so often spring up in bazaars to do a deal of mischief has just led to a serious disturbance in this station. It was all about Mr. Wilson's finance scheme, which the natives are imagining to be nothing less than based upon this mode of taxation—the head of a family to pay 35 rupees for himself, 30 rupees for his wife, 5 rupees for each of his children alive, and 2-8 rupees for every one he may have buried! With this extraordinary notion urging them on, a mob of nearly 4,000 of the populace of Peshawur emerged from the city yesterday morning and proceeded to the residence of Captain James, our commissioner, and assailed it with sticks and stones, breaking the windows and otherwise damaging the place. Intelligence was immediately conveyed to the Brigadier, who sent up the 17th Irregular Cavalry, under Captain Hickey. The Cavalry was soon on the ground and charged the crowd, without, however, using their swords. The mob was quickly dispersed, leaving four of their number dead on the ground, where they had been trampled under the horses' feet. The city gates were immediately closed, and bodies of police placed at each entrance to call to account the people who might be on their return; and other energetic measures were adopted to preserve the peace, which have had the effect of restoring tranquillity in the place. Still fears are entertained of other demonstrations of the kind, and the authorities are sleeping with one eye open.

THE COMMISSARIAT.—The annual report of Commissariat expenditure for the year 1858-59 has been submitted to the Supreme Government. The total outlay exceeds three crores of rupees.

H.M.'s 73RD REGIMENT.—A valuable gold watch and chain, &c., have been presented to Mr. James White, Madras apothecary, by the non-commissioned officers and men of H.M.'s 73rd regiment, on his leaving that corps on voluntary service for China. Engraved on the watch is the following inscription:—"Presented to Mr. James White by the non-commissioned officers and men of H.M.'s 73rd regiment, as a mark of respect and esteem for his unremitting attention and kindness to the sick while apothecary to the regiment, from the 26th of April, 1858, to 23rd February, 1860."

THE DECCAN.—We (Daily Times) have news from Jaulnah to the 8th April. The weather was becoming very oppressive, and already a scarcity of water was being experienced. The detachment, consisting of three companies of the 18th Royal Irish, under Major Sargent, had left the previous day to join regimental head quarters at Secunderabad, and it was feared that they would not by any means have a pleasant march—certainly not a cool one. The families of the 3rd Madras Europeans from Kamptee were expected in a day or two, and we are rejoiced to learn that the cholera had quite disappeared from their camp. Head quarters of the regiment was marching down via Hoossungabad and Asseerghur, and is not expected to reach Jaulnah until about the end of the month. The officers of the regiment will find it most difficult to obtain cover, most of the houses having been secured and prepared for the occupation of the men and families.

JACKATALLA, alias WELLINGTON.—Extract from the proceedings of the Madras Government, M.D., dated 3rd April, 1860, No. 1,305. Par. 13.—The proposition in par. 6 of H.E. the Governor's minute, 23rd February, 1860, i.e., to call the station of the European barracks, on the Nilgiri Hills, "Wellington" was first recommended in 1852, by the then Commander-in-Chief, Sir Richard Armstrong; and, although it was for the time overruled, several reasons exist for making the change of name suitable. There is no other place in India called "Wellington," and a new destination proposed to be given to this interesting military establishment could not be connected with a more appropriate name. Jackatalla is, as stated by the quartermaster-general in his letter dated the 15th May, 1852, the name of an obscure burgher village at the north-west extremity of the station, and a mile or two without its bounds. The Government now resolve that the station be called "Wellington" in all official documents, and that intimation be given to the Post-office department that all letters, &c., directed to Wellington, without the addition of New Zealand or the name of any other country, be sent to this place.

THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.—We learn from Dowleishwaram that Mr. Duffin, the assistant in charge of the telegraph office at that station (the young man who was compelled in self-defence to shoot down a toddy-drawer), has been acquitted by the magistrate, after five days' patient inquiry, of all culpability in that unfortunate affair; in legal phraseology he has only committed "justifiable homicide." The result is just what we anticipated; but we trust that the superintendent of electric telegraphs will adopt measures for placing his youthful assistants, now abounding all over the country, under some surveillance. Reports are current that some of the young officers of the department in charge of up-country offices are not quite so steady as they might be, and it behoves those whose duty it is to attend to these matters to cause a radical change in the system that now prevails, by which mere youths find themselves in positions in which the junior members of the civil or military services have never been placed, being almost from the earliest period of their service completely their own masters. They come out from England at the early age of sixteen or thereabouts, and after a short sojourn at the Presidency, where it is to be feared they sometimes indulge in expenses which their pay does not warrant, they are sent to an up country office, and find themselves free from all supervision, and so long as no one complains to their distant superior, they may play at just what game they please.—Daily Times and Spectator.

QUIT RENT.—Government on the 3rd April ruled that proprietors desirous of redeeming the quit rent on their land in the collectorate of Madras, will be allowed to do so at the rate of quit rent then actually payable upon it.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PARSEE FEMALE EDUCATION.—Lord Elphinstone, in a speech made at the exhibition of the Girls' Schools of the Students' Literary and Scientific Society, endeavoured to impress upon the Parsees the benefits that would accrue by the opening and fostering an English school for Parsee girls. The impression made by that speech evidently has taken root, and we now find that Parsees are willing to admit that it is impossible for a community to become highly civilised of which the female portion remain uneducated, and are taking effectual steps to remove that impediment to their advance. Mr. Manockjee Cursetjee, the third judge of the Small Cause Court, with a spirit truly noble, not only has given up a portion of his own mansion for the Parsee Female Seminary just opened, but has likewise devoted two of his daughters, in conjunction with Mrs. Smith, to the noble task of educating the daughters of Parsees, so as to make them true helpmates to their educated sons.

PUBLIC MONUMENTS IN BOMBAY.—More than seven years ago Lord Falkland presided at a public meeting in Bombay, at which it was resolved to raise subscriptions to aid the Wellington National Testimonial in England, and to erect a local memorial of the Great Duke, whose career was so identified with the Western Presidency. For the latter object a sum of Rs. 9,647 was raised. That has been allowed to accumulate till it is now Rs. 11,387. The people of Bombay have resolved to devote this, not to an obelisk as originally intended, but to "The Wellington Fountain." Designs have accordingly been called for. Bombay possesses statues of the Marquis Wellesley, Sir J. Malcolm, Mountstuart Elphinstone, Sir C. Forbes, Sir Jamesjee Jejeebhoy, Lord Cornwallis, and Mr. Norris, a Member of Council; also monuments to Sir James Mackintosh, Sir James Carnac, Jonathan Duncan, Capt. Hardinge, R.N., brother of Lord Hardinge, who captured the French ship Piedmontese in 1805, Mr. S. Babington, author of the Bombay Judicial Code, General Carnac, Clive's second at Plassey, and others.

NATIVE BARRISTERS.—Mr. Tyebjee Bhoymeah, a Mahomedan merchant of Bombay, intends sending his young son Budroodeen to England, for the purpose of being trained up as a barrister-at-law. One of Mr. Tyebjee's sons, Mr. Cumroodeen, is already a solicitor practising in the Supreme Court, having learned his profession in England; while Mr. Budroodeen, if he perseveres in carrying out his intention, will in a few years, if successful in his object, return as a "gentleman of the long robe."

DEATHS.—We regret to announce the death of Henry Scott, Esq., Civil Engineer Sind Railway, who departed this life on the 10th April. Mr. R. H. Thompson, Hoozoor deputy collector and magistrate of Broach, and recently gazetted to a similar place at Surat, died at Gogo on the 13th. The deceased had been suffering from several complicated internal diseases for months past. We have also to report the death of Mr. John Craig, one of the editors of the Bombay Times and Standard. Mr. Craig conducted that journal for some time with success, and gained a good reputation as a lively and pleasant writer.

LAWS FOR THE PARSEES.—The draft of a code of laws for regulating inheritance, &c., among the Parsees having reached the Legislative Council, and been referred to a committee, the Parsee Law Association have not been inactive in doing here what they think will further the object they have at heart. As it is likely that the opinions on the proposed measure of the chief authorities here will be invited by the Council, a deputation from the Association waited on the Judges of the Supreme Court, at the Judge's Chambers in the Court House, on Monday, April 21, to solicit their lordships' aid and support. A similar deputation waited on Mr. H. L. Anderson, Chief Secretary to Government, at his office in the Secretariat, on Wednesday afternoon.

FORJETT TESTIMONIAL.—A large and influential gathering of the friends and admirers of Mr. Charles Forjett, Deputy Commissioner of Police, took place on the evening of the 25th April, in the durbar-room of the Town Hall, for the purpose of presenting that gentleman with an address, expressive of the good will of the community, on his approaching departure to England. Among those present were the Hon. W. E. Frere; Rev. W. K. Fletcher; Drs. Wilson and Fraser; Col. Birdwood; Drs. Leith and Birdwood; Messrs. Dawood Sassoon and Son, Anderson, Hart, Wilkinson, Leeke, Ketterer, Hunter Erskine, Fleming, Angus, Morgan, Macfarlane, Green, Bentley, Cartwright, Cowie, Scott, Walker, Gardner, Gough, Smith, Workman, Broadhurst, Woolterton, and several others.

THE BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.—Mr. Forde, the chief engineer of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway, has been informed that his services have been dispensed with. According to the rules of the Company, a year's salary, and a free passage are to be given him; this will amount to Rs. 20,000. Mr. J. T. Green, who was expected to come out as chief superintendent of all the bridges from Ahmedabad to Bombay, has been declared by the medical board at home to be incapable of holding any such appointment in India, on account of his health. Captain Trevor, Deputy Superintending Engineer of Railways in Guzerat, goes home on six months' leave of absence, Captain Chamber acting for him.

EXTRAORDINARY QUADRUPEDAL BIRTH.—An extraordinary freak of nature was displayed on the 17th April, in the case of a goat giving birth to a kid, the upper portion of which was human, or rather monkeyish, and the lower like its dam. From the waist downwards the form was exactly that of a goat, while the upper extremities,—head, shoulders, and neck,—approached nearly to the human form: the head was covered with hair, but all the other parts down to the waist were bare, and the cuticle presented rather a light brown appearance. At the time it was discovered on the beach a few symptoms of life remained in this nondescript animal; but it expired shortly afterwards.

FIRE AMONG THE COTTON AT COLABA.—A fire broke out on the 20th of April at noon among the cotton lying near the harbour wall behind the Grant Buildings at Colaba, by which no less than seven hundred docras, of the value of about Rs. 12,000, the property of one of the chief cotton merchants in Bombay, Nansey Verjee, were utterly destroyed. Had the fire occurred at night it is most probable that the whole of the cotton stored at Colaba would have been consumed. It is somewhat singular that the same cotton merchant, Nansey Verjee, should have sustained a loss by theft, of forty bales of pressed cotton, only the night previous to the occurrence of the fire.—After several minor outbreaks, another very extensive fire occurred on the 26th, on the premises of the Apollo Press Company at Colaba, by which upwards of a thousand bales of cotton, valued at about Rs. 100,000, were destroyed. By great exertion the ravages of the flames were confined within a prescribed space, otherwise in all probability the loss would have been enormous. It seems now to be the confirmed opinion that some villanous conspiracy has been hatched for the purpose of raising the price of cotton, and that the late numerous fires in the cotton locality at Colaba have been the work of incendiaries.

SIR CURSETJEE JAMSETJEE'S VISIT TO ENGLAND.—Mr. Jugonnath Sunkersett gave an entertainment on Monday, April 21, in his Garden-house, Grant-road, in honour of Sir Cursetjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, a large number of European and native gentlemen being invited to bid the Parsee baronet farewell on his departure for England. Among the English guests we noticed the Hon. W. E. Frere, Mr. H. L. Anderson, Chief Secretary to Government, Captain Marriott, Sir Joseph Arnold, Colonel Barr, Mr. J. M. Erskine, Dr. Carter, Mr. Lewis, Advocate-general, Mr. C. J. Forjett, &c. Sir Cursetjee Jamsetjee was accompanied by his two brothers, Sorabjee and Rustumjee Jamsetjee. There were also present the brother of H. H. the Imaum of Muscat, the Chief of Zanzibar, Mirza Ali Mahomed Khan Ottoman Consul, Venayekrow Jugonnathjee, Bomanjee Hormusjee, Cowasjee Jehangeer, Dr. Bhawoo Dajee, Munguldass Nathoooboy, Veerjee Nansee, &c. A nautch, danced with unusual animation and grace, some wonderful feats of tumbling by Professor Buswana and his company, and the music of an English band, were the amusements of the evening. The grounds were very brilliantly and tastefully illuminated. It is rumoured that Sir Cursetjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy intends spending some seven lakhs of rupees in his visit to England and the Continent. It is said he is to carry with him splendid jewellery and other Indian valuables for presents to her Majesty the Queen, the Emperor of the French, and other high personages. Sir Cursetjee will be accompanied by one or two friends and a large retinue of attendants and servants.

Finance—Budget—Estimates—and Audit.

Financial Dept., Fort William, April 7, 1860.—The following resolution is published for general information :—

1. The vast expenditure which recent events have entailed on British India has been fully explained to the Legislature and to the public. The grave financial deficiency thereby produced has been stated without reserve. The causes which have occasioned, and do still continue to occasion, such an enormous outlay, have been recapitulated. The new taxes which will be raised, in order that the deficit (which may unavoidably exist even after the important reduction of expenditure), may be made up without having recourse to any more loans, in order that the remaining difficulties of the past and the present may be met without trenching on the resources of the future, have been explained in detail. A confident hope is entertained that, with the additional aid which the Government will now receive from its subjects of all creeds and races, the public income will be made equal to the expenditure, and the finances of the Empire restored to a sound condition.

2. But in order that the burdens of the people may be lightened, in order that the duration of certain of the taxes may be shortened, it is absolutely necessary that a strict economy be exercised. To reduce and regulate expenditure, as far as may be compatible with the efficiency of the service and the general weal, is a solemn duty which the Government owes to its subjects who pay the taxes. While on the one hand the Government requires from its people the taxes needed for the defence and administration of the country, it will on the other hand hold itself bound to take every precaution for the effective and judicious application of the moneys so levied.

3. Convinced that a wise liberality does in the end conduce to real economy, the Queen's Government in India has always shown itself disposed to maintain the salaries of its servants on a scale that is calculated to secure absolute efficiency. The present posture of affairs does now render it peculiarly necessary that such efficiency should be displayed on all matters, great and small, which relate to finance, so that everything needed for the good of the administration may be obtained at the most reasonable cost possible. And the government will demand and will positively expect such economical efficiency from all its servants. It is the real interest as well as the clear duty of all officers to do their utmost for the securing of public economy in all matters, even the most minute. The government grants liberal allowances on the understanding that every effort is used for the reduction or extinction of all extravagant or unnecessary charges: and it relies on the zeal and fidelity of its servants in the practising of such economy.

4. Now, the most important step towards securing financial economy will be the establishing of a system whereby a budget of imperial income and expenditure shall be prepared annually, so that the financial estimates for each year may be arranged, considered, and sanctioned by the Supreme Government of India before the year commences. The system prevails in England, and it will now be introduced and rigidly carried out in India. Before the commencement of each official year the Supreme Government will require careful estimates to be framed of the anticipated income and the proposed expenditure of the empire for the coming year. And after considering the various objects to be accomplished in relation to the means and resources for such accomplishment; after comparing the past with the proposed expenditure; after weighing the recommendations of the several Executive Governments and the heads of departments, the Supreme Government will allot and appropriate to each branch of the service, and to the several detailed heads within each branch, specific sums. The several Executive Governments and the departments will be charged with the due application of the sums assigned by the above Act of appropriation. The specific amount assigned will on no account be exceeded. If unforeseen emergency shall necessitate extraordinary expenditure, the Executive Government, or the local authority, will represent the case to the Supreme Government without whose sanction no additional expenditure must take place—unless the urgency of the circumstances is such that application for prior sanction is not possible, in which case the earliest report must be made, with the view of obtaining the subsequent sanction of the financial authorities.

5. The advantages of this budget system are manifold and obvious; but they may be briefly recapitulated here:—

Firstly.—The system ensures a complete review beforehand of the income to be expected, and the expenditure to be incurred in the year. Such reviews, when made after the event, however valuable they may be, cannot amend the past. The money has been spent, and the work done. The experience of those operations and those expenses cannot affect the finance of that year, however well it may serve as a guide for the succeeding year. But when the review takes place before the year commences, then it is one of provision and not of experience—the reviewing authority is the arbiter of schemes which have not yet become accomplished facts: the control is then practically operative, and effectively complete.

Secondly.—The system secures a scrutiny of expenditure which would not otherwise be originated; for when the expenditure of the coming year is to be adjudged item by item, recurrence is sure to be had to the items of the preceding year. Thus each part and detail of the expenditure is periodically revised, the necessity or otherwise of its continuance, or the possibility of its reduction, is constantly reconsidered, while the reasons of its augmentation are jealously sifted.

Thirdly.—The exigencies of the expenditure having been prudently considered, the system causes the ways and means of meeting such expenditure to be brought into immediate comparison. Such a balancing of future outlay and income is sure to produce severe economy. Even the exigency of the service is a relative thing; the necessity of a particular outlay may appear less urgent, when the means of providing for it are difficult; and the works of lesser urgency will have to give way before those of primary necessity.

Fourthly.—The system promotes the formation of imperial accounts. The Executive Government or governments all over the empire, and the various departments of state, must open a debtor and creditor account with the supreme financial authority. Each Executive Government or each state department is credited with the sum allowed by the imperial budget for every service. Against that amount will be debited the sums actually issued and expended on this account. These debit and credit accounts will be prepared and submitted month by month, and quarter by quarter, to the financial department of the Supreme Government. The effect of this method in ensuring care and regularity in the public expenditure must be great indeed.

Fifthly and lastly.—It lays the foundation of a real and true method of imperial audit. A definite standard will be laid down by the budget, a precise authority will be prescribed for everything: a definite limit on every point will have been fixed. Then an imperial audit will try every branch of the public expenditure by that standard; will ascertain whether that authority for every item is produced; will observe whether that limit has been transgressed. And as all expenditure is reconsidered and resettled at brief intervals, so will the order be prompt and concurrent; as the budget is fixed yearly so will the accounts based thereon be prepared immediately on the close of each period; and there will be an independent audit department examining the accounts month by month, quarter by quarter, year by year; to truly try and judiciously declare whether the financial orders of the supreme financial authority are regularly carried out by the responsible executive authority. As the budget will prescribe a really workable rule, recurring just before the period of expenditure, so the audit, coming, not after an interval too late for amendment, but continuously, and at the moment when alteration is possible, will ensure the rule being worked out.

6. Now it is evident that such a system as that above described, firstly, of budget and annual estimate, secondly, of account, thirdly, of audit, can only be matured and established after the lapse of several months. During the coming year 1860-61 the requisite arrangements can all be made in detail, so that by the year 1861-62 the system will be brought into full play. But the Government are so convinced of the efficacy of the system in enforcing immediate economy, that its partial introduction during the year now about to commence has been resolved on. Such introduction will doubtless not be complete; it will be superadded to, and not be allowed to supersede the organization already existing; for existing methods and departments cannot be dispensed with until a competent substitute shall have been provided. Such substitute cannot be duly prepared until the coming year 1860-61 is well advanced. In the meantime the partial and provisional introduction of the system at once will do decided good, so far as it goes—will afford practical experience to guide the Government in making permanent arrangements in future years.

7. It has therefore been resolved that estimates of probable income and proposed expenditure for all portions and departments of the empire during the coming year 1860-61 shall be immediately prepared in a manner as perfect as the circumstances would admit. These will, it is hoped, be prepared during May next, that is the first month of the year. Upon that the Supreme Government will frame one general budget for the whole empire, and will appropriate specific sums for each service in the manner already described; and such appropriation will operate absolutely as the limit of expenditure during the year. Each presidency, each local Government, each department immediately under the Supreme Government, will transmit an estimate of probable revenue and proposed expenditure to the financial department at Calcutta, in the form heretofore used for the anticipation sketch estimate. Such estimate has been already prepared, or is being prepared, by the accountants of the several local governments for transmission to the financial department at Calcutta. Where the estimate has not already been transmitted, the accountant will submit it to the Local Government, which Government will consider, upon its own responsibility, the various items of income and expenditure, and having made such revision or remark as it shall think necessary, will transmit it to the Supreme Government. Where the estimate has been already transmitted to Calcutta by the accountant, the Local Government will obtain a copy of it from that officer, and will transmit it to the Supreme Government, after consideration and revision as above described. It is hoped that this may be done without difficulty, and with the necessary promptitude. The Imperial budget now ordered will thus not supersede the existing estimates or returns, which will continue for the present to be prepared as heretofore. The local governments within the Bengal Presidency will enter in their estimates all their revenue and all their expenditure, except that for the regular troops. The same rule will apply to the administration of provinces under the direct control of the Supreme Government. For the Public Works Department, the budget system already prevails. The army portion of the general estimate will be prepared at the Military Department of the several presidencies. The Financial Department at Calcutta will estimate for all central and purely imperial or home charges. The several estimates which are to form the materials for the budget ought to reach the Financial Department at Calcutta by June 1 next at the latest.

8. The estimates will be prepared in the forms heretofore in use. The arrangement of headings may differ from that which obtains in England, but by the next year 1861-62, it is hoped that a close approximation to the English system in all its details may be attained.

9. It being essential that the Supreme Government should have ready at hand better means than heretofore of regulating the revenues of the State in all parts of the empire, it has been resolved to constitute at Calcutta, and under the Supreme Government, a central revenue department for all India. This department will concentrate information regarding the revenues in all parts of the empire; will advise the Supreme Government in all fiscal questions; will assist in prescribing general rules; and will keep the Supreme Government informed as to how those rules are acted up to.

10. It is obvious that this board will supply the Supreme Government with the most accurate information available in the final settlement of the budget.

11. The budget for the coming year having been framed with such degree of precision and completeness as existing circumstances and the shortness of time may permit, it will be equally desirable to establish at once an audit department which may periodically pass the accounts based on the budgets, and at the close of the year may examine and declare to the Supreme Government how far the provisions of the budget have been observed by the Executive Government and the departments. This audit board will in no wise interfere with or exercise authority over any Executive Government or department; but it will be an examining and reporting authority.

12. After long experience and recent inquiry of the most competent kind, an audit board of this description has been established in London, responsible to Parliament immediately. To this State and of every Colonial Government in the board the accounts of every department of the State and of every Colonial Government in the British empire are periodically submitted. The military and naval departments examine and pass their own accounts in detail, and an officer of the audit board carries on a daily detailed audit of such accounts; but ultimately, after such detailed audit of the accounts, an abstract of them is sent to the audit board in order that the aggregate may be finally passed by that board, who observe whether the limit of expense appropriated for each part and branch of the service has been observed. In these two departments, then, the audit relates to aggregates rather than to details; and is called technically "the Appropriation of Audit." In many departments, however, the audit board does itself audit not only the aggregates, but also the details pertaining to each aggregate, and this is called the "Detailed Audit." In any department whatever, whether subjected to "Appropriation Audit" or to "Detailed Audit," the board has the power of calling for the authorities, the vouchers, the accounts, of any item. The audit board permits to itself no discretion, and will disallow any sums in excess of the authorised limit. And even if, by reason of the sufficiency of the authority and voucher for an item, the board shall have finally passed it, notwithstanding that the expense shall appear to be unreasonable, the board would still draw attention to the expense, so that Government might, if it thought fit, adopt remedial measures. The audit thus arranged for does not occur at the close of the year only, but also month by month. For those departments which are subject to detailed audit by the board, accounts are received monthly; for those departments of which the aggregates only have to be audited according to the sums appropriated by the budget, and of which abstracts only are received by the board, still the board deputed officials to proceed to the office of such department and countersign the accounts as they are framed in detail day by day.

13. Now it is intended to constitute a similar imperial audit at Calcutta, with the same functions and powers as those generally described above. With the audit department as well as the budget, the system cannot thoroughly be brought into play until the close of the coming official year. But the foundation of the future audit department will be laid during this year, and the arrangements for the succeeding year 1861-62, will be perfected. Each executive governor and each department will transmit its accounts based on the budget of 1860-61 to the audit board at Calcutta; and whether the board be able to audit all details or not, it will see whether the limits of appropriation have been observed, and disallow excess, pending report to, and sanction from, the Supreme Government.

14. In the military department there is a financial commission already sitting. To that commission will be transmitted the accounts of the various departments of the army, after examination at the several presidencies; and the commission will transmit the aggregates (without the details) to the audit board for final sanction in reference to the budget.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, May 22, 1860.

TELEGRAPHIC COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA.

THE comparative failure of the Red Sea Telegraph renders it indispensable to construct some other line. It is evident that submarine cables are to be avoided as much as possible. Even if the coral reefs and sharp edges of sunken rocks fail to cut through the wire, the coating is liable to be injured to an extent that admits the sea-water and destroys the power of transmitting intelligence. Nothing could be more pointless and meagre than the messages received from India since the completion of the Red Sea line. They are either wholly unimportant, or barely intelligible, besides being seriously delayed by the defective state of the cable between Marseilles and Malta, and the absence of telegraphic communication between that island and Alexandria. The difficulty of relaying, or repairing a submarine cable is so great, that months and even years may elapse before a defect is remedied, to the exceeding prejudice of commerce and inconvenience of the Government. It is therefore most desirable that a land route should be adopted, where practicable, in preference to an oceanic line. In the present instance, such a course, though not entirely free from objections, is quite possible, and may prove highly advantageous to the countries which would be traversed. Between London and the Persian Gulf a line may be constructed that shall only twice pass under salt water, and each time for only a few miles. There are no physical difficulties in the way which cannot be overcome by a moderate degree of engineering skill, and those of a political nature are chiefly attributable to the jealousy of the French Government. So long as the British Ministry were content to receive an impulse—if not instructions—from the Tuileries, there was no hope of obtaining either material or moral aid from the Government in carrying out a project distasteful to their magnanimous ally. Now, however, that a salutary coolness and reserve are understood to have succeeded to the harmony produced by arrogance on the one side, and implicit submission on the other, there is a fair prospect of realising the scheme projected by the Euphrates Telegraph Company. We do not conceal from ourselves the dangers to be apprehended from the rude, fanatical inhabitants of the provinces through which the line must pass, but we are disposed to regard them as less formidable than the obstructions to direct submarine communication. If not all that might be desired, this overland route is the best that is obtainable, and for that reason we look forward with impatience to its early adoption.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

In "General Orders," dated Fort William, 30th March, 1860, we observe the reply of the Secretary of State to a military letter from the Governor-general in Council, 11th June, 1859, forwarding memorials from certain members of the Bengal Medical Service, and an appeal from Dr. Forsyth, Principal Inspector-general of that Presidency, against the provisions of the Royal Warrant of 1st February of that same year. Though unsuccessful in a few minor points, the memorialists have reason to congratulate themselves on the general result of their respectful opposition. A new Warrant was in consequence issued by her Majesty on the 13th January last, by which the rank of medical officers of the Indian armies is in all respects equalised with that fixed for the British Medical Service in the Royal Warrant of 1st October, 1858. Henceforth there are to be four grades in the Indian Medical Department, viz.:—1. Inspector-general; 2. Deputy-inspector-general of Hospitals; 3. Staff or Regimental Surgeon, to be called Surgeon-major after twenty years' service in India; 4. Staff or Regimental Assistant-surgeon. Every candidate for admission into the service must give satisfactory proof of his qualifications, and no assistant-surgeon will be eligible for promotion until he have passed a second examination and have served in India five years, two of which in regimental duty. A full surgeon, again, must have served ten years in India, two of which must have been passed with a regiment in that rank, or as a Civil Surgeon, before he can hope for the post of deputy-inspector-general of hospitals. The next grade is that of inspector-general, which is only obtainable after three years' service in the inferior rank. The rule of seniority is to be strictly observed with regard to the promotion of assistant-surgeons, except when incapacitated by any cause for the proper discharge of their duties; distinguished merit, however, being recognised by brevet. Above the rank of surgeon all appointments are to be given by selection, the grounds of which shall be stated in writing and recorded in the office of the Secretary of State for India. In order to maintain the utmost possible efficiency, all medical officers from the rank of assistant-surgeon to that of surgeon-major, both inclusive, will be placed on the retired list at the age of fifty-five years; and the two higher grades at that of sixty-five. A staff or regimental assistant-surgeon will rank as a lieutenant according to the date of his commission, and after six years service as captain. A staff or regimental surgeon takes rank as major according to the date of his commission, and a surgeon-major as lieutenant-colonel, but junior of that rank. A deputy-inspector-general stands as a lieutenant-colonel according to the date of his appointment; and an inspector-general as a brigadier-general, also according to his appointment—but in the field, or after three years' service in India as inspector-general, he ranks as major-general. This relative rank is in every way substantive rank, except that the senior combatant officer is always President at a Court-martial, and has the choice of quarters. In point of allowances for wounds and injuries received in action, medical officers are entitled to all the advantages possessed by combatant officers holding the same relative rank. They cannot lay claim, however, to compliments paid by garrison or regimental guards, in conformity with the "Queen's Regulations,"—see pages 29 and 30,—but, on the other hand, after twenty-five years' service in India, they may on retirement receive a step of honorary rank, without increase of pay, if recommended by the head of the department. Finally, to use the gracious words of our Sovereign, "Six of the most meritorious medical officers of the army shall be named My Honorary Physicians, and six My Honorary Surgeons."

A GOVERNMENT PAPER CURRENCY FOR INDIA.

THE most weighty objections to Mr. Wilson's scheme for a Government Paper Currency have been so forcibly, and at the same time so moderately, expressed by Mr. H. Nelson, of Madras, that we cannot do better than reproduce that gentleman's arguments. Assuming the advantages of a Paper Currency in all countries, and especially in India, Mr. Nelson begins by questioning the soundness of issuing Government notes by a Government establishment. In England it is now admitted by the best informed and most experienced economists that a "national paper currency should be completely severed from Government influence and control," and it cannot be doubted that this principle is at least equally applicable to India. Now, the circulation of notes is essentially the business of a banker, though he may not choose to issue them in his own name. All such business implies risk as well as profit. In the case of Government the risk may appear small, but it nevertheless exists, and under certain circumstances may prove to be very serious. For instance, if from any cause, commercial or political, a run takes place upon the Currency Commissioner's Chief Offices, or on any of his Branches, as his silver runs low he may be compelled to realise his Government Stock. But the greater his need, the greater will be his difficulty in disposing of his securities, and consequently the heavier will be his loss. And the more anxious he has been to do "a smart stroke" of business, the larger will have been his investment in Government Securities—if for no other object than to curry favour with the Government.

Suppose, says Mr. Nelson, that the present scheme had come into operation before the mutiny broke out, what would have been the consequences? what the conduct of Government? There would necessarily have been a run upon the Commissioners, who could have done nothing to meet it after their treasures were plundered and their supplies cut off. Besides, the great officers of the State in such an emergency would not have hesitated to apply to the payment and provisioning of their troops whatever money remained in the hands of the nearest Currency Commissioner. Such a desperate state of affairs may, perhaps, never recur, but panics oftentimes arise from less causes than a rebellion, and any depreciation in the confidence reposed by the natives in the integrity of the Government would be a matter for deep regret and fraught with perilous consequences.

Mr. Nelson next proceeds to inquire into the probability of banking operations being successfully carried out by a Government establishment. It is a business, of all others, that requires a natural talent and extensive experience, but the latter qualification cannot possibly have been acquired by members of the existing Civil Service, and even if men are to be sent out for that purpose from England, it will not be easy to procure anyone of more than mediocre ability unless the salaries are fixed at a very high rate. Again, if the Commissioners are taken from the Civil Service, they will necessarily be dependent on the Governor-general, from whom their future promotion will proceed. In short, it is not a line of business suited to Government, nor one likely to prosper in official hands. A Paper Currency is, nevertheless, most desirable, and, according to Mr. Nelson, may be advantageously introduced through the agency of the Chartered Banks in the three presidencies. He recommends a National Bank in each presidency, with branches and Currency Circles; the notes to be identical in every respect except as to the name of the presidency; and that one Government Director be appointed to each bank—for the privilege of issuing notes the banks to pay the Government annually a certain fixed sum.

The business of the banks he defines as follows:—"The issue of Notes and Bank Post Bills. The reception of deposits with or without interest. The granting of loans on the security of Government Stocks. The investment of assets in Government Securities. The discount of Government Bills, Mint Certificates, and private Bills. Advancing money on goods, merchandise, and bullion, and the purchase of bullion under an arrangement with the Mint," but "they should be prohibited from dealing in foreign exchanges, and the question of internal exchanges should be reserved for future consideration." Then as to the solvency of the banks, he suggests that one-third of the total amount of liabilities, exclusive of the proprietary capital, should always be retained in coined money, and the remaining two-thirds held in coined money, silver bullion, or Government Securities, and that their capital should be paid up and fixed at an amount that would completely guarantee their stability. Some minor details are also given, but the foregoing may suffice to illustrate Mr. Nelson's objections to the scheme proposed by Mr. Wilson, and the general outlines of the plan he recommends in its stead.

THE "TIMES" ON THE INDIAN ARMY.

To dilate on the inconsistencies and tergiversation of the leading journal were as idle a waste of time as to chase the shadow of a cloud, or to set traps for moonbeams. On Saturday morning, however, it surpassed all former aberrations from the straight path, and fairly eclipsed its most glaring contradictions of past times. The object it had in view was to support the ministerial project for discontinuing a separate European army in India, a measure which it has hitherto reprobated with characteristic earnestness and ability. It is never a pleasant task to swallow one's own words, but if it must be done the wisest plan is to open the mouth as wide as possible and gulp down all that is thrown into the chasm. Apparently acting on this principle, the Times not only retracts its former statements and opinions, but adds some gross inaccuracies to enhance the feat. It begins by assuring its readers that, with the exception of the contingent of the royal troops, there is now, strictly speaking, no army in India. "The quarter of a million of disciplined native soldiers has been destroyed. * * They are slaughtered, or they are driven into hiding, or they are forced back into the civil population." Such cool, audacious mendacity is probably unparalleled in the annals of the English press. Are the armies of Madras and Bombay annihilated, or driven into nooks and corners? Are the old Sikh and Punjab regiments cut to pieces, or have they slunk homewards to agricultural pursuits? There is, however, says the Times, "an immense quantity of miscellaneous levies," "an irregular and extraordinary force—a mere substitute for what is gone." "Of the old orthodox Indian army there is nothing but the officers, and some wrecks and relics of the corps which they commanded." In another place "this mere substitute" is described as "near half a million of military rabble," who are to be sent back to their rice-fields, as soon as we have "picked out an efficient police and draughted off an auxiliary force sufficient to garrison stations unfavourable to European life, and to do duties which in a hot climate Europeans do not advantageously perform." Then, the Company's European army has, we are told, "with a strange fatality followed the fate of the Sepoys. They have also disbanded themselves." "Of all the Company's force, therefore, there is next to nothing left." Twelve thousand European troops, the entire armies of Madras and Bombay, and not a few regiments of Sikhs, Punjabees, and up-country sepoy, are what the leading journal is pleased to regard as "next to nothing"—just as Mr. Disraeli spoke of the national debt with lofty scorn as "a mere flea-bite." The great military achievements of the Company's Europeans are not denied, but we are assured that "the hopelessness of unbroken Indian service—no vision ever so far off of a return to home except to die—gave a character of desperation to these corps, which induced a laxity of discipline." Why, there was as good a chance of returning home for a soldier in the Company's service as for one in the Queen's. The latter, if he went out to India with his regiment, looked forward to a longer period of servitude in that climate than one who entered the Company's army; and as to the discipline of the latter, it was at least equal to that of royal regiments in the East. However, if Ministers are permitted to have their way, there is henceforth to be only one Imperial army, "taking its tour of duty throughout the British Empire, in all its home provinces and foreign dependencies." There only remains to consider what is to be done with the officers of the "destroyed, dispersed, or disbanded" armies. Though many are already provided for by civil or police appointments, there are some still unemployed. An officer in the Company's army, says the Times, had often ten times the pay of an officer of the same rank in the Queen's. A few such prizes there may have been, precisely as a captain in the royal army, especially if he belong to the Guards, may find himself one fine morning gazetted to the governorship of a colony. Only that in the former case merit was the chief recommendation, while in the latter it is parliamentary interest or aristocratic connection. But as something must be done for the unemployed, as all cannot hold appointments worth two or three thousand a-year, the Times graciously suggests that, in the first instance, they should be selected for the special Indian Staff Department, but omits to take any notice of the numerous ensigns and young lieutenants who can scarcely be posted to the Etat-Major for some years to come. And thus ere long every vestige of the Company's Raj—except the mighty empire itself—will be effaced, and our children will be taught by solemn pedagogues that the East India Company fell by reason of its rapacity, and because it indulged its soldiers and oppressed its people—and nothing will be said of its justice, forbearance, and moral grandeur.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

RECALL OF SIR CHARLES TREVELYAN.

MR. DANNY SEYMOUR, prefacing his question by observations upon the views developed by Sir C. Trevelyan in his minute, and upon the motives which had prompted its publication, inquired whether it was true that he had been recalled from the governorship of Madras? He eulogised the character of Sir Charles, and the reforms he had carried out, and characterised his recall, if it had been sent out, as a hasty step. The views of Sir C. Trevelyan were shared, he said, by others, and he read the opinions of Mr. Malby, one of the ablest civilians of Madras, endorsing those views, and condemning the financial policy of Mr. Wilson.

Sir C. Wood said he should abstain from following Mr. Seymour into the details into which he had entered, and from discussing any plan of taxation for India. The ground for the recall of Sir C. Trevelyan was quite independent of the merits of his scheme; it was simply his most improper act in publishing his minute. That minute was a most able and excellent document; but it was quite another question whether it should be published to the world. This was done, too, without the concurrence or knowledge, and even against the opinion, of the other members of the Madras Government, by Sir C. Trevelyan, who had avowed and justified the act. Much as he regretted the loss of so able a man, the Home Government would, in his opinion, be wanting in their duty, however painful to them, if they passed over such an act of insubordination, —an act subversive of all authority, the mutiny of one governor against another.

Mr. BRIGHT said the question was one of a somewhat painful character, and he quite understood the difficulty in which Sir C. Wood was placed. He had considered the budget of Mr. Wilson, and did not deny its ability; but the fault he found with it was that it proposed to balance income and expenditure by imposing new taxes. Sir C. Trevelyan was strongly of opinion that Mr. Wilson's scheme was not a wise one for his Government, and that it was not necessary to raise new taxes, but that the balance might be effected by reducing expenditure, and he wrote a most able minute, which showed him to be more of a statesman than the author of the Calcutta scheme. But the question was as to the course taken by him in publishing his minute. This course was most unusual and contrary to official etiquette, and he could not join Mr. Seymour in condemning Sir C. Wood. The withdrawal of Sir C. Trevelyan from Madras would, however, be deeply regretted; though not a judicious subordinate, he had proved himself a wise governor, and he (Mr. Bright) hoped Sir C. Wood would study his minute with care, as it would enable him to modify and greatly improve the project of legislation proposed at Calcutta.

In the discussion which succeeded,

LORD PALMERSTON said he concurred in the general tribute to the ability and honesty of Sir C. Trevelyan, and his determination to do his duty without regard to consequences. But this was an occasion on which all personal considerations must yield to a sense of duty in those who were responsible for the conduct of public affairs. In the case of such an act of insubordination, such a violation of official duty, attended with so much hazard, the Government had no option, and he could not understand how a man so versed in official duty, and so well aware of the consequences of such an act, could have been blind to its character.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MAY 15. INDIA.

Lord CLANRICARDE, in moving for a despatch from Mr. E. H. Lushington to the Commissioner of the Nuddea District relating to the treatment of natives by European planters in India, and for the report of Mr. Reid to the Lieutenant-governor, referred to in the above despatch, presented two petitions from certain natives in India, praying for legal reforms and for admission into higher offices of Government than are now open to them. He prefaced his motion by detailing the heads of the petitions and wishes of the petitioners, which were certainly of a most comprehensive and radical character, and stated that the matters to which he particularly wished to call attention were the administration of justice and the formation of the Legislative Council. The total absence of anything that deserved the name of an administration of justice in India was so notorious that the local courts had been described as terrors to honest and well-disposed persons. It was owing to the unsatisfactory state of these courts that the recent indigo riots had occurred in India, for, while on the one hand the ryots had in many instances been treated like slaves, the indigo planters, on the other, who had invested capital, deserved every protection. The trade in indigo was profitable enough to the planters, but the natives were averse from its cultivation, as it was not very profitable to them, and yet they were "compelled" in some sort to enter into contracts for the production of a certain amount of indigo at a certain price. Both parties tried to overreach the other, and the result was that hardly a single contract was fairly carried out. Force was therefore often resorted to by both sides, for, if the planters maltreated the natives in a way to which slaves were strangers, the natives attacked the factories and destroyed much property. He recounted the proceedings of the Government in reference to these disturbances, and condemned in the strongest terms the hastily-enacted law of the Government, whereby any man guilty of a breach of contract was declared guilty of a criminal offence. This bad administration of justice, however, did not alone affect the poor ryot, but equally oppressed the highest zemindars and rajahs, and in some cases the grossest injustice had been committed by the Indian Government to obtain judgments in its favour. He proceeded to consider the constitution of the legislative body, and contended that the present state of our finances in India imperatively called for some improvements in it. Briefly adverted to Mr. Wilson's financial schemes, the attacks of Sir C. Trevelyan upon them, and the recall of that gentleman, he remarked, in conclusion, that he concurred in the opinions of the petitioners that local Legislatures and local representative Governments were absolutely necessary for the welfare of the people of India.

Lord ELLENBOROUGH described the alterations which had taken place in the Legislative Council since the year 1853, and protested against its exclusive arrangements. He considered that the Governor-general and Council, in cases of emergency, should have the power of passing instantly any Act of Parliament, and that a consultative body would be a beneficial addition to the Governor and his Council. To this consultative body a certain number of native gentlemen should be admitted, as it was important that the feelings and prejudices of the inhabitants should be adequately represented, and not almost totally ignored, as at present. He could not concur with the strong denunciations of Lord Clanricarde against the planters. They were as a class a beneficent body of men, and to them much of the improvement and prosperity of India was due. There were, of course, exceptions, but he believed that most of the cases of violence which had been brought against them were not chargeable against those who resided on their estates, but against men who speculated without any interest in the land, but merely to obtain large interest on their own or on borrowed money. If, however, there were violence on one side, there was great fraud on the other. But the complaint of both parties was that in case of violence, or in case of fraud, neither of them could obtain justice for sixteen months—a practical denial of all justice. If the proposed Indian income-tax were carried, he trusted some part of it would be expended in a better administration of justice. He thought that all disputes between planters and ryots should be settled by circuit judges, and suggested the appointment of "protectors," to bring about a compromise between planters and ryots in cases of differences. In regard to Sir C. Trevelyan, whom he eulogised in the very highest terms, he said that it is not in what Sir C. Trevelyan says against the proposed system of taxation that there is danger, but in the neglect of his advice.

The Duke of ARGYLL said there would be no objection to produce the papers moved for as soon as they arrived in this country. He could not agree in the strong condemnation passed on the Legislative Council by Lord Ellenborough; still, he thought its constitution was not so good as it might be, and that some changes might be requisite. He regretted, also, that he could not concur in the sentiment that Sir C. Trevelyan was justly entitled to the praise either of the House or of the Executive Government. The action of the Government in this case was based, not upon the ground of the merit or the demerit of Sir C. Trevelyan's particular views, but on the conviction of the absolute necessity for upholding the authority of the Government of India and enforcing due submission on the part of its subordinates.

After some remarks from Lord LYVEDEN and Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY, the petition was ordered to lie on the table.

EAST INDIA COMPANY.

A special general meeting of this Company was held on Wednesday, May 16, at the India-house, Leadenhall-street, for the purpose of taking into consideration the correspondence between the Secretary of State for India in Council and the Court of Directors, relative to the future management of the affairs of the Company; Colonel Sykes, Chairman of the Board of Directors, in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN said the meeting had been specially called for the purpose of taking into consideration a subject of vital importance to the Company. A correspondence had taken place between the Board of Directors and the Secretary of State in Council for India, on the subject of a Bill which the Secretary of State had signified it to be his intention to bring into Parliament, in order to take out of the hands of the East India Company the power of managing its own affairs and to transfer that power to the Government. It was expected that the Bill would have been already introduced, or at least that a copy of it would have been sent to the Board of Directors; but as neither of these things had taken place, it was not in the power of the present meeting to argue upon facts; they were left, therefore, to speak simply according to what might be their own impressions. After a brief review of the provisions of the Act of 1833, by which the monopoly of the China trade possessed by the Company was abolished, and of the provisions of the Act of 1855, which altered the constitution of the Board of Directors, the hon. and gallant gentleman referred to the Act of 1857, by which the Government of India was taken out of the hands of the East India Company altogether. The whole property of the Company was taken from them, the very house in which they were then assembled itself included. His impression had always been that the India-house was part of the assets of the Company, and he was confirmed in that belief by Sir Charles Grey, who was of opinion that so long as the Company continued a corporate body it could not be left without a domicile. Nevertheless, the Company was at present in this condition:—they were a corporate body with a capital of twelve millions of money; which twelve millions they might within one twelvemonth of the passing of the Act have demanded from the Government, and have carried on trade with it if they had thought proper to do so; but they had agreed to accept £630,000 per annum, together with the guardianship of the security fund. In case of a failure in the revenue of India the Court of Directors had a right to go to the security fund wherewith to pay the dividends. That was a vast power, for between this and the year 1874 nobody could tell what would be the state of India, or whether there would be any revenue from India out of which to pay their dividends. But by way of economy—a species of economy which a mere huckster would repudiate—and in order to save the paltry sum of £1,800 per annum, the Secretary of State for India was going to bring in a Bill to remove the last vestige of power out of the hands of the Company, and to wipe out its very name, leaving it nothing but a nominal existence under the charter. Such was the arrangement that was now contemplated.

Mr. CRAWFORD, the secretary, then read the correspondence between the Directors and the Secretary of State for India. On the 4th of April, 1860, the Secretary of State for India informed Colonel Sykes of the intention of Government to bring in a Bill to transfer the capital stock of the Company to the Bank of England. On the 7th of April Colonel Sykes asked for information as to the details of the Bill. On the 13th of April the Secretary of State for India promised to forward a copy of the Bill as soon as it was drawn.

The CHAIRMAN said that no copy of any Bill had yet been furnished; it therefore rested with the Court to determine what measures should be taken.

Mr. ARBUTHNOT asked whether it was the intention of the Directors to submit any motion to the Court?

The CHAIRMAN: No.

Mr. ARBUTHNOT: Then I beg to move that the Court do now adjourn. At present we are not in a position to discuss the question.

Mr. TOOKE seconded the motion.

Mr. CRAWSHAY thought the Court of Directors were deserving of thanks for having so promptly called the proprietors together. By the agreement existing between the Company and the Secretary of State either party had the right of terminating the agreement on giving six months' notice. The Secretary of State in Council had given the Company six months' notice, and the Directors would have been deserving of censure if they had failed to call the proprietors together. He therefore moved, as an amendment, "that the thanks of the Court be given to the Directors, for having so promptly summoned the proprietors."

Mr. JONES thought that nothing could have happened more advantageously for the Company than that it should have had the opportunity of expressing its desires to the Secretary of State for India before that gentleman had committed himself by any legislative measure.

The motion for adjournment was withdrawn, and the vote of thanks to the Directors, being seconded by Mr. THORNTON, was carried almost unanimously, only the mover and the seconder of the motion of adjournment voting against it.

Mr. CRAWSHAY was of opinion that the court were in a position to come to a determination as to the course they ought to take without waiting for any further information. The Secretary of State for India had given them notice that he should apply to Parliament for power to transfer certain affairs connected with the East India Company to the Bank of England. Now the proposition he should submit to the court was that that proposal constituted an unnecessary and indefensible interference with their private affairs. Parliament had deprived them of any share they once had in the government of India. That might be justified by some pretext of its being necessary on public grounds; but what pretext could be put forward to justify Government interference with such a matter as that of the Company making a division of their money among themselves? The only relation of the Company with the Government consisted in this,—that the Government should pay to them half yearly a certain amount of money, and that it should provide the Company with the necessary means of dividing that money amongst themselves, as well as for conducting their elections and performing the other functions that belonged to them, without any tax being laid on their dividends. These were the rights which the Company had left to them by the last Act of Parliament. Nothing had ever come to his knowledge of a more incredible nature than that, after the Government of England had left to the East India Company nothing but the administration of its own dividends, they should propose to pass another Act of Parliament to interfere with that last remnant of power left to it. An arrangement with the Bank of England was not objectionable in itself; but there was all the difference between the proprietors making such an arrangement through their own directors and an arrangement being made for them by the Secretary of State and by Parliament. So long as Government chose to leave the proprietors of East India stock dependent for their dividends and principal upon the revenue of India, it was their interest to keep together. He had been informed that the Government did not like to see them meet any more than they would the holders of the Three per Cents. Let the Government give them the same security as the holders of the Three per Cents. and they would not trouble them with their meetings. But so long as it remained the law of the land that they should be dependent solely upon the revenue of India, common sense taught them that they must keep themselves an organised body. The hon. proprietor concluded by moving—

"That the proposal of the Secretary of State in Council for India to apply to Parliament for powers to interfere with the arrangement of the private affairs of this Company is wholly unnecessary and indefensible."

Dr. BEATTIE seconded the motion, which was agreed to unanimously.

Mr. CRAWSHAY then moved,—

"That it is requisite for the safe management of the Company's affairs that the functions of the Court of Directors be vigilantly preserved and exercised."

The motion was seconded by Captain SHEA, and also unanimously agreed to.

Mr. CRAWSHAY further moved,—

"That notice having been given by the Secretary of State in Council for India of the termination of the existing arrangement between the Council and the Company, it is necessary that the Directors should prepare proposals for the future management of the Company's affairs, such proposals to be submitted to a general Court of the East India Company."

Captain SHEA seconded the motion.

General EVEREST said one important point ought not to be overlooked—namely, that not only did their dividends depend upon the surplus revenue of India, but that the proprietors had a prior right to all payments not required for India. That was a matter which none could manage so well as a body of their own directors. If they once admitted the Secretary of State to administer the dividends, the officials and clerks of his own department would, either directly or indirectly, obtain priority over the proprietors, and their claim would be violated.

The resolution was then agreed to.

Mr. CRAWSHAY said he had had a communication with the chairman previously to the meeting, and he understood that it was the wish of the Directors that the proprietors should interest themselves in these matters. He might, by way of explanation, observe that the proposal to go to the Bank of England actually originated with the Company a year and a-half ago. He therefore proposed the following resolution:—

"That it is desirable the Court of Directors should make such arrangements with the Bank of England as may be expedient."

The motion was seconded and agreed to, as were also the two following:—

"That it is desirable, in case any arrangement be made with the Bank of England, that duplicates of all transfers be kept with the secretary of the Company."

"That it is essential that the warrants for dividends be signed by the Directors."

"That every exertion be made to continue the Company's offices at the India-house, and to provide further accommodation for the Directors and proprietors."

"That the Directors be requested to petition, under the seal of the Company, against any Act of Parliament, or any clauses of any Act of Parliament, which will interfere in any degree with the rights of the corporation as by law established, and to oppose the same by every means in their power."

Mr. DENT (a director) said they were much indebted to Mr. Crawshaw for bringing these matters before them; and if it should be the means of preserving the existence of the Company as a body called together periodically to discuss matters connected with India, he conceived it would be a great national good.

Mr. HELPS (a director) thought his hon. friend (Mr. Crawshaw) had done considerable service in proposing the last resolution, because he feared they had to deal with persons who had taken an antagonistic position against the Company.

The CHAIRMAN considered the contemplated proceedings on the part of the Government to be most unjust, most uncalled for, and most ungenerous. The East India Company had established a claim on the gratitude of this country beyond what had ever been established by any public company on any other nation on earth. By the ability of their generals and the courage of their troops the East India Company had attached an empire to this country. To treat that body, therefore, as they had been treated for the last thirty-two years by a so-called Liberal Government, appeared incredible in the history of any country whatever.

The Court then adjourned.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

The half-yearly report of the directors of this company states that they have great pleasure in informing the shareholders that the agent of the company has reported, in his latest despatches, that there is every reason to be satisfied with the present progress and prospects with regard to the construction of this railway. In their last report the directors stated that the Government Land Commissioner had pledged his word to give 70 miles of land to the company by the 31st October last. This pledge was redeemed, as 75 miles were delivered over on that date. The remaining portion of the land followed shortly after. As usual in such works, at the commencement there was some delay about the rate to be paid by the contractors for labour. This has now been adjusted, and on this subject the chief engineer writes:—"Looking forward to the two or three months still before us to the rains, I am of opinion that we shall not be far behind our expectations when writing my last half-yearly report." In that report, it will be remembered, he wrote as follows:—"I have confidence in our contractors being able to complete their work at the time specified, save the few months' delay occasioned by not being able to put them in possession of the land." The directors have satisfaction also in stating that the agent's despatches of a later date than the report of the chief engineer, speak most encouragingly of the activity and vigour which the contractors were putting forth in all departments of the works, from which the directors anticipate the most favourable results. Under date of the 22nd of March last, the agent of the company, who had just returned from a personal inspection of the whole line, writes as follows:—"In going along the line I was much struck with the fertility and large population of the country it traverses; and the more I see and examine into the resources of our districts, the more satisfied I am of the soundness and excellent prospects of the undertaking." The agent then concludes his letter thus:—"It therefore only remains for me to congratulate the board and the shareholders of the company on the daily brightening prospects of their line, which, as an investment, I hope to see second to none of its class in India." The directors have now completed all their contracts for the rails and chairs required, and these are being despatched as soon as ready, and will all be on the spot before the time when they will be required for the construction of the permanent way. The directors were able to postpone the call contemplated in the last report, in consequence of payments made by shareholders in full, which are still going on satisfactorily. They, however, gave notice in their circular dated the 10th of April last, of their intention to make a call of £5 per share, payable on the 20th of July next; intimating at the same time that the amount of the call might be paid in anticipation, interest at £5 per cent. being allowed from the date of payment, and considerable sums have already been received on this account. The accounts show that the total receipts to 31st December were £128,326. 2s. 11d., and the expenditure, £175,187. 10s. 6d., leaving a balance of £253,108. 12s. 5d., of which £251,117. 13s. 1d. is deposited with the Secretary of State for India in Council.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHRISTIAN VERNACULAR EDUCATION SOCIETY FOR INDIA.—The annual meeting was held on Thursday, at Freemasons' Hall. The Earl of Shaftesbury presided. The secretary read the report, which stated that ignorance of the principles of Christianity existed to a great extent among the rising youth of our Indian empire. India contained a school-going population of about thirty million children, not more than 100,000 of whom were under any direct Christian instruction. The operations of the society were divided into two departments, viz., the training of Christian teachers, and the publication of Christian books. Branches had been formed at Ceylon, Madras, and Calcutta. Considerable progress had been made in the publication of books and maps. The South Indian Christian Book Society had printed 381,700 publications, of which 276,586 were effectively circulated. The committee were thankful for the support which had been generally rendered them during the past year, their total income for the year ending December 31, 1859, being £2,638. 11s. 5d.; of this sum £1,124. 0s. 1d. was received from collections at various churches and chapels on the day of thanksgiving for our deliverance from the Indian mutiny. As no such item could be expected to recur in their ordinary annual income, it became the more necessary for their friends to exert themselves, especially in procuring annual subscriptions, without which it would be impossible to carry on with confidence the operations of the society. Colonel Edwards, in moving the adoption of the report, commented at considerable length upon the improvement which had already taken place in connection with the efforts of the society, and pointed out the great necessity existing for the extension of their operations. The Rev. Mr. Hamilton seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously. Mr. J. C. Marshman moved, and the Rev. T. Birks seconded, a resolution lamenting the continued authoritative exclusion of Holy Scripture from the regular course of instruction throughout the Government schools of India. The motion was carried. A resolution recognising the distinctive specific features of the society as compared with other Christian missions having been passed, the proceedings terminated in the usual manner.

EAST INDIAN EMIGRATION.—Some papers lately laid before Parliament give an account of the emigration of labourers from India into the West Indies and British Guiana. During the fifteen years commencing with 1845, 14,185 men, women, and children have embarked at Calcutta for Trinidad (two-thirds of them men), and the mortality during the three months' passage was no more than 4·6 per cent. during the first twelve years, but after that period the death-rate at sea increased beyond all previous experience, and amounted on 5,379 since embarked to 13·4 per cent., the proportion being larger among the women, and still heavier among the children. This is attributed to depressing circumstances. The most alarming reports were circulated respecting the destination of these coolies, calculated to impress them with the most melancholy forebodings; it was said that the English Government, to avenge the slaughter of Europeans in India, had selected the emigrant ships as the most convenient and least suspicious mode of carrying off the natives to sea, and there destroying them by hundreds without the possibility of a single soul returning to tell the tale. A similar mortality took place among the Calcutta emigrants to British Guiana. Among the emigrants from Madras the mortality has been very much smaller. The difference, however, between various Calcutta ships in regard to the mortality on board has been very great, indeed almost startling, and sometimes the deaths have been most numerous where the passage has been the shortest. It may be supposed a fearful mortality on the voyage removes all the weak, and the annual death-rate among Indian immigrants after landing in Trinidad has been during the last three years only 1·6 per annum—a rate we should be very glad to see in England. Supposing this to continue during the remainder of the five years of industrial residence, these immigrants will have lost 21·3 per cent. of their number in a three months' passage and five years' residence, and the average annual rate of mortality among a similar class in Calcutta is described as 4·4 per cent., which would indicate a loss of 23·1 per cent. in the same period if they had stayed at home. The loss on the passage during the great Irish exodus to the States is stated to have been 17·5 per cent.

HIMALAYA TEA COMPANY.—A prospectus has been issued of the Himalayan Tea Company, with a capital of £250,000 in £20 shares. The object is to cultivate tea in the hill districts of India, and to purchase the Government experimental plantations. The recent report of the Committee on Colonisation and Settlement in India demonstrated that this branch of production may be attended with success; while, so far as local consumption is concerned, the growers will now have the additional advantage of a 10 per cent. bounty, tea being included among the articles on which Mr. Wilson has established protective duties.

BARRIE and Co., Vepery, Madras, to enable their old correspondents returning from India to continue the use of the celebrated Condiments, have made arrangements to forward regular supplies of the above, packed in glass jars for family use, at 1s. 9d. and upwards, which may be had of CROSSE and BLACKWELL, Purveyors to Her Majesty, 21, Soho-square; FORNUM, MASON, & Co., Piccadilly; and of the Principal Sauce Vendors throughout the Kingdom. Each bottle is labelled, and BARRIE and Co., Madras, stamped on the glass.

BLAIR'S GOUT & RHEUMATIC PILLS.

Price 1s. 1d. and 2s. 9d. per box. This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated by unsolicited testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age. These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.

Sold by all medicine vendors. Observe "Thomas Prout, 229, Strand, London," on the Government stamp.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS, the most effectual

Remedy for Liver Complaints and Disorders of the Stomach.—At this season of the year, when these complaints are so prevalent, there is no better remedy than HOLLOWAY'S PILLS, whether as a preventive or cure. When taken in moderate doses and strict attention paid to diet, the worst cases will be relieved. The strengthening properties of these Pills restore the impaired tone of the stomach and cleanse the liver. Nothing so good has been discovered for the cure of persons suffering from a long residence in hot climates, and they surpass every other medicine for general family use. They have the happiest effect on the stomach and secretions, promoting digestion and gently stimulating the torpid bowels.

114 YEARS AGO JNO. NEWBERY

BONUS YEAR.

NORTHERN ASSURANCE COMPANY.
ESTABLISHED 1836.

Capital, £1,250,760.
Office in London: 1, MOORGATE-STREET.

The next investigation, for the purpose of declaring a Bonus to the Policyholders, will take place on 31st January, 1861, and all Policies in the Participating Class, effected prior to that date, will share in the profits then to be divided.

The whole of the Profits of this branch are divisible, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, amongst the insured.
The last Bonus declared by the Company was at the rate of £1. 7s. 6d. per cent. per annum on the amount insured, a return which, when its very moderate scale of premiums is considered, has rarely been exceeded by any other Office.

As an illustration of the proportion which the additions already made to Policies bear to the sums paid by the assured in the shape of Premiums, it will be sufficient to state that a Policy for £1,000 taken out in 1836, on a life then aged 25, and upon which £503 have been received by the Office, has been increased by successive Bonus additions to the sum of £1,351. 1s. 10d., the increase being equal to SEVENTY PER CENT. on the Premiums paid by the assured.

All Policies are guaranteed by a subscribed Capital of upwards of One Million Sterling, an accumulated and invested Premium Fund of over £350,000, and the unlimited responsibility of upwards of Seven Hundred Shareholders.

A. P. FLETCHER, Secretary.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO,

or PEARL DENTIFRICE, stands unrivalled in its capabilities of embellishing, purifying, and preserving the Teeth to the latest period of life. Prepared from Oriental Herbs with unusual care, transmitted to this country at great expense, this unique compound will be found to eradicate all tartar and concretions, and impart a pearl-like whiteness to the enamelled surface, remove spots of incipient decay, render the gums firm and red, fix the teeth firmly in their sockets, and, from its aromatic influence, impart a delicate fragrance to the breath. It is important to observe, that when used in early life, it effectually prevents all aches in the teeth and gums, effaces spots and discoloration, eradicates scurvy, and, in a word, soon realises the chief attribute of beauty—a Fine Set of Pearly Teeth.

PRICE 2s. 9d. PER BOX.

CAUTION.—The words "ROWLANDS' ODONTO," are on the Label, and "A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, Hatton-garden," on the Government Stamp.

A SORTIE FROM FORT ST. GEORGE:

BY J. R. YOUNG,

(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College).

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS,

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS. WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, and MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, and HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL and INTEGRAL CALCULUS, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. Young has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. Young's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

CLAPHAM COMMON.

UNFURNISHED HOUSES at CLAPHAM-COMMON.

Mr. McLACHLAN, of 35, St. James's-street and Clapham-common, is instructed to LET TWO HOUSES in the GROVE, adjoining that beautiful spot, Clapham-common. They consist of dining, breakfast, and double drawing-rooms, and five bed-rooms, with the usual domestic offices, coach-house, stable, &c. The houses have just been put into thorough substantial and ornamental repair, and are fit for immediate occupation. The locality is highly respectable; and as the rents are moderate, and several Indian families reside in the neighbourhood, Mr. McLachlan begs to recommend the houses to the attention of families recently arrived from India. The drainage is warranted. Omnibuses to West-end and City pass constantly. One mile to the Balham Station, for Pimlico, Crystal Palace, Brighton, &c.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 13th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

The Mails for China are despatched at the same rate of postage as those to India; but must be pre-paid.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 23rd April brings no intelligence of a later date than that received via Bombay. Sir James Outram, who had been suffering severely from bronchitis, having been compelled to proceed to Singapore in the hope of benefiting by the voyage, the Viceroy telegraphed to the President in Council his intention of leaving Simla on the 7th May, notwithstanding the great heat that prevails at that season, and His Excellency was accordingly expected to reach the Presidency about the 20th of the present month.

Lord Canning's presence in Calcutta at this moment is, for many reasons, very desirable. An uneasy feeling appears to pervade all classes of the community, with the sole exception of the special correspondent of the Times. Though money is abundant trade languishes, and imported goods can only be disposed of at greatly reduced rates. This depression does not arise from the ordinary vicissitudes of commerce, such as a glut in the market, but from the general disquietude and anxious looking forward to evil days which effectually check the spirit of speculation. Following the example set by the Governor of Madras, the native press counsels an active opposition to Mr. Wilson's scheme of taxation. The peasantry, indeed, may regard with a certain degree of indifference the levying of an income-tax which does not fall directly upon themselves, but from their ignorance they are liable to be imposed upon by all sorts of absurd rumours originating with disaffected Mahomedans, or with Zemindars averse to being taxed. Besides, they have some reason to apprehend that they will indirectly have to bear a portion of the burden laid upon the shoulders of their employers.

Even in the Madras Presidency an ill-feeling, which a very slight provocation would fan into a flame, has been excited by Sir Charles Trevelyan's scheme of resuming a "vast number of small landed estates hitherto free from land-tax," and imposing a quit-rent which the present holders are invited to redeem at twenty years' purchase.

From the indigo districts the latest accounts are, on the whole, rather more favourable. In Kishnagur and Jessore order has been restored, though the ryots sullenly complain of having been deceived by the Government. In Pubna, however, a serious disturbance took place on the 10th April. On that day Mr.

Lingham, Deputy Magistrate of Comercolly, though accompanied by thirty men of the police battalion, armed with carbines, was attacked by a party of twelve to fifteen hundred rioters, knocked off his horse, and severely beaten. His life, indeed, was only saved through the gallantry of his havildar; for, moved by a mistaken sense of humanity, he had forbidden his men to fire. If big guns are the conclusive arguments of kings, pistols and carbines are not less convincing when judiciously applied by magistrates. Some misunderstanding is also said to prevail in the Malda and Moorshedabad districts, but this will probably be removed without recurring to violent remedies.

The ex-King of Oude is reported to have lost the greater part of the jewels which were lately restored to him, through a destructive, but very beneficial, fire, that in a short space of time reduced to ashes his ex-Majesty's residence at Garden Reach, together with the filthy mass of hovels which had sprung up around. The property destroyed is estimated at £50,000.

The report that the expedition to China had been countermanded turns out to be incorrect. The ultimatum tendered by the Allied Powers is believed to have been rejected, and no alternative, therefore, remains but to adopt coercive measures with energy and decision. Major-general Sir Charles Straubenzee was to leave China on the 15th of last month.

OUR POLICY IN THE EAST.

However much opposed the policy of England may be to annexation, yet the larger States in India must, in time, lapse into our dominions. The Mahomedan dynasties, especially, seemed doomed to destruction. They have been tried and found wanting; and the total extinction of Moslem sovereignties is, consequently, simply a question of time. We are no advocates of annexation, but States that are powerful enough to support large armies must either end in absorption, or, ultimately, assist in the dismemberment of the empire. With peaceable princes we shall ever be willing to cultivate peace; but, at the same time, we must be prepared to make war upon all who disturb the repose of those who have sheltered themselves under our sovereignty. Irresistible as the waves of the ocean rolls on the tide of European conquest in the East. It seems to be the high mission of England to subjugate to her sway every heathen land. There is no middle course left for her to pursue; the finger of destiny points to conquests and kingdoms, and dynasties crumble away before the march of her victorious armies. Recent events have shown us how vain was the cry that there should be no more war; nations as well as men have missions to perform, and England's mission is to conquer and to civilize. Blood shed in the cause of freedom, or in the propagation of truth, is as sacred as the tears which angels drop over the graves of heroes. England is the home and sanctuary of liberty, the waves as they break in foam on her rock-bound shores, the wintry winds as they howl through her leafless oaks, and the eternal hum of her vast cities, all proclaim, in a language of their own, this grand truth. Her wars may emancipate, but can never enslave; and although in our oriental conquests a veil of mystery and suspicion has been sometimes thrown around the great principle which dictates to our rulers, with a will strong and inflexible as Fate, the line of policy they must adopt, yet almost invariably the end has justified the means, and the slaughter of thousands has been atoned for by the happiness of millions. Nature is bounteous in her generosity, but she is also unsparing in her vengeance; cities insult her by negligence and filth, and the inhabitants are decimated by pestilence and death; emperors and kings outrage her by tyranny and oppression, and they are swept away by the arms of an invading people.

Little more than one hundred years ago the English in India were alarmed by the extent of their conquests; but even then they had gone too far to recede, and were compelled either to advance or retreat. Since that time, empires, kingdoms, principalities, and petty states almost innumerable, have been totally annihilated; and the tide of conquest is not yet on the ebb. The policy of the Crown is averse to further conquest, being well aware of the great fact, which has been established by the mighty empires of the past, that boundless dominion is only the antecedent of weakness and decline. But neither men nor empires can control their fate: the fiat has gone forth from the Eternal, and Omnipotence impels us onward. The thunders of our cannon have been heard on the borders of Central Asia, and the reverberations of our guns, some years ago, struck terror to the heart of the King of Ava. The last of the Moguls is a banished felon. Who can, therefore, tell what the end may be? Our boundaries may yet extend eastward to the Chinese Sea, and westward to the Caspian and the Levant. Our readers are well aware of the fact that England must conquer all those powers who are formidable enough to invade her dominions, and that peace can only be purchased by security. The welfare of millions, and the intellectual advancement of their posterity, depend upon our success; and were those invested with the governing powers to yield for a moment to the dictates of a mawkish humanity, or regard such epithets as "grasping" and "avaricious," then would the waves of conquest roll back upon ourselves, and more than two hundred millions of people be buried in the depths of despotic barbarism. There cannot be a doubt but the English in India have committed many grave and glaring crimes, as considering all things what nation in the world would not have done so? But turning to the history of the conquering peoples of the past, we find that the subjugated countries were partially civilised, rather from the force of example, than from any efforts made on the part of the invaders: so that, taking everything into consideration, India ought to be thankful that she has fallen into such good hands. Old abuses are being daily reformed, prejudice after prejudice is rapidly disappearing, the dawn of a better age is bursting over the horizon, and it is to be hoped that the errors and injuries committed by our fathers in the past, will be nobly atoned for by their children in the present and the future. Former conquerors of India founded magnificent empires, it is true; but they devastated the country which they ought to have improved and civilised; and neglecting the means which its almost infinite resources afforded for rendering their rule permanent, they fell an easy prey to the first power, with skill and enterprise sufficient to take advantage of their negligence. It was by this means that the East India Company attained such unbounded power, and vast dominions; and we can only hope that the ministers of the Crown will, in the future Government of India, avoid the vices or errors of their predecessors, and adopt only their virtues. —Telegraph and Courier.

THE FRONTIER RAIDS.

On the north west and the north east two small armies have taken the field to repress discontent and punish invasion. Just two months after Brigadier Chamberlain had swept through the fastnesses of the Kabool Khail Wuzerees with 5,000 men, and reduced them to submission, the Muhsoods, another branch of the same tribe, poured down upon the plains 3,000 strong, and attacked our cavalry out-post stationed at Tak, 150 miles south west of Peshawur, and 50 miles north west of Dera Ismael Khan. Sahadut Khan, a Ressaldar, was in charge. With 160 sabres he met the mountaineers, and chased them back into their hills with a loss of 200 wounded and leaving 100 dead behind them. His skill and bravery have been recognised in the Gazette, and now to punish the outrage an army of 8,000 men has left Tak for another hunt through the Cabul Hills. The force consists of the Guides, the 1st Punjab Infantry, a wing of the 1st Sikhs and of the 3rd and 4th Punjab Infantry, the 4th Sikhs, the 25th Goorkhas, the Peshawur Mountain Train, part of the Kohat and Dera Ismael Khan Artillery, 100 sabres of the 3rd Punjab Cavalry, and 100 sabres of the Mooltanee Cavalry. Brigadier Chamberlain, foregoing the sick leave to which he was entitled, takes the field at their head, to enter on a kind of warfare for which he is specially fitted by past experience and past success. The defiles of the Sulman must be again entered, a horde of savages who know no right but might, and whom even terror can influence only for a time, will have their numbers thinned by slaughter. There will be peace for a few months till the instincts of plunder again prove too strong for the remembrance of past punishment. And to accomplish this 6,000 of the Punjab irregular force with their British officers must expose themselves to the uncertainties of border warfare in the heat of May.

Simultaneously the whole of the disposable force in Eastern Bengal, a district regarded hitherto as the very abode of peace and contentment, has been moved to the north-east to quell the discontent of the Khasias, which we announced in our last. H.M.'s 19th has been detained at Dacca, the Sylhet light infantry has gone into the hills, troops from Assam are said to be on the march, and the East Indian regiment is on its way to the spot. The Khasias, unlike the Wuzerees, have grievances to complain of. It is said that a house tax has been imposed on them, on the Kookees, and on the other frontier tribes subject to our control. With this they associate other complaints, especially of injustice in the mode of settling their lands. They have driven away the few native officials who were among them, have destroyed the records in the Thannahs, and are now skirmishing with our tooops in their jungles.

These frequent outbreaks on both east and west can be no longer disregarded, or looked upon as isolated acts of savagery against which it is needless to provide by any regular system of civil or military administration. We cannot afford to be always fighting. It is expensive to the treasury, and still more destructive of our prestige, to be ever sending small armies into the jungles and defiles of the hills, to slaughter robber tribes, who rise again as soon as our force is withdrawn. We are returning to the same state of incessant border warfare which occupied army after army during the first Burmese campaigns. That warfare was checked by a system to which it would be well for us now to resort in the case of all the frontier tribes of both east and west. After the treaty of Yandaboo we appointed a political agent to reside in Munnipore. We raised a sepoy force from the people of Munnipore. From that day there has been peace on that part of the border. The encroachments of the Burmese have ceased, the slave trade to Burmah has been suppressed, the country has increased in population and wealth. The commerce from the west has been attracted by a road which we have made through the mountains from Cachar to the valley, and the Shans have begun an active trade. If hill savages are ruled or advised by a political agent in whom they have confidence, if they are taught that in commerce and agriculture they will find wealth, they will with pleasure pay a house tax or any other. The tea planters of Assam and Cachar are clamorous for labour. Their capital will enrich the hill men as much as that of the indigo planters has elevated the position of the Bengal ryot. It may be difficult permanently to pacify the tribes of the Cabul frontier without the active co-operation of Dost Mahomed. But all that the people of Tipperah, Cachar, Munnipore, and Jynteah want, is an agency suited to their simplicity and ignorance. Nicolson is still worshipped as a deity in the Punjab, Col. Edwards kept the Peshawur valley quiet, and made himself loved in the crisis of 1857, Col. Dixon civilised the wild Mhairs of Rajpootana. It is such men that the peoples of the north-eastern frontier need to rule them, with the firmness and the gentleness of a paternal despotism.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A CHEAP SPECIFIC.—We observe in the Indian Lancet of the 1st of April a communication from Dr. Donaldson recommending the web of the common house spider as an unfailing remedy for certain fevers. It is stated to be invaluable at times when quinine and other anti periodics fail, in effect or quantity, not only from its efficacy, but because it can be obtained everywhere without trouble and without price. This remedy, it is observed, was used a century back by the poor in the fens of Lincolnshire, and by Sir James MacGregor in the West Indies. The doctor now uses cobweb pills in all his worst cases, and is happy to say he has never since he tried it lost a patient from fever. If the cobweb be so efficacious a remedy why not try the spider himself? We know that a fat one is excellent medicine for birds; its effects upon the unfeathered biped might perhaps be equally remarkable.

OPIMUM CULTIVATION.—The inquiries about to be conducted under the proposed special commission, in regard to the relations between planter and ryot, will probably lead to similar inquiries with respect to opium cultivation, on which subject there is a marvellous absence of accurate information. It suits the purposes of Government and Government officials to represent this cultivation as a boon and a blessing to the ryot, who rushes eagerly for his licence, and kisses the hand which gives it; but those who are behind the scenes know how much of this is true, and how much to be ascribed to the representations of the interested go between, who stand betwixt the advancer and the advancee and help themselves from both. We (Englishman) strongly recommend the Lieutenant-governor, who would not, we believe, willingly countenance shams, to ascertain and accept the real facts of the case, and thus save himself from the discredit of ignorance, and the disgrace of exposure. We have some reason to believe that the elements of dissatisfaction may, ere long, be developed in Behar, and, as prevention is better than cure, a stitch in time may save the military police some trouble. Whether the breath of the Bengal excitement has been wafted on the winds to Behar, or the spirit of resistance, which some wise men say is now leavening the mass of serfdom throughout the world, has reached Bœotia, it is certain that there is an uneasy feeling among the opium cultivators, which it will not be wise to disregard.

MAJOR MACPHERSON.—The race of old "politicals" is extinct. The only two in India who could be pointed to as perfect specimens of the class of which Mountstuart Elphinstone, Malcolm, and Metcalfe were the pride, were Sir Mark Cubbon and Major Macpherson, of Gwalior. Stripped of his independence, the former has resigned. On Monday, April 16, the latter died in Calcutta. To Major Macpherson must be ascribed the safety of Central India in 1857. By the power of a strong will and the attraction of an irresistible charm of character, Major Macpherson had made his name revered among the Coles before he was called to the important position of Political Agent at the Court of Gwalior. There he exercised the same influence over Scindiah and his Court. The boy-rajah would have been the plaything of his Ministers and the slave of his passions—the Court of Gwalior would have rivalled the debasement of Lucknow—but for Major Macpherson. With a wisdom which Asiatic wile could not baffle, and a high-toned gentleness which Asiatic spathy could not resist, he made Scindiah the true friend of his own subjects, the warm ally of the paramount power. He selected and confirmed in his post of chief minister, Dinkur Rao, one of the two native statesmen whose conduct in the crisis of revolt might almost redeem the acts of their countrymen. When the storm of rebellion swept through the whole of Northern India, its waves beat ineffectually on Gwalior. By a power which has well been described as mesmeric, Major Macpherson kept the youthful Scindiah true to his allegiance, and delayed the march of his treacherous contingent till their treason was harmless. Had Scindiah wavered, had he proved unfaithful, Holkar would have followed, Rajpootana would have gone, Hyderabad would have been lost. Under God, it was to Major Macpherson that we owed the security of Agra, the loyalty of the only great native feudatories who remained faithful, the safety of all India from Delhi to Madras.—Friend of India.

CALCUTTA CITY MISSION.—During the past year the agents of the City Mission made 8,501 visits to so-called Christian families in the destitute districts of Calcutta, 171 visits to the hospitals, and 269 visits to soldiers and sailors. Of the twenty-one women who sought the shelter of the Refuge since it was opened in 1856, two have been married, two restored to their friends, two have entered service, seven have left by their own desire, and six still remain. The influx of soldiers' wives into Calcutta, and the discharge of so many European soldiers from the Indian army during the year, have added largely to European crime in Calcutta. The operations of the Mission must be vastly extended to allow of their having an appreciable influence. The subscriptions during the year did not reach 5,000 rupees.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE FAMILY PENSION FUND of Bengal seems to be in a healthy state, and to have conducted its operations during 1858-9 with success. Mr. Finlaison, the actuary of the National Debt Office, has valued the fund, and pronounced it in a safe and prosperous state.

Its capital, after the payment of all liabilities, stands at Rs. 14,67,509. There are 592 subscribers, of whom 262 subscribe for wives only, 247 for wives and children, and 83 for children only. Since the establishment of the Fund in 1837 the receipts have amounted to Rs. 26,32,863, and the disbursements to Rs. 9,04,593. The total expense of management for the twenty-two years has been Rs. 1,40,503. The results of this and the similar Fund in Madras are a high testimony to the character of the Uncovenanted Service.

A NEW COAL FIELD.—In a minute by Mr. Reade, we find an account of the coal deposit in the Mirzapore district. Mr. Burke, a surveyor, discovered it at Kota in 1840, and worked what was known as the Singrowlee mine on behalf of a company organised by the speculative Col. Pew. He met with fair success, but was much opposed by the officers of the Rewah State, through which the coal had to pass to the Ganges. In 1850 experiments were made in the Government steamers, which showed that the residuum of the Singrowlee coal was less than that of the Burdwan coal, but that it was of a very friable nature. Messrs. Hamilton, Higginson, and Co. now work the mineral. In 1856 they sent to the Ganges 185,576 maunds, and in 1859 42,103 maunds. The rebels greatly damaged the works in 1857-58. The tract called Singrowlee lies partly in Mirzapore and partly in Rewah. The area of the deposit is about twelve square miles. Any amount of coal could be raised, but there are no means of transport except pack bullocks, and these can be obtained only in small quantities. When the Jubbulpore railway opens up the field, Singrowlee will be able to supply the north-west with coal.

A SANITARY OPERATION.—The residence of the ex-King of Oude at Garden Reach, Calcutta, has been burnt, and property destroyed to the value, it is said, of five lakhs of rupees. The fire originated in the city of huts with which he has covered his grounds, and which have made the neighbourhood a scene of filth, worse than the Mahomedan quarter of Madras. This is not the first occasion on which those huts have been burned, but now that the fire has spread to Wajid Ally's own apartments, steps will be taken, we trust, to cleanse the nest of scoundrels who infest the locality. The State jewels, recently restored to the ex-King, are said to have been destroyed.

THE CALCUTTA PHOTOGRAPHIC SOCIETY has awarded its gold medal for the best series of ten landscapes to Major and Mrs. Tytler, its gold medal for the best series of ten portraits to Mr. J. Rowe, its silver medal for the second best series of ten photographs, whether portrait or landscape, to Mr. A. Williamson, and its silver medal for amateurs, whether members of the society or not, to Dr. B. Simpson. The society's exhibition in the Hall of the Calcutta Institute gives a favourable impression of Indian photography. The number of visitors has been large.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING.—The Phoenix states that Mr. Wilson has instituted an inquiry into the results of the printing scheme in the public offices of Calcutta, as compared with the plan adopted in Madras. In one office the work formerly done by copyists for Rs. 3,700 a month, now costs upwards of Rs. 5,000 for printing, exclusive of heavy contingent charges. In the Home Office the number of words printed in one month was 17,84,990. At the old rate for copying, of 1,440 words per rupee, the cost would be Rs. 1,230. The amount paid for printing was Rs. 2,441, nearly double the former. Printing in the public offices, where each has its own establishment and well paid superintendents, has hitherto been a costly experiment. Were the English rule as to the documents that ought to be printed observed, and one central office created, the cost of printing would be as cheap as that of copying. At present the most trifling public letters are printed. Even were printing more expensive than copying, a little should be paid for the benefit.

COURTS MARTIAL.—Sergeant W. Pearson, of the Bengal Artillery, has been sentenced by a Meerut court-martial to penal servitude for life, for the wilful murder of Davee, a native watchman. A court martial at Dum-Dum has also sentenced Thomas Scott, a private of H.M.'s 37th, to fourteen years' penal servitude, for having struck an ensign and the surgeon of the regiment with a hatchet on the head, while at sea on board the ship Alfred.

ASIATIC SOCIETY OF BENGAL.—The reduction of the rate of subscription to the Asiatic Society of Bengal has proved successful in increasing the income. The number of resident and non-resident members at Rs. 48 and Rs. 24 a year respectively, has risen from ninety-six to 168, and the subscriptions from Rs. 6,208 to Rs. 7,312 annually. This should induce the society to reduce the rates still further, and to abolish the entrance fee. The payment of a fee of Rs. 32, and of the subscription, Rs. 48, at once deters men with incomes under Rs. 600 a month.

ATTACK ON A MAGISTRATE.—We (Hurkaru) have received intelligence of the result of the fight on the 10th of April, between some 1,200 or 1,500 men of Baboo Ramruttun Roy's villages of Koochoogurrah, Berwatollah, &c., and Mr. Lingham, with his thirty men of the police battalion. We are told that Mr. Lingham, leaving the sepoy behind, alighted from his horse unarmed and went towards the rioters accompanied by some four or five peons, who, on the advance of the people shouting and yelling ran away, headed by the Nizar of the Commencely Court, who, says our informant, "displayed velociped legs." The lattials then attacked Mr. Lingham, who was three times knocked down, the last time senseless. The sepoys, who had been forbidden by Mr. Lingham to fire, became furious, and in advancing to the rescue fired a volley. The havildar, a brave Sikh, came just in time to parry with his musket a sword-cut aimed at Mr. Lingham's throat by one of the lattials. Having rescued Mr. Lingham, the sepoys began to retreat, but on their doing so the whole body of the enemy charged upon them, when two of them were knocked down by long bamboos, and one of them speared to death. Both were carried off the field, and on the third day one of them was found tied up in a cow-shed by the arms, with several spear-wounds, and one arm broken. The dead body has not been found. It is supposed that it was thrown into the river at night. Mr. Bainbridge, the magistrate of Pubna, arrived on the spot on the third day after the fight, and when our informant's letter was despatched, was proceeding with the investigation. One dead villager and ten wounded have been produced. Of the latter, two or three are not expected to survive. All have been forwarded to Pubna. Mr. Lingham has on his body twenty-one contusions, none of them, however, we are happy to say, of a dangerous nature. His horse had fourteen spear wounds. Several of the principal villagers have been arrested. On the arrival of the magistrate he received several applications for assistance, and Mr. Lingham proceeded towards Belnabarry with a small army of fifty of the military police. He found the pathways through the villages barricaded, but met with no resistance. The ryots were generally persuaded to return to their work. As a proof that the rising is not against the indigo system, but against Europeans, it may be mentioned that the ryots of native factories, who seldom receive a "cash advance," or as our correspondent expresses it, "see the face of a pice," were all cultivating quietly, as usual.

JESSORE, April 8.—We had a slight shower of rain here on the evening of the 6th, but not sufficient to sow indigo with. The Indigo (or rather what is called here the Eden) rebellion seems to be settling down, owing, no doubt, to several small detachments of troops being scattered over the most disturbed parts of the district. Our magistrates, Messrs. Molony and Skinner, are out in the Mofussil, trying their best to settle matters between planters and ryots; but I understand that some of the ryots to the north of this district are determined not to sow; but until we get rain to enable us to sow, it is difficult to say who will or will not sow.

KISHNAGHUR, April 19.—A good deal of rain has fallen since the 6th, and sowing is going on in a straggling, unhappy style, a little here and there. The heaviest rain was on the 17th, when nearly two inches fell. The steady convictions obtained under the new Act seem to be doing good; the ryot is daily being impressed with the idea that he has got to sow his indigo, but it goes sorely against his grain, as he implicitly believes that he has been "sold" by the Government, who first told him he need not sow indigo if he didn't like, and now tell him, "If you don't sow you will go to gaol for three months." A great many have gone to gaol, but the last few days they seem to prefer staying at home. Neither the cavalry nor the Goorkhas have been able to flesh their weapons as yet, nor do I think it likely they ever will in an indigo row. The Goorkhas are very sociable fellows; a few of them go into a ryot's house, and make him play cards whether he likes it or not.

DEBROOGHUR, April 7.—Tea manufacturing has commenced, and, so far as can be judged from last month's operations, the crop in this district will be nearly double that of last season. The weather is very favourable. The Abors have been at work again, and have cut up an unoffending Bunneah who was trading on their bank of the river; they will not be quiet until they have been well and severely punished. A rush into their hills and back again has no effect—they have been offered peace and rejected it. Three months ago they invited our Principal Assistant Commissioner and Superintending Engineer up to one of their villages, ostensibly to discuss the terms of their submission, out, as has since transpired, with the intention of murdering them. Providentially their courage failed them at the last moment, and the officers returned in safety.

RAJPOOTANA IRREGULARS.—The formation of a body of irregular horse, for employment in Central India, to be called Mayne's horse, and of a corps of irregular horse and infantry for service in Rajpootana, to be designated the Meena corps, has been ordered. Mayne's horse will consist of three regiments, each of 578 sabres, and the Meena corps of two regiments of infantry, each of 800 sepoy and two of cavalry, each of 320 sowars. We have thus an irregular force of 4,000 men. These bodies seem to be old levies reorganised.

FISHERIES.—The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, in a letter to the Board of Revenue, asserts the right of Government to fisheries in all navigable rivers which are public property, unless that right has been granted or leased to some private party. The Board is ordered to divide the fisheries into convenient sections or blocks, and to invite farming tenders for them. Where private parties can prove their right to any fishery, it will be supported, otherwise they must go into court. The receipts are to be applied for the improvement of the roads of Bengal. The valuable fisheries in the Sunderbuns, as well as the forests, were expressly declared by law to be the property of the State when grants of land were made.

SALT DEPARTMENT.—It is said that there will be some promotion in the Salt Chowkey Department, consequent on the retirement on pension of Messrs. Peacock and Muston. Mr. Owen, from Hidgelee Contai, has been nominated for the Calcutta appointment, and is to be succeeded there by Mr. Shuttleworth, from Backergunge.

A CLUMSY EXCUSE.—Some time ago the Government of India called the attention of the Secretary of State to the conduct of the King of Acheen in treating with disrespect Capt. Haughton, who was the bearer of a letter from the Governor-general. The Pinang Times gives the King's own explanation of the matter. The King, it seems, was asleep, and no one dared to disturb him; so Captain Haughton went away without delivering the letter of which he was the bearer. The wily Asiatic will not thus deceive this Government; the trick is too palpable, as well as too common.

THE 42ND REGIMENT N.L.I. marched from Rutgerh, on the 5th April, towards Etawah, where it is to be stationed.

TROOPS FOR CHINA.—The transport ships Clarendon and Daniel Rankin left Calcutta on the 13th April, for China, the former with 2 officers, 132 men and 72 horses, and the latter with 2 officers, 160 men and 82 horses of Fane's volunteer cavalry, and also the Bengal steam-ship Bentinck, with 8 officers, 730 men and 2 chargers of the 15th regiment, Punjab infantry.

CAPTAIN OLAF FARRINGTON, formerly Deputy Commissioner of Jullundhur, lately returned from furlough, and appointed to Dehra, has been nominated to succeed Mr. F. W. Cooper at Umritsur, that gentleman succeeding Mr. P. H. Egerton as Deputy Commissioner at Delhi.

DR. MACNAMARA has been appointed to act as secretary and medical officer to La Martinerie, in the room of Dr. Webb, who has gone on leave to England.

CHITTAGONG.—The mutineers of the 34th N.I. plundered the Chittagong treasure of cash and stamp paper to the extent of Rs. 2,25,521, of which the Sylhet authorities have recovered Rs. 35,430, principally in stamp paper, found in natives' houses. The balance has been written off to profit and loss.

DACCA, April 10.—The hill-tribes, bordering on Sylhet and Cachar, who were represented in my last letter as fighting amongst themselves, have, as I anticipated, agreed to transfer their attentions to the people of the plains. What amount of injury they have already done, I cannot say; but it has been necessary to send a military force to check and chastise them. Two hundred and fifty men of the Sylhet light infantry fell in with a party of four hundred savages, and gave them battle. Fourteen of the latter were killed; the remainder fled back to their hills. The Jynteas are a more athletic and bolder race than the Kookees, and unless effectually restrained at the outset, are likely to extend both their depredations and murderous schemes until all the neighbouring tribes, tempted by the immunity they enjoy, come down to share their success. To prevent such a result and set at rest the anxieties of the Bengalis, Government has wisely arranged to send the Eurasian regt. on its way to Dacca, to garrison Sylhet and Cherra Poonjee, whilst the Sylhet light infantry follow up the savages to their mountain haunts. This arrangement makes it necessary that the detachment of H.M.'s 10th, that was under orders for Benares, should be detained longer in Dacca. Our soldiers, accordingly, are not going for the present, and all of us are pleased to know this. We had a plentiful down-pour of rain last night. I suppose there has been lots of indigo sowing this morning.—Hurkaru.

WANTON WASTE OF LIFE.—The Mofussilite comments severely upon an order lately issued that a troop of the Bengal horse artillery at Agra is to move to Jhansi, and the royal horse artillery at the latter station to Agra. The distance between Agra and Jhansi is 145 miles, the heat from the blazing sun shining on an arid surface of whity-brown sand is intense, and the water along the whole line of march is extremely bad. The order will cost the State many valuable lives, and there is nothing to justify it.

A PRINCELY DEVOTEE.—The visit of the Raja of Puteala to Umritsur is creating quite a sensation in the Punjab. His Sikh Highness, the day after his arrival at that town, having proceeded from his camp to the gate of the Rambagh with his numerous followers, there took off his shoes, and walked at the head of his cortege, who all followed his example bare-footed, some armed, some unarmed, along the streets leading to the great tank and temple, a distance of upwards of a mile. On arrival there, he went through the customary bathing ceremonies, remaining for hours in the water swimming once all round the tank, and made offerings commensurate to the occasion of a first Maharajah of Puteala, now the crowned leader of the Sikh religion, having visited the pool of immortality from which the fear of Runjeet Singh had so long kept his family. His son and heir was to be finally initiated into the mysteries of Sikhism at the Bysakes fair, which is usually held about the 11th of April.

STAMP DUTIES BILL.—The Hurkaru publishes a report of a very interesting debate which took place in the Legislative Council on the 14th of April, on the Stamp Duties Bill. The Bill has undergone several important changes, and it is likely to be still further amended. One of the most important of these amendments moved by Mr. Harrington, and carried notwithstanding the opposition of Sir Barnes Peacock, Sir Charles Jackson, and Mr. Wilson, is a provision that if an appeal or plaint which shall have been rejected by the lower court on any of the grounds mentioned in Act 8, 1859, shall be ordered to be received, or if a suit shall be remanded in appeal for a second decision the appellant is entitled to receive back the amount of the stamp duty paid on the petition of appeal.

PROGRESS OF PROTESTANTISM.—The Bengal Catholic Herald complains that the Protestant City Mission has been successful to a great extent in converting the poorer classes of Roman Catholics in this city, or, in his own words, has been "committing some havoc in the fold." He recommends the newly established fraternity of St. Vincent De Paul to endeavour to counteract their influence.

MR. MACLEAN, assistant magistrate in Kishnagur, has written a letter to Mr. Tweedie of Locknathpore, expressing his regret that there was still any idea in existence that the Dhooa Putalee fire was in any way attributable to that gentleman's servants. Mr. Sconce, it is to be hoped, will now retract as publicly as he made them his scandalous insinuations that there had been wilful fire raising on the part of European planters.

RATHER SIGNIFICANT.—A correspondent of the Englishman in Kishnagur writing on the subject of the emeute amongst the ryots and their refusal to sow indigo, makes the following remarkable statement:—"A great many ryots have gone to Calcutta to consult with those under whose advice they have been acting; many of them have gone to the editor of a native paper, and some to the agent of a well known zemindar."

THE BANK OF BENGAL, on the 19th April, reduced the margin on Government securities. The bank advances now as follows:—On 4 per cent., Rs. 75; on 5 ditto, Rs. 88; on 5½ ditto, Rs. 95.

MR. VENABLES, brother of the late Mr. E. F. Venables, has been presented with a jashire, worth Rs. 10,000 a year for the services rendered by his brother during the outbreak, and on account of losses sustained by them.

LE PREMIER AVERTISSEMENT.—The Governor-General has ordered a survey of the several small independent States in Bengal and the Eastern provinces; this is said to be preliminary to placing them under a special Government, though they are not to be annexed; the outbreak in Tipperah may have decided this question.

FREIGHTS.

To London, £4 t. 2s.
To Liverpool, £3. 12s. 6d. to 2s.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, April 23).—All imports have remained in a very depressed state, till prices at last gave way rather. Piece Goods have been much neglected, owing to the rather limited consumption in nearly all the up country markets. In fact neither the usually favourable season nor the enforcement of the new customs tariff have had any effect on our market. A general stagnation prevails, and buyers do not show any inclination to purchase. The imports from home during the last month have been very limited indeed, but even this has had no effect on the present state of the market. Furns have been in fair demand for a few days, but lately they became very quiet, with a downward tendency. Articles of all descriptions are also dull of sale; prices of sheeting copper lower, say 45-0 per sy. md.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, April 23).—Produce has continued in the same unfavourable state. There is a pretty low speculative feeling in the market, and the little that is done is chiefly to fulfil engagements. Indigo—During the past fortnight there has been considerable anxiety felt in all districts from the continued drought. In Bth groups, Purneah, and Thibet the want of rain is beginning to cause some damage, the young February plant beginning to die away. The Khontee of the Benares districts has suffered from the frost considerably. The sales during the fortnight have been very trading. Salt-petre—Only a limited business in progress, and that chiefly on account of orders from gunpowder manufacturers from home; sales of 5 per cent. at Co.'s Rs. 10-4 to 10-8. The higher refractions in no demand, although holders will not give in. Rose S/ik—There has been a fair demand since our last report and prices have been well supported. The March Bonds Hurrupuls and Madagascars have come into market and sold at extravagant rates from Co.'s Rs. 16 to 18-8 per sy. acc., or about three shillings above home quotations. In European markets we have heard no thing. Shell lac—In less demand, at rather higher prices. As high as Rs. 80-0 per md. was paid for a parcel of best F test J E sold at Co.'s Rs. 37-8 per md. Oil Seeds—Landed in moderate demand at former prices; supplies have come in more freely. We quote best Patna at Co.'s Rs. 3, small ground picked Co.'s Rs. 2-10 to 2-12. Inferior a 2-7 to 2-9. Raped in inquiry at Co.'s Rs. 2-10 to 3-2, according to quality. Teel and Poppy Co. Rs. 2-13 to 3-0 per md.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

COLONEL C. A. BROWNE, so long the Military Secretary in Madras, has been appointed to the command of the Nagpore Force on his return to India. "The Governor in Council cannot allow the long, honourable, and highly valuable service of Colonel Browne, as Military Secretary to the Government, to terminate without recording their sense of his eminent public merits, and acknowledging the important assistance they have always received from him."

THE BENIGHTED.—The Madras authorities have twice failed to maintain a regular line of steamers between Madras, the northern ports, and Rangoon. They now advertise for offers to establish a line from private parties, and guarantee a subsidy of freight and passage money to the amount of Rs. 7,500 for each monthly trip. For such a sum no private company would submit to the restrictions they propose and the endless interference which would follow. All that is wanted is a subsidy for carrying the mails, stores, and treasure. The company can settle their own rates with the public, as is done by the very successful Calcutta and Burmah line. One steamer, the Governor Higginson, at present runs between Madras and the northern ports only. If the present agents of that vessel and the Burmah Company are wise, they will monopolise the whole carrying trade between Pegu and the east coast of India.

ENAMS.—The Madras Times gives the result of the local Enam Commission up to the end of February last. The total number of titles confirmed was 28,707. Of these 1,925 were in respect of religious and charitable grants of a permanent character, and 314 were personal grants confirmed on the present tenures. Of the remainder 16,926 personal grants were enfranchised at the option of the enamdars, and 9,452 compulsorily. The quit-rent annually payable to the State on personal enams is Rs. 80,853, or rather more than a third of the full assessment of the land.

HYDERABAD, March 30.—The English government is now negotiating with the Nizam to obtain land on the Godavery, considerable in length, but of small breadth, to facilitate navigation on that river, and to promote irrigation. The Nizam's government will necessarily look to an equivalent either in money or territory, for any cession it may make. It is but just that this should be attended to, and the land ceded to us should be valued, not by a dry assessment of its present worth, but of its capabilities and its future value to us. It also appears from a representation made to the Nizam's government, by the inhabitants of Budrachellum, that they apprehend a canal which is to be cut above their district, will reduce the supply of water in their locality, and throw their lands out of cultivation. An officer is appointed by the Nizam's Government to examine and report upon this case. The English Government would, under any circumstances, as it should do in justice, compensate these ryots for the loss they would sustain by the improvements they are carrying out on the river which waters their lands; but considering the great prospective advantages to their finance and which the English Government calculates upon deriving from its constructions on this river, within the boundaries of the Nizam, it is quite impossible that that Government should not of itself make the most liberal compensation. According to international law, a nation constructing works upon its own river is called upon to make compensation to any nation having any rights upon that river which may be damaged by the construction of those works. The claim in the case of the Nizam's subjects adverted to is the stronger, because the works which damage their rights are constructed upon a river their own property. You may recollect that about a year ago, four persons who possessed influence with the Nizam, and used it hostilely towards the English Government, were, at the instance of the Resident, exiled from the capital, and ordered to reside on their estates (jaghiers). His highness has been uneasy upon this subject ever since, and it was a concession, though perhaps not due to his highness, proper to be made, to permit their return to the capital. The sanction from the English Government was given under the condition of certain restraints being imposed upon them, the terms were accepted, and messengers were sent the day before yesterday to recall them to the capital, but the Nizam mistakingly directed that their return should be the occasion of an ovation. This, of course, could not be permitted, and the Resident has properly put in a demurrer to their immediate return, stating that criminals could not be allowed to return in triumph. The question will be referred to the Viceroy, if the Nizam does not, in the meantime, make such concession as is required, which I rather think he will do. This was plainly a proper measure. The English Government could not permit its pardoned enemies and criminals to return in triumph to the capital of its ally, over whom, if not by right, by prescriptive usage, it holds paramount authority. The Mahomedan inhabitants of this country are but too arrogant already. Although I believe the minister, to gratify his master, has advocated the return of these exiles with all possible earnestness and the whole weight of his influence, I shall not be surprised to find other parties assuming with the Nizam the credit of their restoration, and that they have effected it in spite of the endeavours of the minister to keep them out. I wish the Nizam could be made to understand that the minister alone is publicly accredited by us, and that no man's influence, be he who he may, can counteract his. Such is the fact, but neither the Nizam nor the common herd understand it, and yet it is curious why they should not, for every indication made on the part of the English Government showed that its confidence is reposed in the minister, and in him alone. The intrigues of this place, however, easily prevent everything, and as intrigue is more active and energetic than plain matter-of-fact, it prevails here.—Englishman.

BANGALORE, April 20.—The 6th Regiment N.I. arrived at Bangalore on the 17th, en route to the French rocks. The half E. Troop Horse Brigade Artillery arrived this morning in garrison, from Banda, under the command of Lieut. Pritchard, Horse Brigade artillery. The ceremony of "treading the fire" was performed in the vicinity of the Fort on the evening of Sunday last. There was an enclosure of about forty feet square formed with bamboos and ropes. In the middle of the enclosure was a trough some 18 feet by 12, and at the upper end a smaller trough, perhaps 12 feet by 3. The larger trough was dry; the smaller one had water in it: neither of them was more than nine inches deep. Thinking that the water was impregnated with some substance calculated to render the feet innocuous to fire, we had a little of it brought to us and tasted it, but it was perfectly fresh and sweet. In the centre of the larger trough was a bonfire. The faggots blazed briskly, fanned by a strong breeze which prevailed at the time, and required no "poking." At about half past five, the approach of the performers was announced with a tinkling of bells, and cries of "Govindoo." They were about twenty-five in number, and consisted of men,

MR. READE.—We (Athenæum) suppose our readers have not forgotten Mr. Reade, collector and magistrate, agent to the Governor of Madras, in the district of Vizagapatam, who was found guilty by a special commission of having had pecuniary dealings with the Rajah of Vizianagram, and of having falsely denied the same. He was removed from his office by the local government, and suspended from further employment till the Secretary of State should pronounce an opinion on the case. This he has now done. Sir Charles Wood approves the course taken by Government, but finds Mr. Reade guilty only of those things

THE JUDICIAL BENCH.—The Bombay Telegraph complains of the obstruction to justice caused by the insufficiency of judges in the Supreme Court of the presidency. Formerly there were three judges, as in Calcutta, now there are only two. Often the whole duties of the Court are left to one judge, and even when there is a full Court, the law is practically in the hands of the Chief Justice, who has a casting vote. Although the trade and population of Bombay are somewhat larger than those of Calcutta, which has three judges, the sphere of the jurisdiction of the Bombay and Madras Supreme Courts is much smaller, and the judges have no legislative duties to discharge. An increase in the number of Queen's judges, however, an extension of their powers to all the large civil stations where Europeans abound, and the practice of going on circuit, are necessary to the increase of European capital, and to the security of European property in India.

MARRIAGE IN HIGH LIFE.—The Bombay journals describe at some length the marriage of the two daughters of Meer Jaffar Ali Khan, son-in-law of the late Nawab of Surat, to a Syud who traces his descent from Mahomet, and to the son of the Jagheerdar of Beila, one of the oldest Mahomedan families in Western India. Prince Goham Mohammed and one of the Ameer's of Seinde were unsuccessful as suitors on behalf of their sons. Meer Jaffar was a well-known "lion" in London society some years ago. He presided at dinner in the dress worn when he was presented to the Queen, and made an after-dinner speech eulogising "England's Queen, her nobility, and gentry."

THE BHEELS.—The Bombay Gazette records a rising of the Bheel Chief of Sagbarra, a small State in the midst of teak forests, between Khandesh and Surat. In 1822, the Chief entered into a treaty with the British to keep the Bheels quiet, and quiet they have remained till his death last year. In that treaty the customs part of the revenue of Sagbarra was made over to the Rajah of Rajpeela as suzerain. Till now the Rajah has not put in his claim, and its assertion has roused the Bheels. With the aid of 500 Arab and Rohilla mercenaries they have set the Rajah at defiance. Capt. Buikle, the political agent, had been striving to effect a reconciliation for months, when it was determined to march a force against the Bheels. On the 18th March they surrendered, and a settlement of the Sagbarra complications is now being peaceably made.

ORIENTAL SPINNING COMPANY.—The operations of the Oriental Spinning and Weaving Company, Bombay, during the past year, have resulted in a profit equal to 6 per cent. The company was only recently established by a number of Parsees. They declare a dividend of 5 per cent., and vote a sum of Rs. 10,000 for a bronze statue to their late chairman. Folly such as this is somewhat rare in the case of Parsees.

INDIGO IN SCINDE.—The experiment of growing indigo in Scinde has now been tried for eight years, and with success. In 1859-60 the area under the crop was 3,342 beegahs in excess of the previous year, and the quantity manufactured 299 maunds more. The cultivation is popular with the natives. Taking 8 annas as the actual profit on a beegah of indigo, wheat yields 6 annas, rice 5 annas, cotton 3 annas, and sugar-cane 6 annas. How is it that indigo is so much less profitable in Bengal?

THE BOMBAY "PINJRAPOLE" is notorious as a so-called charitable depot for the reception of aged, maimed, and diseased animals, whom the tender regard of certain of the Hindoo castes for life will not allow to die in the ordinary way. The place has hitherto been a pest-house, dangerous to the health of the neighbouring inhabitants, and a scene of debasing cruelty. The animals must not be allowed to die, but they may be tortured by starvation, neglect and filth. The animals, like all others in the island, were recently taxed by the Municipal Commissioners, which eventually forced them to go beyond the bounds of the Municipality. Mr. LeGeyt proposes to ask the Legislative Council to exempt the Pinjrapole from taxation. The Government of Bombay very properly prevents him.

FRENCH AMBITION.—A correspondent of the Bombay Gazette gives further information as to the movements of the French on the east coast of Africa. There are at present two French steamers in the Red Sea, and two more are expected. A French consul has been established at Zanzibar, and is said to be meddling with the affairs of the Imam of Muscat there. One of the Comoro Islands has been converted into an arsenal and a military depot. The mission in Abyssinia has meanwhile received a check, and is striving to form relations with the Somali chiefs. The rebel, Dejai, whose cause the French espoused against Theodore, has been defeated, and his brothers taken prisoners. So certain were the French of occupying Adoulis, that two merchants had arrived at the port of Massowah with large supplies of "Europe" goods. There can be little doubt that the French contemplate the occupation of part of the eastern coast of Africa, and will attempt to obtain a footing in Madagascar as soon as their Chinese force shall be at leisure.

NOMINIS UMBRA.—The Bombay Times describes the present condition of Demau, the Portuguese settlement on the west coast, 128 miles north of Bombay. Like Goa its former glory has departed, and the Surat railway will probably deprive it of the little trade it now has. Diu, the small settlement on the Kattiawar coast opposite, is subject to it, and those two with Goa are now the whole of Portuguese India. The chief power is vested in a governor appointed from Lisbon for four years. The present incumbent is a major, who is making great efforts to extend the trade. The railway is allowed to land materials free of duty. The military force consists of 300 sepoys commanded by 8 Goanese. The whole revenue is Rs. 65,000 annually, a sum only sufficient to meet the expenditure.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, April 14.—The London Mail of the 28th February arrived here on the 12th, but by telegraph we have received intelligence from England to the 3rd March.

We mentioned in our last summary that the ultimatum requiring the Imperial Government to make a full apology, to admit a vessel of war to Tientsin and to admit Mr. Bruce to Peking, had been handed over to the Chinese authorities at Shanghai on the 8th March. The answer which has been received is still kept secret, notwithstanding the large commercial interests which will be affected by it; and the most contradictory rumours are in circulation in regard to it, from a positive acceptance to a positive denial. The Chinese say that it has been accepted on the condition that the expeditionary force be sent away, and we think this is not the least probable of the rumours. All that the envoys have allowed to transpire is that they consider the answer which has been returned as "unsatisfactory."

There has been no confirmation of the rumour of a collision between the Russians and the Court of Peking. It was probably one of the many canards got up at present with the hope of precipitating action on our part.

We are sorry to learn that the value of rice is rising every day, and is at this moment so high, that rice here at present is sold at nearly three times more than it brought at Saigon a very few weeks ago. In the retail shops of Canton, its price is over five dollars per picul, and the magistrates have issued proclamations informing the rice shops that such high prices cannot be permitted. The rebels will probably prevent tea coming down to Canton, and it is not likely that there will be much production of silk this year.

The Imperialists on the Yang-tze have been gaining successes over the rebels; and the road between Shanghai and Peking is again open, as proved by the receipt of Peking Gazettes to the 1st March. Hang-chow has been retaken by the Imperialist troops, and the rebels in it were killed in great numbers.

From Canton we learn that the prefectural city of Shaou-hing, on the West River, was taken by rebels on the 10th. A few weeks ago they had advanced as far as Sze-heong, a district city on the west bank of the North River, but suddenly retreated, notwithstanding their repeated success, from fear that imperialist troops might attack them in the rear. In the neighbourhood of Shaou-hing there is a very precipitous hill, named Ting-hoo-shan, on which there is a temple that was quite a fortress, and occupied by 300 monks, who defended it successfully against no less than 6,000 rebels. When it was first attacked, a few months ago, the brave monks lost 13 killed, and the rebels retreated, leaving hundreds of men dead upon the hill. This time, however, it is reported that they have taken the hill, and that position, added to the possession of the city of Shaou-hing, will make them very strong indeed. Sze-heong, Samshui, and Seinam will all fall into their hands, and it is probable that the silk villages Kam-chook, Luk-low, Kow-kong, &c., will be overrun by them during the ensuing summer. On the 5th and 6th, they had two engagements with imperialist troops on the bank of the North river, and on both occasions were victorious. Their leaders are Chin-kin-kang and Tow-pe-a-chun, the former having been an energetic Sham-shui carpenter, and the latter being upwards of seventy, and strongly pock-marked.

The recent murders in Japan are ascribed by the British Consul at Kanagawa to foreign sailors and servants going about intoxicated, and offering unprovoked violence to Japanese. Such provocations were not wanting on the day when the two Dutch captains were murdered, and were probably connected with that deplorable event, though the captains had done nothing to offend. Foreigners have been warned not to venture out at night without lanterns and attendants. The Japanese never do so themselves, and there is no reason why Englishmen should not take that precaution in Japan which they are obliged to adopt in Cairo and Alexandria.

From the returns from Shanghai for the past year, we learn that the import trade of that port amounted to the value of £15,124,928, and the export trade to £13,330,055. Of the import trade opium amounted to the value of £5,004,138. One of the reasons why the new Customs service is disliked so much is the valuable information in regard to the trade of China which it is laying open.

There has been a riot at Swatow between the Chinese merchants and the native Customs, which resulted in the Customs' house being broken into; but matters were afterwards arranged between the disputing parties.

General Sir Charles Van Straubenzee goes home by this mail.

A number of troops are now quartered in tents on the peninsula opposite Hong Kong, and a wooden store-house is being erected; but there is no appearance as yet of the land being occupied for more permanent purposes. The Hon. Mr. Adams, Acting Chief Justice, has been made a member of the Executive Council of Hong Kong.

Messrs. Lyall, Still, and Co. have started a new powerful steamer, built by Mr. Cooper of Whampoa, to be run on the Canton river, where the traffic had almost entirely fallen to the American steamers. The steamer Shamrock has been lost near Amoy, but the crew were all saved.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, April 13.—During the fortnight the weather has been of the true April type—dry and hot almost beyond endurance. Nothing could have been more favourable for the preparation and shipment of coffee, and we believe a good deal of coffee has been prepared and shipped. But only one vessel has sailed, the Traveller, for London, with 8,624 cwt. of coffee, of which 7,566 was plantation, and 1,058 native. The result is, that the figures representing our total exports are considerably below those for the last two years. The falling off, as compared with last year, is in native, but even the exports of plantation are below those of the corresponding period in 1857-58. We suppose our next return will show a different result, as the Anna Henderson, the Akbar, the Georges de Courson, and the Isle O'May are about full and ready to sail. We believe the Colombo stores are crammed with coffee.

The Governor has announced that although nothing was received by last mail respecting the railway, yet, as Mr. Hawkshaw's report must be about ready, H.E. has determined to come to Colombo at once in order to hold a meeting of the Legislative Council at an early date. The great question of the railway, which has so long agitated Ceylon, will, therefore, soon be finally decided. The receipt of the report and connected papers will enable us to see what amount of truth there may be in the charges of reckless jobbery now so freely preferred against the directors. But whether these are substantiated or refuted, the universal hope is that the company agreement may be cancelled, and the railway, if it is to go on, proceeded with as a Government work. Although coffee keeps well up in the European markets, yet, with high freights, enhanced cost of labour and the export and immigration taxes, the margin left to proprietors is not large. The public have had ample means of judging of the incidence of the immigration tax, by the publication in the Gazette of twenty-six pages of names of parties liable who did not pay on the "first time of asking." It would seem that 3s. on 120 days' labour is as nearly as possible  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. on the cost of such labour. We find also that the number of days' labour performed last year on an estate of 1,400 acres was 277,000. This gives, at 120 days, about 2,300 coolies. At the usual rate of two coolies to an acre the number would have been up to 2,800. But labour was scarce and dear in 1859, and probably Singhalese villagers aided in picking. The commissioners have determined to employ screw instead of paddle steamers, but when the steamers may be expected we cannot say. Meantime Captain Graham is to confer with the planters at Kandy on the 2nd May, preparatory to his departure for the new labour field in the Northern Circars.

We noticed in our last the large revenue which had been realised in 1859. The present year is not likely to fall behind, if we may judge by the results of the pearl fishery, and the sale of the Arrack Rents of the principal provinces of the island. An idea of the increased commerce of the island, too, may be obtained from the bank returns of notes in circulation. The circulation of Government notes generally ranged about £80,000; the banks have a circulation of just twice this amount.

On the question of the Batticaloa Irrigation Works a fierce controversy continues to rage. Although assured that at Batticaloa the idea of Europeans engaging in the culture of rice is merely laughed at, we think the question is by no means settled. Hilarity helps digestion, but ridicule is not the test of truth. The fact that the natives have miscalculated their resources in labour and capital would be no argument against the possible success of a European, with abundance of capital and able to import labour.

As a pleasing sign of the times, and one pregnant of good, we may refer to the religious services held this week in the hall of Queen's College, by ministers of all the Evangelical denominations in Colombo—Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Wesleyan, and Baptist.

The hot dry weather has been general, leading to a fire up in the hill plain of Newera Ellia. A good deal of sickness, too, has prevailed on the lower ranges of the hill country. There are now signs that the south-west monsoon is close at hand.

Steamers and vessels with troops for China continue to pass Galle, the latest being the Imperatrix, from Suez, which arrived at Galle on the 27th and sailed on the 28th.

The telegraph cable from Aden to Kurrachee being again in working order, we have, by this medium, London news to the 10th March. It reached Colombo on the 26th, or in sixteen days from London, an earnest of what is to come when the electric line extends the whole distance.—Ceylon Overland Observer.

BURMAH.

RANGOON, March 31.—The heat now is intolerable. Mr. O'Riley, our chief magistrate, has gone to Elephant Point for a brief season; Capt. Ford, cantonment joint magistrate, acting in his absence.

Major-general Bell is now holding his annual inspection of H.M.'s 68th regiment. The amateurs of this corps are to have their first theatrical performance this evening, in the Assembly Rooms, which they have brushed up at considerable expense, with new scenery, &c. The drop scene, painted by Lieut. Blair of the Artillery, is intended to represent the public gardens.

The regatta came off on the 29th and 30th. The first day's sport could only be enjoyed by those on the steamer and flat which accompanied the yachts. They started with but little breeze about 12.30 A.M., at half ebb, but came back, after rounding the pilot boat at Elephant Point, with a spanking breeze and a strong flood, Mr. Leed's boat coming in a long way ahead, followed by Captain Harris's cutter. The others were nowhere, comparatively speaking. The race lasted about four hours and twenty minutes. The second day's racing was much better, there being a fresh breeze and a considerable ruffle on the river. The beat up was tack and tack, the wind being dead ahead. Captain Harris's cutter, although one of the last in starting, owing to some cause unexplained, managed with short tacks, and sailing on a taut bowline, to get up to her competitors off Monkey Point, and in coming back to the main wharf with the early flood and stiff breeze, left all the others astern. The pulling matches then commenced, the boats of Her Majesty's ship Clive winning one or two, and the artillery one, viz., the 68th. It was all over by six P.M. The sports this day did not commence till a quarter past four P.M. The Monkey Point Battery is well nigh finished, and the 68-pounders brought by the Diana are already fitted. A guard now occupies the point, and I am told by those who have seen it from the river view that it looks quite menacing. The target-practice will commence shortly. I am sorry to inform you of the loss of the Diana, on her return voyage. She was one of the last of the late Mr. George Hoffland's vessels, and is one more instance of the want of the lighthouse on Alguada Reef, which, I hear, is fast progressing.

Captain Jones, from Thayetmyo, is in the Main Guard, and I believe the court martial on him is either sitting or has concluded. He is charged with an attempt to shoot his wife, which was prevented from taking place by either the cap snapping or falling off. The King of Delhi still lingers. I think they should allow the old sinner to have an occasional airing, for he is sadly cooped up in his prison, and the Times tells us he has become so indifferent to life, that he is surrounded with filth, &c.

The late editor of the Rangoon Times, Mr. George Curran, has returned from Ireland, and has re-established himself as a notary public and pleader.

I am also told that an action for libel is about being instituted against Captain C. D. Grant, in the local courts. The plaintiff is Mr. Doyle, assistant commissioner, whom Captain Grant has libelled, it appears, in his defence.

Our worthy commissioner is expected back shortly, and a bazaar rumour has it that he goes to Calcutta from hence, but I cannot place any reliance on this report; and his busy times are at hand, it being near the close of the official year. Crime appears to have abated somewhat, and the harbour is being rapidly denuded of ships, all departed laden with rice and cutch. The Louisiana goes home at last, and is now loading with rice. The Clive, a sloop of twelve guns, is the pride of the harbour.

I hear that Dr. Gillies, the lately appointed medical store-keeper, goes away shortly on sick certificate. The 39th N.I. are broiling under tents still, and they, it appears, cannot be relieved till the other corps (the 44th, I believe, I am not sure) now at Thayetmyo, are sent back to India. Some blunder seems to have been made. Why were they sent down first? The 11th have gone up by the last steamer and flat.

The Roman Catholic Bishop is energetically at work. The cathedral has been opened now some time, and will soon have 12 large oil paintings added to its interior decoration, which the Bishop has had sent him direct from Italy. No one hears a word yet of the long-promised Town Episcopal Church.—Madras Athenaeum.

CENTRAL ASIA.

March 4.—An urzee was received from Mahomed Hussun Khan, Hakim of Cabul, informing the Dost that some merchants who had arrived from some place towards Teheran, stated in his presence that a large force was marching from Teheran to Mashudda Mookuddas, and having taken the forces that were at that station, marched to a place called Oorgun, establishing grain depots and halting places on the way; that the King of Persia had ordered the Sirdars to appoint new governors at the principal stations at which they arrived, and that the King of Persia should be proclaimed sovereign in those countries. The King of Persia also ordered thanahs to be established at every encamping ground, and, in case of resistance, to arrest the principal of the clan, and forward him on to Teheran. It is also rumoured that Sooltan Ahmed Jan has been transferred to Herat from Teheran; and the King of Persia has called Ahmed Jan to imprison him. The Ameer told Sirdar Oosman Khan that if the intelligence regarding Sooltan Ahmed Jan's transfer be true, then Ahmed Jan will never be permitted to govern Herat long, as the King of Persia had once before deceived him, and that since he has been withdrawn from Teheran, some insurrection is sure to take place in Kandahar.—March 5.—A letter was received from Golam Hussun Khan, British agent of Cabul, from Peshawur, informing the Dost that the Governor-general of India left Peshawur on the 2nd of March, towards Hindoostan, and that the Vakeel would be detained in Peshawur for some days on his own private business, after which he would return to Cabul. The Ameer, after reading the letter, remarked to Sirdar Oosman Khan that the Viceroy and Governor-general of India had left Peshawur for Hindoostan, on which the Sirdar asked what he (the Governor-general) had done for the Ameer. The reply was that his excellency had merely sent a letter of condolence and friendship, and that on the arrival of the British Vakeel he would further ascertain the intentions of the Queen's representative. The Sirdar observed that the Viceroy did not even ask the Ameer to a personal interview, and that consequently there was ground for suspicion that the British were somewhat displeased with the Ameer; and that it was useless for the Ameer to entertain a British Vakeel at Cabul any longer. The Dost interrupted, that there was no objection to the British Vakeel being stationed at Cabul, as he had no desire to become inimical to the British; but that if the English Government are anxious to break off that friendship which had existed for a long time, he would await the consequence.—March 6.—An urzee was read from Kandahar, from Sirdar Ameen Khan, stating that agreeably to the orders of the Dost he was about to make over the gold which had been accumulated from the mine to Sirdar Rufeek Khan. He also begged that the Dost would send perwanahs for the payment of the salaries of the troops and Jageerdars, who were very much pressed for expenses. That all was doing well towards Furrah, and that he had often warned Sirdar Futteh Mahomed Khan not to send troops to Furrah, but he would not listen to his advice. The Dost replied that he would send Sirdar Futteh Mahomed Khan instructions under his own seal, and that he had issued orders for the payment of the salary of the troops.—March 7.—An urzee was received from the Hakim of Cabul, stating that Mirza Atta had attempted to poison Sirdar Sooltan Mahomed Khan, and that the Hakim had ordered the beard and moustachios of the former to be shaved, and having mounted him on a horse, had him paraded through all the streets of Cabul. The Ameer after perusing the letter sent immediate orders to the Hakim of Cabul to blow away the perpetrator from the mouth of a gun, which would serve as a warning to others, and drive terror into the hearts of the spectators. The Dost however requested the Hakim of Cabul to keep Mirza Atta under arrest, until Sooltan Mahomed Khan should state whether he objected to the murderer being exe-

FORMATION OF A BODY OF IRREGULAR HORSE.Camp Roopur, April 5.—H.E. the Gov. gen. has been pleased to sanction the formation of a body of irregular horse for service ordinarily in Central India, but available on emergency for general service.

The force will be designated "Mayne's Horse." Its head quarters will be stationed at Goonah.

The force will comprise three regiments; each regiment consisting of 578 sabres, including native officers and men of all ranks, with a second in command, an adjutant, a subaltern officer doing duty, and a medical officer.

The whole will be under the orders of a commandant, assisted by a brigade major.

The commandant, who is also assistant political agent at Goonah, will be under the control of the Governor general's agent for Central India, through whom all correspondence with Government regarding the force will pass.

The force is included in the Gwalior circle of payment.

The Gov. gen. has been pleased to make the following appointments:—

Mayne's Horse.—Capt. H. O. Mayne, 6th Madras L.C., to be comdnt. and asst. to Gov. gen.'s agent for Central India.

Lieut. A. G. Mayne, 1st Bombay lancers, to be brigade major.

First Corps.—Lieut. E. R. C. Bradford, 6th Madras L.C., to be 2nd in com.

Lieut. J. J. Blair, 31st N.I., to be adj.

Lieut. D. T. H. Sampson, 20th N.I., to do duty.

Asst. surg. H. C. Brodick to be in med. charge.

Meer Mujud Ali Sirdar Bahadoor to be resalidar major.

Second Corps.—Lieut. C. E. Wood, H.M.'s 17th lancers, to be 2nd in command.

Lieut. C. Beadon, 1st Madras L.C., to be adj.

Lieut. E. S. R. Carnac, 1st Eur. L.C., to do duty.

Asst. surg. R. Bateson to be in med. charge.

Third Corps.—Lieut. W. G. Morris, 1st Madras L.C., to be adj.

The Gov. gen. has been pleased to sanction the formation of a body of irregular horse and infantry for service in Rajpootana.

The force will be designated the "Meena Corps," and will be officered as follows:—

1 commandant; 1 second in command; 1 adjutant

1 asst. surgeon.

It will comprise two regiments of infantry and two regiments of cavalry; each regiment of infantry consisting of 800 sepoy, and each regiment of cavalry 320 sowars, including native officers and men of ranks.

The following officers have been attached to the Meena corps at various times from the dates specified opposite their names:—

Capt. J. D. Macdonald, 39th Bengal N.I., comdnt. from Aug. 20, 1857, held also chg. of adjt.'s office fr. Aug. 20, 1857, to Jan. 1, 1858, and again from Nov. 1, 1858, to March 1, 1859.

Lieut. W. P. Bannerman, 10th Bombay N.I., 2nd in com. from Feb. 18, 1858, to April 18, 1858.

Lieut. P. Barras, 29th Bombay N.I., 2nd in com. from April 22, 1858, to Nov. 1, 1859.

Capt. M. R. Bruce, 23rd Bombay L.I., 2nd in com. from April 17, 1859, to May 26, 1859.

Ens. W. P. Davenport, 30th Bombay N.I., adjt. fr. Jan. 1, 1858, to Nov. 1, 1858.

Lieut. C. H. Clay, 30th Bombay N.I., adjt. from March 1, 1859, to offic. as 2nd in com. in add. to his duties, from May 26, 1859.

Asst. surg. C. Mathias, in med. chg. from Sept. 17, 1857, to April 1, 1858, and again from April 27, 1858, to Sept. 4, 1858.

J. Murray, Esq., Bengal med. estab., in med. chg. fr. April 1, 1858, to April 27, 1858.

Asst. surg. W. Sharp, H.M.'s 83rd foot, in med. chg. from June 1, 1859, to June 30, 1859.

Asst. surg. D. L. Playfair, Bengal med. estab., in med. chg. from Aug. 9, 1859.

cuted.—March 8.—A letter was received from Mahomed Ameen Khan from Kandahar, mentioning that Mahomed Rufeek Khan had leased the gold mine to a Hindoo Sahooear, for the space of six months; on Rs. 105,000 per month; and that the contractor had consented to defray all the expenses of the mine. The Ameer remarked to Sirdar Goolam Mahomed Khan, that the mine must yield at least two lacs of rupees monthly since the contractor would not have taken it on contract if he were not sure of deriving some handsome profit on it. The Dost wrote in reply that the gold mine had better remain under the direct management of Mahomed Rufeek Khan, as it was profitable to the State.—March 9th.—The Dost held an interview with Sirdars Mahomed Osman Khan, Peer Mahomed Khan, and Goolam Mahomed Khan, and stated that he had sent many letters to the British authorities, but had never received a satisfactory reply; and that he had therefore determined to cease corresponding with them. Peer Mahomed remarked that since the British had sent no satisfactory reply—and that since even the British Vakeel had not returned to Cabul, it was evident that the British were inclined to break off friendship with the Dost. The Dost said that he would wait for a few days more and see whether the British Vakeel would return to Cabul or not; after which he would make his own arrangements. A man named Saadut Khan, represented to the Dost that a Jagheer situated in Michnee in the Doaba, had descended to him from his forefathers; and that the British had confiscated it, and in consequence of the Dost being a friend of the British, he was restrained from adopting any coercive measures for its recovery. The Dost requested him to wait for a few days, when he would let him know how to recover his estate.—March 10.—A despatch was read from Mahomed Afzul Khan from Turkistan, stating that he had entertained three Vakeels from the King of Bokhara; and treated them with much hospitality and kindness; but that the Vakeel he had despatched to the King of Bokhara had not yet returned. He also stated that he had detained the three Vakeels till the arrival of his own, when he would communicate the conditions of the treaty to the Bokhara Vakeels; and send a reply to the engagements which the King of Bokhara might propose through him. That he had received a letter from his Vakeel, stating that the King of Bokhara had appointed three Russian Generals over his Artillery, and sent them in the direction of Ruegunge.—March 11.—Abdool Razack Khan informed the Dost that he had prepared the pay abstract of all the troops serving in Cabul, Kandahar, and Turkistan, and that if the Ameer would examine the accounts he would disburse the pay at once. The Ameer rejoined that the pay of deceased men should be made over to their children and families, and a separate statement prepared of the same. He also ordered him to remit the pay of the troops serving in Kandahar and Turkistan to those stations; and to take an account of expenditure for three years from Nazir Naem Khan. March 12.—The Dost held a durbar as usual, and at its conclusion some Khyberes presented themselves. The Ameer asked them of their welfare. The Khyberes replied that some dissension had arisen between themselves and the Afreedies—on account of some women belonging to the Sepai clan; and that there would be much fighting on this account. The Dost told them that they were at liberty to fight and quarrel in their own mountains and among themselves, but that they should not create disturbances near Peshawur, which station belongs to the British; and that it would lead the English to suspect that he (the Dost) was encouraging them to disturb the peace of Peshawur. Moreover, that if they did so, they would be severely punished, and he would get a bad name.—Lahore Chronicle.

Revision of the Table of Salutes for India.

No. 387.—The following Order by H.M. in Council is, under instructions from H.M.'s Secretary of State for India, published for general information, and the orders therein contained are to be strictly observed from this date.

At the Court at Buckingham Palace, the 23rd day of Jan., 1860.
Present: THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY IN COUNCIL.

Whereas there was this day read at the Board a representation from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India in Council, setting forth that a committee composed of certain officers had been appointed to consider the expediency of revising the table of salutes to be given to European functionaries in India, fixed by H.M.'s Order in Council of 20th March, 1857, in order that the salutes to European functionaries in India and the Indian seas should correspond with the honours accorded to functionaries of a similar rank in all other parts of her Majesty's dominions, and submitting for her Majesty's approval two revised tables of salutes to European functionaries, and on anniversaries or special occasions, agreed on by such committee, with certain modifications subsequently made thereon: Now, therefore, H.M. having taken the said revised tables of salutes, so modified as aforesaid, into consideration, is pleased, by and with the advice of her Privy Council, to approve thereof, and to order, as it is hereby ordered, that the said revised tables of salutes (a copy whereof is hereunto annexed) be strictly observed and attended to. Whereof the Right Hon. Sidney Herbert, and the Right Hon. Sir Charles Wood, Bart., two of H.M.'s Principal Secretaries of State, and the Right Hon. the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, are to take notice, and to give the necessary directions herein as to them may respectively appertain.

Return Home of H.M.'s 8th (the King's) Regt. of Foot.

Camp Roopur, April 6.—H.E. the Gov. gen. considers it due to H.M.'s 8th (the King's) regt. of foot to take leave publicly of the regt. on its departure to England, and to offer to its officers and men the acknowledgments of the Government of India for their services in this country.

The 8th regt. embarked for India in April, 1846, and, after serving for some years in the presidency of Bombay, was transferred to the Bengal presidency in Dec., 1853.

The regt. was at Jullundur in 1857, when the mutiny of the Bengal army broke out, and did essential service at that station in resisting and punishing the mutineers.

It joined the army before Delhi soon afterwards, and served with much distinction in the siege and capture of that fortress. It bore a conspicuous part in the complete repulse given to the forces of the mutineers in their persevering sorties on the 14th, 18th, and 23rd of July, 1857; and in the glorious struggle within the city, which lasted for six days. After it was stormed in September, the 8th regt. was among the foremost in exhibiting the irresistible effect of the valour and endurance of British soldiers.

The regt. formed part of the pursuing column under Brigdr. Greathed, C.B., and was present in the actions at Boolnshubur, Allypore, and Agra.

It subsequently served with the force under H.E. the C. in C. in the relief of the garrison of Lucknow and at Cawnpore, and was subsequently employed in the final conquest of the province of Oude, and exhibited its characteristic bravery in the capture of the town and fort of Sandee.

The Gov. gen. begs to assure the 8th regt. of the very high sense entertained by him of its services and soldierly conduct, whether in quarters or in the field, and of the interest which he will always feel in its future welfare.

Sec. to the Govt. of India with the Gov. gen.

Interference in Native Education.

Home Dept., Camp Hoshiarpore, March 30, 1860.—NOTIFICATION.—The Hon. Court of Directors in a Despatch No. 3, dated 23rd February, 1842, paragraph 35, prohibited the employment of members of the clerical profession in connexion with the measures of Government for the education of the natives of India.

In a subsequent Despatch, No. 35, dated 18th Feb., 1857, paragraph 13, the Hon. Court, in reply to a reference from the Government of India, observed as follows:—

"We are not prepared to authorise any relaxation of the general orders issued by us in 1842, prohibiting the employment of clergymen in connexion with education in India. We have relaxed under special circumstances the strict observance of the rule at Bombay, and we have recently engaged a clergyman for one of the professorships at the Elphinstone Institution. It is our desire, however, that this appointment, as well as that of the Rev. Doctor Anderson to which you refer in your letter, may be regarded as exceptional, and that it be understood that the rule of exclusion is to be maintained."

The question having again been brought to the notice of the Home Government, the Right Hon. the Sec. of State, in a despatch, No. 15, dated Oct. 14 last, addressed to the Gov. gen. in Council, has thus ruled:—

"I have had under my consideration in Council your letter dated March 4 (No. 8), 1859, in connection with the letter of the late Court of Directors of Feb., 1857, and former correspondence on the subject of the employment of Christian clergymen in the educational department.

"It appears to me that a rule by which a person fitted in other respects for employment in the Education Department is excluded simply upon the ground that he is a Christian clergyman, is incompatible with the principle on which the Government of India has been, and ought to be conducted, of not sanctioning any partial disabilities applicable either to the European or native subjects of her Majesty.

"In practice there have been several exceptions to the rule, and I am of opinion that before any such appointment is made, not only the character of the individual, but the particular position in which he is to be placed, and the effect which may be produced by the appointment, must be taken into careful consideration."

In a separate despatch of the same date and like tenor, addressed to the Government of Madras, the Secretary of State points out that these circumstances, namely, the character of the individual, the position in which he is to be placed, and the effect which may be produced by the appointment, were not sufficiently adverted to in a case in which a missionary had been appointed as inspector of schools.

"It is not to be expected," observes the Secretary of State, with reference to his appointment, "that the natives of India will readily place implicit confidence in an inspector, who has recently been actively engaged in promoting, as a missionary, their conversion to another faith."

And in the same despatch the Secretary of State observes, with reference to a case in which an inspector of schools in Madras had failed to conform to the instructions, prohibiting the interference of inspectors with the religious instruction conveyed in schools, that the circumstance affords "a sufficient proof of the inexpediency of employing clergymen in such positions."

With reference to the foregoing summary of the views of the Home Government on the subject, the Governor-general is pleased to declare that, excepting the office of inspector of schools, the employment in the education department of clergymen or ministers, if in other respects they are fit for such employment, is not prohibited on the ground of their profession, but that no such person is to be so employed, without careful advertence to his individual character, to the particular position in which he will be placed, and to the effect which may be produced by his appointment. H.E. is also pleased to declare that no one who is or has recently been engaged as a missionary is eligible for such employment, and that no clergyman or minister can be employed in the office of inspector of school.

CECIL BEADON,
Sec. to the Govt. of India, with the Gov. gen.

Leave of Absence on account of Wounds.

Head Qrs., Camp Kakkavalla, March 11.—Under instructions from Government, the C. in C. is pleased to notify that the privilege accorded in G. O., No. 1,118, of Sept. 1, 1857, to count as service for retiring pension the periods spent on leave of absence on account of wounds received, or sickness contracted on field service, was not intended to have retrospective effect. H.E. accordingly directs that retrospective claims for this privilege may not be again submitted for consideration.

Soldiers' Pensions.

Head Qrs., Camp Trimmoo Ghat, March 16.—The C. in C. is pleased to announce, for information and guidance, that her Majesty's Government has recently decided that soldiers of good character, and within the prescribed age (30 years), who, having been discharged from regiments of the British army, may enlist within six months in her Majesty's Indian forces, declaring their former service at the time of their second enlistment, shall be entitled to reckon their previous service for pension in the Indian army.

The Allahabad General Hospital.

No. 323.—With the concurrence of the Right Hon. the Gov. gen., the Hon. the Pres. in Council is pleased to direct that a permanent hospital shall be established and maintained at Allahabad, to be called the "Allahabad General Hospital."

This hospital will be under the charge of a surgeon, with three permanent assistants, the surgeon in charge being ex officio garrison surgeon of Allahabad.

The duties appertaining to the fort native hospital, the staff at Allahabad and sick officers and travellers passing through the station, will devolve upon the medical staff of the general hospital, and their several duties will be apportioned in such manner as the director general of the medical department may deem expedient, and as local circumstances may require.

Sick Europeans, not in the employ of Government, will be received into the general hospital for medical treatment under regulations similar to those which govern the admission of these classes into the presidency general hospital at Calcutta.

The staff salaries of the surgeon and his assistants are detailed below:—

Surgeon in charge, staff salary, Rs. 600 per mensem, in addition to pay and allowances; 1st assistant, Rs. 250 per mensem, in addition to pay and allowances; 2nd assistant, Rs. 200, ditto; 3rd assistant, Rs. 150, ditto.

Marching of Recruits.

Head Qrs., Camp Juggutpoora, March 21, 1860.—

With a view to ensuring a more efficient control over parties of European recruits proceeding up country, whether marching or by bullock-train, and to prevent the recurrence of those acts of misconduct which have, the C. in C. is pained to observe, been of late so frequently brought to notice, H.E., with the concurrence of Government, is pleased to direct that the maximum number of recruits for British regiments to be henceforward placed under the charge of one officer shall be 50; and that, whenever practicable, 3 officers, with some non-commissioned officers, shall be attached to every 100 men.

Lord Clyde further directs that the officer in charge of every detachment shall be required to keep a diary of the marches made, and of the conduct of the soldiers, which he will submit to the officers commanding the stations through which he may pass, and finally deposit in the staff office of the station where the last draft is left.

It will be the duty of officers commanding stations to inspect carefully this report; bringing, if necessary, to the notice of superior authority any entries which may appear to require observation or inquiry.

Services of the 53rd Regt. in India.

India Office, May 17.—The Secretary of State for India in Council has received the following general order by H.E. the Gov. gen. of India:—

Camp Hoshiarpore, March 28.—H.E. the Gov. gen. of India gladly embraces the opportunity afforded by the return of H.M.'s 53rd regt. to England to place on record the sense entertained by the Government of the services rendered in this Presidency by this excellent regiment.

The 53rd regt. arrived in India in December, 1844, and proceeded to the North-Western Provinces.

It was present in the campaign of the Sutlej, and engaged in the battle of Aliwal in January, 1846, and at the battle of Sobraon on the 10th of February, 1846, which closed that campaign. It took part also in the campaign of the Punjab, and was present in the battle of Goojerat.

After several years of service in the Upper Provinces and in the Punjab, in the course of which, while at Peshawur in 1851 and 1852, the regiment was frequently engaged in successful expeditions against the border tribes, the 53rd foot proceeded to the presidency, and it was in garrison in Fort William in the early part of the memorable year 1857, when the late mutinies broke out in the native army of Bengal.

The Governor-general willingly bears testimony to the importance of the service rendered at that time by the regiment at the presidency.

The 53rd foot proceeded to the North-Western Provinces while the general disturbances were at their height; and at the brilliant affair at Khujiva, on the 1st of November, 1857, where about two companies were engaged successfully, in concert with the Shannon's naval brigade, against a very superior body of rebels and mutineers, the regiment lost its gallant and lamented commander, Lieut. col. Powell, C.B.

Of this action it was appropriately remarked in the despatch of H.E. the C. in C., "This fight affords one more instance of what the British soldier will perform in spite of every disadvantage and extraordinary fatigue. This was a soldiers' fight, if ever there was one."

With the detachment of the 53rd, on this occasion, it will be remembered that a company of the 93rd highlanders, a small party of the royal engineers, and a depot detachment likewise fought, the whole winning for themselves the admiration and gratitude of their fellow-countrymen.

The 53rd regt. served at the memorable relief of the garrison of Lucknow, achieved by H.E. the C. in C. in November, 1857; and, after having been present at the relief of Cawnpore, and at the action on the Kalanudder, both directed by H.E. in person; at the actions at Futteghurh and at Shumsabad, and the storming of Meerangunge; the regiment was engaged in the capture of Lucknow, by the C. in C., in April, 1858.

Lastly, the regiment was employed in the taking of Sultanpore, and the passage of the Goomtee, under Maj. gen. Sir Hope Grant, K.C.B., and in the final subjugation of Oude.

The field services of the 53rd foot, however, have not been more conspicuous than its discipline and good conduct throughout the period of its employment in India.

The Gov. gen. takes his leave of this fine regiment with a very hearty farewell.

No. 364 of 1860.—Under instructions from H.M.'s Secretary of State for India, the portions of H.M.'s warrant of July 1, 1859, which refer to relative rank and precedence of veterinary surgeons of H.M.'s British forces, are declared to be applicable to veterinary surgs. of H.M.'s Indian forces.

It has not been considered expedient at present to alter the existing regulations affecting the pay and allowances, or the condition of invaliding and retirement of this class of officers.

Travelling in the Punjab.

Head Qrs., Camp Hoshiarpore, March 26.—Under instructions from H.E. the Gov. gen., the C. in C. is pleased to direct that in future all applications made to the Govt. of the Punjab by officers of the army for permission to travel in the territories of the Maharajah of Cashmere and Jummoo shall be supported by the countersignature of their commanding officers, and that such countersignature shall only be granted when the general character of the applicant is a sufficient guarantee for his correct deportment towards the people of a foreign State.

H.E. further notifies that, prior to these applications being acceded to, all applicants will be required to sign a printed form binding themselves to observe strictly the rules drawn up for the guidance of travellers in Cashmere, a copy of which will be forwarded to them with the form referred to on their applications reaching Lahore and meeting with the approval of the Punjab Govt.

Enlistment in H.M.'s Indian Forces.

Head Qrs., Camp Trimmooh Ghat, March 16, 1860. The C. in C. is pleased to announce, for information and guidance, that H.M.'s Government has recently decided that soldiers of good character, and within the prescribed age (30 years), who, having been discharged from regiments of the British army, may enlist within six months in Her Majesty's Indian forces, declaring their former service at the time of their 2nd enlistment, shall be entitled to reckon their previous service for pension in the Indian army.

Barrack Furniture.

Head Qrs., Camp Ghurreeh Shah, March 18.—It having been brought to the notice of H.E. the C. in C. that half-yearly returns of barrack furniture, directed to be furnished to the milly. auditor gen., have not been forwarded from many stations, barrack masters are hereby directed to comply at once, and for the future, with the order laid down in para. 13, G.O. No. 1,711, Dec. 23, 1858.

CAPT. S. TRIPE, OF THE 50TH N.I.

April 20.—No. 176 of 1860.—The following extract of a military despatch from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, is published in General Orders:—

Despatch dated March 15, 1860, No. 45.
"1. I now reply to your military letter, No. 67, dated April 11, 1859, regarding the disposal of Capt. Septimus Tripe, of the 50th regt. N.I., who has been twice, within 6 months, convicted by court-martial of drunkenness.

"2. The delay which has occurred in dealing with this reference has been occasioned by the proceedings of the court-martial held at Kamptee on Dec. 16, 1858 (which were forwarded in your secretary's letter), having been inadvertently overlooked.

"3. I have to express the concurrence of H.M.'s Govt. in the opinion recorded by Sir P. Grant, that the punishment of 6 months' suspension from rank and pay, awarded by two successive courts-martial, was in each case inadequate to the offence of which Capt. Tripe had been convicted.

"4. You are directed to remove Capt. Tripe from the strength of the army from the date on which your orders to that effect may reach the station at which he may be residing.

"5. In consideration of his having served in the army for seventeen years, Capt. Tripe will be granted a pension of £60 a-year, commencing from the date of his removal from the army."

BRITISH REGIMENTS ON THE INDIAN ESTABLISHMENT.

April 20.—No. 177.—The following extract from a military despatch from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, dated March 15, 1860, No. 43, is published:—

"2. A misconception appears to exist, both at your presidency and at Bombay, as to the date at which British regiments are considered on the Indian establishment. I take this opportunity, therefore, of stating that a British regiment is on the Indian establishment, i.e., becomes chargeable to India, from the date of its embarking for that country instead of its arrival there."

Fort St. George, April 20.—No. 180.—The Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to make the following appointment:—Lieut. col. B. Hamilton, 1st N.I. actg. dep. sec., to be dep. sec. to Govt. in the military department.

Breaking up of the Nuggur Parker Field Force.

Nugger Parker, March 15.—As the Nugger Parker Field Force will be broken up from to-morrow, it only remains for Lieut.-col. Evans to thank the few officers and men still composing it for their good conduct and efficiency during the time they have been under his command.

To Capt. Sandwith, his officers, and wing of the 3rd Beloochees, he can only repeat that which he stated on a former occasion when taking leave of the head quarter wing, viz.—That efficiency in the field waits upon habits of discipline, a proper tone, and good raw material.

To Lieut. Tyrwhitt and his levies, who have had by far the harder share of work of any corps, detail, or detachment at different times forming a portion of the field force, his especial thanks are due, and Lieut. Tyrwhitt is requested to convey with them the strong sense entertained of their merits to all his native officers and men, but particularly to Resaldar Chocto Khan.

Jemadars Futtel Khan, Durya Khan Rind, and Beera Khan, also to Naik Yarroo, for their very great exertions commencing in April, 1859, and down to the present time. During these eleven months these native officers and non-commissioned officers, and a large portion of levies have been constantly engaged in arduous duties, and in the saddle, either in attack or pur-suit, or in keeping watch and ward against rebels and outlaws.

Lieut. Tyrwhitt's own great merits are well known, and have repeatedly been brought to the notice of Government by Lieut. col. Evans.

To all, Lieut. col. Evans wishes health and happiness. (Signed) W. E. Evans, Lieut. col. Comdg. Nuggur Parkur F.F.

Certificates of Leave.

Financial Dept.—Under instructions from the Right hon. the Principal Secy. of State for India, the Right hon. the Gov. in Council is pleased to direct that every covenanted or uncovenanted servant of gov., to whom leave of absence may be granted to proc. to Europe, will obtain, from the audit office, certificates stating the exact nature of his leave, the date of the departure of the vessel in which he embarks for Europe, and whether his absentee allowance is to be drawn in England or not. These certificates should be forwarded to the India House immediately on arrival.

Travelling Irregularities.

In consequence of the frequent, and in many instances well-founded, complaints made against officers and soldiers travelling by the Wassind and Mhow bullock train, for incivility to the European inspectors and ill-treatment of the native subordinates of the train. H.E. the C. in C. publishes the director's rules for general information, and notifies that a refusal on the part of any officer, non-commissioned officer, or soldier, travelling by the train, to act in accordance therewith, will be reported to him by the commissary general, and be dealt with as circumstances may demand.

In the case of large bodies of troops proceeding by train on successive days, Rules 3 and 4 are subject to the orders which the officer in command may receive from the quartermaster general, or one of his assistants, who will arrange their transit with the director as circumstances at the time render necessary.

Referring to Rule 7, if any officer or non-commissioned officer has reason to complain of any of the officials of the train, he is requested to report his complaint in detail to the quartermaster general of the army, as well as enter it into the Complaint Book, and it will be promptly attended to.

Rules for the information and guidance of officers and troops proceeding from Wassind to Mhow, and vice versa—

Rule 1. The train will start from Wassind and Mhow precisely at 3 p.m. daily, except Sundays, when passengers and stores will not be despatched except in cases of emergency.

2. The halting stations between Wassind and Mhow are as follows:

Tullegaum (Egutpoora), Nassick, Pimpnagaum, Chandore, Malligaum, Dhoolia, Sawalda (Seerpoor), Sindwa, Khull.

3. Should any passenger be inclined to halt at any other intermediate travellers' bungalows, they may do so.

4. Travellers halting at the stations shown under Rules 2 and 3 will be forwarded on at 3 p.m. daily, and should they not proceed at that hour, they will have to wait till 3 p.m. the following day.

5. Tickets must be shown by passengers to the subordinates of the transport train at the halting stations only. Parties not producing their tickets will not be furnished with shigrams or carts.

6. The train subordinates are forbidden, under pain of dismissal, from asking for, or receiving from, the passengers any gratuity.

7. Train subordinates are strictly enjoined, on pain of dismissal, to observe the utmost civility towards passengers, and any instance to the contrary, if entered in the Complaint Book provided at each halting station, or addressed to the director transport train, will be attended to, but no passenger is to ill-treat the cattle or subordinates of the transport train on any account.

8. A few copies of this General Order will be forwarded to the commissary general, in order that one may be placed in each staging bungalow.

Officers visiting Mahabaleshwar while the head quarters of the army are established there, will be good enough to report their arrival to the adjutant general of the army, for the information of the C. in C., intimating at the same time the extent of the leave of absence they may have obtained. No report of departure is required.

MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA AND CHINA.—The directors state in their report that the accounts for the half-year ending the 31st December last, and profit and loss account for the entire year, showing a net profit (after providing for all bad and doubtful debts, and payment of income-tax) of £74,560, which has been appropriated as follows:—£25,000 in payment of a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum for the half-year ending the 30th of June; £25,000 for a like dividend for the half-year ending the 31st of December; £20,000 carried to a reserve fund, and £1,670 carried forward to next account. The premises recently occupied by the bank in Old Broad street having been found too small for the increasing business of the company, the directors were glad to avail themselves of an opportunity to secure an assignment of the lease of the present banking-house on favourable terms. Since the last meeting the court have opened a branch in the Mauritius. In their last annual report the Court mentioned their expectation of receiving from the directors of the late Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China, its reserve fund intact; in this they have been disappointed—the losses of the late bank have proved much larger than the amount at which they were estimated, and considerably in excess of the profits carried forward to meet them. The directors of the late bank in Bombay, who have had the sole control of the winding-up of that institution, have apprised the Court that a considerable reduction will have to be made from the reserve fund of the late bank, before it is handed over to the Chartered Bank. In the mean time the Court have set apart the sum of £20,000 from the profits of the past year, as a commencement of the reserve fund of this bank.

ORIENTAL GAS COMPANY.—At a meeting of the Oriental Gas Company on the 22nd, Mr. J. Barber in the chair, the report was adopted, and a dividend declared at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax. It was stated in explanation of the comparatively slow progress of the undertaking, that this result was chiefly due to the delays caused by the cumbrous working of the Indian Government. Fourteen months ago estimates were sent in for lighting Fort William and other public buildings, and the directors are still awaiting the decision of the authorities. Notwithstanding these disappointments, however, the general business of the company is proceeding satisfactorily, the number of public lights having increased from 469 in December, 1858, to 606 in December, 1859, and from 1,114 private lights to 1,504. Since the close of last year there has been a further augmentation of eighty public and sixty-eight private lights. The prospects of the present year were stated to be encouraging; and it is expected that in two or three years gas in Calcutta will have generally superseded oil.

OPENING OF THE PORT OF SAIGON, COCHIN CHINA.—Board of Trade, Whitehall, May 22. The Right Hon. the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade and Plantations have received from the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs a copy of a despatch from H.M.'s Minister in China, reporting that the port of Saigon, in Cochin China, has been opened to foreign trade, the only charge made being a tonnage duty of four dollars a ton.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

CLERGYMEN AS TEACHERS.

THE evangelical party, it must be admitted, are stanch and persevering, and rarely lose sight of the prey on which they have once fixed their eyes. If the door is not opened to them it is not from want of knocking; if their importunities are not always successful, it is not from any modesty or excessive delicacy on their part. They act on the principle enunciated by Luccretius in the oft-quoted lines,—

"Consuetudo concinnat amorem.

*Nam, leviter quamvis, quod crebro tunditur ictu,
Vincitur id longo spatium tamen, atque labescit
Nonne vides etiam guttas in saxa cadentes
Humoris longo in spatio pertundere saxa."*

For many years past they have diligently applied themselves to the insertion of the thin end of the wedge, trusting to time and accident for a fuller measure of success. The Court of Directors in the olden time were wisely averse to placing opportunities for much mischief within reach of men proverbially more remarkable for their zeal than their discretion, and whose knowledge of books exceeded their experience of mankind. So late as 1857 the Court declined "to authorise any relaxation of the general orders issued by (them) in 1842, prohibiting the employment of clergymen in connection with education in India." The proselytisers, however, were not to be discouraged. Again and again they returned to the charge, till at length they have been able to claim a victory, though without gaining an inch of ground. By dint of incessant assiduity, they extorted from the Secretary of State the following instructions to the Governor-General in Council, dated October 14, 1859:—

"I have had under my consideration in council your letter dated March 4, No. 8, 1859, in connection with the letter of the late Court of Directors of February, 1157, and former correspondence on the subject of the employment of Christian clergymen in the educational departments. It appears to me that a rule by which a person fitted in other respects for employment in the educational department is excluded, simply upon the ground that he is a Christian clergyman, is incompatible with the principle on which the Government of India has been, and ought to be conducted, of not sanctioning any partial disabilities applicable either to the European or native subjects of her Majesty. In practice there have been several exceptions to the rule, and I am of opinion that before any such appointment is made, not only the character of the individual, but the particular position in which he is to be placed, and the effect which may be produced by the appointment, must be taken into careful consideration."

It is evident that this leaves the question very much where it was. A clergyman is not excluded from the educational department because he is a clergyman, but only that being a clergyman the natives may suspect him of being engaged in promoting their conversion to the Christian faith. This is a mere quibble, and the old prohibition is virtually maintained. It is nothing more than an unmeaning concession to the cant of the day, and the Secretary of State himself, in referring to a case in which an Inspector of Schools in Madras had exceeded his proper functions, remarks that the circumstance affords "a sufficient proof of the inexpediency of employing clergymen in such positions." Holding these sound views on the subject, Sir Charles would surely have acted with greater consistency and dignity had he simply adhered to the former resolution of the Court of Directors. Fortunately, however, the Governor-general, whose thoroughly religious character and convictions exonerate him from all suspicion of being indifferent or latitudinarian, is clearly impressed with the necessity of moving with great caution in the selection of clergymen to hold educational appointments. It is in the following terms that Mr. Beadon announces the course his Excellency intends to pursue, and which virtually nullifies the unwise concession made by Sir Charles Wood:—

"With reference to the foregoing summary of the views of the Home Government on the subject, the Governor-general is pleased to declare that, excepting the office of Inspector of Schools, the employment in the educational department of clergymen or ministers, in other respects they are fit for such employment, is not prohibited on the ground of their profession, but that no such person is to be so employed without careful advertence to his individual character, to the particular position in which he will be placed, and to the effect which may be produced by his appointment. His Excellency is also pleased to declare that no one who is or has recently been engaged as a missionary is eligible for such employment, and that no clergyman or minister can be employed in the office of Inspector of Schools."

RAILWAYS IN INDIA.

A VERY full and valuable Report on railways in India has been drawn up by Mr. Juland Danvers, Secretary to that Department of the India office, from which much important information may be derived, though naturally of a character but little calculated to interest the general reader. The first attempts to introduce railways into India were made in 1845, by two private associations respectively styling themselves the "East India," and the "Great Indian Peninsula," Railway Companies, but it was found impossible to raise the requisite capital unless a certain amount of interest were guaranteed by the Government. This the late Court of Directors at length agreed to do, and also to grant the land required for the works free of expense. The guarantee is for the term of 99 years, at the expiration of which the land reverts to the Government, and the works likewise become the property of the State, after paying a fair price for the stock of engines, carriages, &c., &c. Each Company, however, is empowered to surrender the works at any time after a portion of the line has been opened for three months, upon giving six months' notice, and the Government is, in such case, bound to refund the entire amount of outlay that has been officially sanctioned. Further, at the expiration of 25, or of 50 years, the Government may claim the right of purchasing any railway at the average market value of the shares on the London market during the previous three years. The Government, moreover, is entitled to the option of paying the amount in a gross sum, or in the form of an annuity, "to be reckoned from the time when the gross payment would be payable, and to continue during the residue of the 99 years, the rate of interest used in calculating such annuity being determined by the average rate of interest during the preceding two years received in London upon securities of the Indian Government." At the present moment eight companies are at work upon 4,821 miles of communication, exclusive of 570 miles of river navigation from Kotree to Moulton, the average length of each line—excluding the Calcutta and South Eastern—being 688 miles, with a capital of £7,450,000. Up to the 31st December, 1859, these companies had received the sum of £3,840,790 for guaranteed interest, of which £3,508,535 were paid to the three companies whose lines were partially open, and who six months previously had repaid £562,633. The entire capital estimated for all the railways which have been sanctioned amounts to £52,430,000, of which £34,133,300 had been guaranteed by the India Government, and £27,079,712 raised on the 31st December last. It is calculated that 250 tons of materials of one kind or another are shipped from this country for every mile of railway laid down in India, so that 1,210,000 tons would be required for the lines already sanctioned; 794,904 tons having been sent out up to the close of last year. The eight companies already sanctioned are as follows:—

East India Railway, from Calcutta to Delhi, 1,138 miles, with branch from Allahabad to Jubbulpore, 200 miles; estimated capital, £19,000,000; capital sanctioned, £14,000,000; now open for traffic, 294½ miles, at a cost of £3,700,500.

Great Indian Peninsular Railway, from Bombay to Callian, 34½ miles; from Callian to Jubbulpore, 572½; from Callian to Junction with Madras line, 389; Nagpore Branch, 263; Campoolie Branch, 7½; in all 1,266 miles; estimated capital, £12,000,000; capital sanctioned, £8,333,300; open for traffic, 273½ miles.

Madras Railway, from Madras to the western coast at Beypore, 405 miles, with branches to Bangalore and the Neilgherries, 110 miles; also from Madras, via Bellary, to line from Bombay, 330; in all, 845 miles; estimated capital, £8,500,000; capital sanctioned, £5,000,000; now open, 96 miles.

Sind Railway Company, from Kurrachee to Kotree, 114 miles; from Moulton and Lahore to Umritser and Delhi, 490 miles; and steam flotilla on Indus, from Kotree to Moulton, 570 miles; estimated capital, £5,650,000; capital sanctioned, £2,750,000.

Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway, from Bombay, via Surat and Baroda, to Ahmedabad, 310 miles; estimated capital, £2,300,000; capital sanctioned, £2,300,000.

Eastern Bengal Railway Company, from Calcutta to Dacca, with branch to Jessore, 130 miles; estimated capital, £1,250,000; capital sanctioned, £1,000,000.

Calcutta and South Eastern Railway, from Calcutta to Port of Mutlah, 29 miles; capital estimated and sanctioned, £250,000.

Great Southern of India Railway, from Negapatnam to Trichinopoly, with branches to Salem and Tuticorin, 300 miles; estimated capital, £2,000,000; capital sanctioned, £500,000.

There are many details furnished in Mr. Danvers's Report, which cannot fail to interest the 15,224 shareholders who have invested money in Indian Railways; for which, however, we must refer them to that able and lucid State-paper.

A BUDGET FOR INDIA.

WHATEVER difference of opinion there may exist as to the merits or practicability of Mr. Wilson's scheme of taxation, there can be none with regard to the expediency of the innovation announced in our last issue. For the future a prospective budget of income and expenditure for our Indian empire is to be annually prepared, a thorough system of accounts is to be introduced, and those accounts regularly submitted to the Audit Department. The only rational subject for wonder is that it should have been possible to govern those vast territories for such a lengthened period without the necessity of such financial arrangements having been long since recognised and acted upon. What would be thought of a commercial firm, or even of a private family, that did not endeavour to regulate beforehand its expenditure by its income? Or what other result could attend the neglect of such salutary forethought than pecuniary embarrassment and debt? No nation, however great its internal resources, can expect to remain solvent that does not with equal foresight make provision for the coming year, restraining its outgoings within the limits of its receipts. Such, unhappily, has not hitherto been the case with the Indian Government. When the annual expenses have exceeded the annual income, it has been deemed sufficient to open a loan, or to suspend public works of acknowledged utility. Lord Ellenborough, indeed, with characteristic sagacity, saw the inevitable consequences of such improvidence, and recommended the only sure means of averting bankruptcy. His warnings and advice were, however, unheeded, and the authorities were permitted to adhere to the clumsy manipulation of accounts which they mistook for finance. Since the mutiny it has become evident to the most inveterate laudator temporis acti that a radical change was inevitable in the financial department, and there can be but few who would find fault with the improvements designed by Mr. Wilson, and sanctioned by the Government in the General Order to which we have already alluded.

Previous to the month of April in every year, careful estimates of the anticipated income and the proposed expenditure will henceforth be laid before the Supreme Government, which, after due consideration of the most urgent requirements of the State in relation to the ways and means, will apportion to each branch of the Service, and to the several detailed heads of each branch a specific sum, not to be exceeded on any account short of a most pressing and extraordinary emergency; and in that case a report must immediately be made, in order to obtain the sanction of the Financial Authorities. The advantages of such a system are so obvious, that any reasons for its justification might be deemed superfluous. The most prominent benefits to be thence expected are, however, classed under five heads, which fully establish its desirability and excellence. In the first place a prospective review of the finances of the empire will enable the Government to avoid exceeding the means at its disposal; and in the second, the very act of appropriating particular sums for particular services will lead to careful revision of the corresponding items of the preceding year, and thus keep ever in view the possibility of reduction. Thirdly, when it is known beforehand what are the exact means in the hands of the Government, the relative urgency of each item will be weighed and considered, and works of lesser importance will give way to claims of primary necessity. Fourthly, a regular debtor and creditor account will be opened between the Supreme Government and every separate department of the State—these accounts to be prepared and submitted both monthly and quarterly, thus ensuring the utmost care and regularity in all that concerns the public expenditure. Fifthly and finally, the foundation will be laid of an Imperial Audit, for the purpose of examining and passing month by month, quarter by quarter, year by year, the accounts of every branch of the Service, and of restraining the Executive Departments from exceeding the means placed at their disposal.

Although these arrangements cannot at once be perfected and brought into full operation, a beginning will nevertheless be made with the least possible delay. A Central Revenue Department for all India will be constituted at Calcutta, and also an Audit Board, with the same functions and powers as the one long since established in London for the supervision of the accounts of "every department of the State and of every Colonial Government in the British Empire." The foundations of both Budget and Audit are to be laid during the current official year, and the system will be brought into working order for the year 1861-62. If Mr. Wilson should effect no other good than this, his mission will have been productive of great benefit to India, for a wholesome and intelligent economy is scarcely less desirable than an increase of revenue, and no economy can be worthy of the name that is not based upon a thorough knowledge of the real exigencies of the State and of the ways and means fairly at the disposition of the Government.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE "TIMES" AND THE INDIAN ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The Times of the 19th of this month has a leading article in which is exhibited more than its usual ignorance of affairs in India, in describing the present condition of the army; and as its figures would give a most erroneous impression of the real state of the question, it is as well that the errors of the giant of the press should be exposed and corrected. It commences by stating—"That the Indian army in 1857 consisted of a contingent of 25,000 men of the royal army, of about 15,000 Europeans in the service of the Company, and of a native army consisting of 250,000 sabres and bayonets. It proceeds to say that the army of the East India Company has dissolved itself; that a quarter of a million of disciplined soldiers has been destroyed. The Company's European army has, by a fatality and mismanagement, followed the fate of the sepoys—they have also disbanded themselves. Most of them have taken their discharge, and of all the Company's army there is next to nothing left. It was under these circumstances that the question arose, Whether we should repair the old system, or whether we should contrive a new one. Shall we constitute out of the 400,000 irregular rabble now or lately in our pay, an army like to that which we have just annihilated, or shall we recruit more men in Europe to fill up the skeletons of the Company's European regiments, or shall we change the whole system and have one Imperial army?"

Let us first deal with the facts put before us. The Earl of Ellenborough, in speaking of the European branch of the local army in the month of March last, stated that of the Company's European army in the three Presidencies, 10,183 men out of 22,064, had taken their discharge, that there remained in India of this extinct body 11,879, that 1,850 were on their voyage out to join, and 1,303 more recruits were in the depot ready to follow; making the actual number of this force 15,130 efficient men, so that the European portion of the local European army for duty now exceeds the number which the Times allows as the full amount usually in the Company's service.

Let us now proceed to examine the accuracy of the numbers of the native army which has been destroyed. On referring to the "Army List" of 1857, published in England by authority previous to the mutiny, I find the Bengal army, regular and irregular forces, including also the Gwalior and Oude contingents, officered from the regulars, amounted to 149,040 men,* that of these 92,840 either went into open mutiny, or were so far suspected that it became necessary to disarm them, while 46,200 stood staunch to their colours and their officers; and, together with an army of Sikhs, aided in putting down the mutiny. It is not generally known that during the whole of the late campaign against the mutineers there were as many, and in most cases more, native soldiers in action than Europeans. In the storming parties at Delhi they were nearly equal, viz. :—

		Europeans.	Natives.	Total.
In Brig. gen. Nicholson's
column, Brig. gen. Jones	500	450	950
2 column, Brig. gen. Jones	500	350	850
8 col., Brig. gen. Campbell	200	750	950
Reserve, Brig. gen. Longfield	850	600	1,450
Total	2,050	2,150	4,200
Killed (including officers)	172	101	273
Wounded ditto	562	310	872
Total	734	411	1,145

Such, according to the official returns, exhibits the condition of the Bengal native army previously to the recruiting of the Sikh forces in the Punjab.

It must be in the recollection of most of your readers that on the occasion of the wars of 1846 and 1849 in the Punjab, the Sikh army which had been organised by European officers in the time of Runjeet Singh consisted of about 150,000 men, including all arms; that upwards of 60,000 composed the army that opposed and was eventually overthrown by Lord Gough at Gujerat, and the war being ended sunk into the population. In less than eight years the Bengal mutiny broke out, and as it became of the utmost moment to raise an army to meet this contingency the well-trained army of Runjeet Singh, with its regimental commissioned and non-commissioned officers, including field officers, were ready made to our hand, and it has been stated that the Punjab furnished as many as 80,000 men, who fought at Delhi, Lucknow, and throughout the campaign with as much zeal as the Europeans themselves. Fortunately for the Government the European officers of the mutinous and disarmed corps were available for this duty, and they took an active part in the war in command of these troops who are still in the service, and of whom several corps have volunteered and embarked for China.

The writer of the Times altogether ignores the existence of the native armies of Madras and Bombay which took so active a part under Lord Clyde, Sir Hugh Rose, Generals Mitchell, Napier, Roberts, and Whitlock, and which shared equally the hardships and partook of the honours distributed at the end of the war.

The Madras native army consists of fifty-two regiments of infantry, seven of cavalry, of as many battalions of artillery, and six companies of engineers, all regulars, comprising 56,220 men; to which if we add the Hyderabad contingent, which did good service in the field, and always acts with the Madras force, that presidency contains an efficient native army of 64,640 men. Again, there is the Bombay native army, consisting of 32,000 regulars and 17,500 irregulars, making a force of 49,500 well-trained troops; so that instead of the native army of India being annihilated, those of Madras and Bombay, which have been faithful to their colours, and have always done their duty at home and abroad, amount to 114,140 men. Thus the old Company's army, so far from being dissolved, contains at present 15,130 Europeans.

* N.B.—The numbers are given on the calculation that each regiment of infantry consists of 1,000; of cavalry, 600; of a company of artillery, 140; sappers, 100.

Of the Bengal native army regular and irregular which stood steady to their duty, there were ... ..	46,200
Of the Madras army ... ..	64,640
Of the Bombay army ... ..	49,500

Of the old native army still in existence ... 160,340

I find, on examining the "East India Register and Army List" of this year, published last month, that the Bengal Government has found it expedient to add to its native army 49,000 so called irregular infantry, and 13,500 cavalry, so that this old Indian army, of which there is next to nothing left—

Can muster of Europeans ... ..	15,130
Of natives in Bengal ... ..	108,780
" in Madras ... ..	64,640
" in Bombay ... ..	49,500

Making a total of ... 238,050 men.

It seems to me the difficulty then is, not to reconstruct an army, but how to dispense with the services of those which it has been found necessary to keep for the sake of preserving the peace. To this old army we have to add 60,000 Europeans of the English army, and we shall have nearly 300,000 men to keep in subjection a discontented population of 130,000,000, and be prepared for any contingency that may call for our service in suppressing revolts among the populations of the native provinces, which so frequently occur on a vacancy to the principality. We are in the habit of viewing this standing army as enormous, but we always compare it with our own limited population of 30,000,000, instead of comparing it with the population of all Europe. The Emperor of the French scarcely feels himself safe on his throne among 36,000,000 of his subjects with an army of six hundred thousand men, and if we compare the numbers of the troops and the population of every kingdom of Europe we must contemplate with wonder the very small military force that India has always had to keep in subjection so vast a foreign population. Till the present period we have been accustomed to look down on the inhabitants as a timid submissive race, because they have hitherto been patient under our rule, and yet it is from this people we have drawn an army acknowledged by such men as the Duke of Wellington and Sir Charles Napier, when properly commanded, as equal to any soldiers in the world. The late insurrection has taught us a lesson, and we may rely on it that without a Government satisfactory to themselves, we shall find that this quiet people, even without other weapons than those of peaceful resistance, will give us more trouble than those who took arms against us. Public and senseless clamour induced the House of Commons to take the government of India out of the hands of those that had built up a more splendid colonial empire than Cæsar or Alexander acquired. That House of Commons having no interest in the prosperity of India will probably lend itself to any measure that the Minister of the day proposes, and as was many years ago predicted by Lord Metcalfe, (who held a high position in England as a colonial statesman after his return from India) that if India should ever be lost to the Crown, it would be lost in the House of Commons. To abolish in the minor presidencies systems which have hitherto answered so well, and which have always proved so efficient, is neither wise nor safe. The composition of the army of Bengal in its former shape, and that which must be the result of recruiting from the different nations of which that army was and is now made up, render it as dissimilar in habits, language, and religious creed, as are the nations of Europe. One might as well hope to reconcile the armies of Russia and Italy, or Spain, placed under the command of French regimental and divisional officers, as to induce the Sikhs of the Punjab and the Hindostanees of the North-western provinces under the command of European officers to conform to the internal customs of the Sepoys of Telingana and the Carnatic, or the Mahratas of the southern part of the Deccan—to say nothing of the difference of language, religion, and social habits. It is true the public has not the details of the new organization before it, beyond what the Times and other ministerial papers choose to impart, but as this demi-official organ has prepared the House of Commons to legislate under the notion that India is at present without a local army, either European or native, it becomes important that Parliament should not follow blindfold the leader of the Times, nor take a step in the dark which may end in confusion and danger. The transfer of the officers of the late Company's army, numbering not fewer than 4,000, with all their claims for pensions for length of service, and with their funds providing for the families of those who may die in the service, into one imperial army, with regulations embracing supersession by purchase, and other rules at variance with those which were guaranteed by the Act of 1857, presents difficulties which can hardly be reconciled with that Act. The substitution of native for European officers, of troops and companies in irregular corps, met with considerable success as long as there was a regular native army from which fit men for the duty could be selected; but when the regular native army is abolished, and there is no longer a school in which European officers can be trained for the duties of irregulars, we should be apprehensive that neither the experience gained in a European regiment, nor in a staff corps without men, will be an adequate preparation for the delicate and important duty of commanding irregular corps, the internal conduct of which is so entirely in the hands of native officers. This is a point which it has always appeared to me the late General John Jacob and those who with him advocate the transfer of regimental duties from the European officer to the natives have overlooked.

General Jacob, an officer of artillery, well grounded in the scientific part of his profession, served, if I recollect, some years with the European portion of his corps, and others, not less than four or five, with the native artillery. He was then transferred to civil employment for two years, so that he had served an apprenticeship, if I may use the term, of several years among natives, and was selected out of the whole of Bombay to command the Scinde Horse. If we could ensure such training for every officer who may have to command an irregular corps to be selected out of thousands, and with only half the talent and other high qualities of General Jacob, we might, perhaps, venture to allow half the native army to be placed under native regimental officers. The experiment has commenced in the Bengal army with officers trained in native regiments. Let this system run its course for the next twenty or thirty years, and if it be found successful let it be introduced at Madras and Bombay, but at present it will be wiser and safer to let the armies of those presidencies alone, and not change that which has been found practically to answer so well.

Should the measure suggested by the Times be carried into effect it will transfer the English patronage of first appointments to the Indian army from the Council of India into the hands of the Commander-in-Chief, while every removal from a European regiment to the projected staff local corps will cause a vacancy in India and add so much more to the patronage of the Horse Guards, and provide additional patronage to the Governor-general, the nominee of Ministers.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

INDIAN MUTINY.

Mr. H. B. SHERIDAN put the following questions:—Whether instructions had been sent to the Indian Government to take steps to reduce the amount promised by the Home Government for compensation for losses by the Indian mutiny; and whether or not a special despatch was sent about January last upon the subject of those compensations; and, if so, whether there was any objection to lay that despatch, or the last despatch upon the subject, upon the table. And further, whether the £1,000,000 sterling awarded by the Home Government as a compensation to the sufferers by the Indian mutiny was to be the minimum as well as the maximum of such compensation?

Mr. T. G. BARING said that no instructions had been sent out to the Indian Government to reduce the amount of compensation for losses by the Indian mutiny. There was no objection to the production of the despatch if the hon. gentleman would move for it. With respect to the £1,000,000 awarded by the Home Government for compensation, the question as between the maximum or minimum was reserved until the Indian Government knew how much was to be paid on the principle upon which compensation was to be awarded.

INDIAN PROMISSORY NOTES.

Mr. H. B. SHERIDAN then asked the following questions:—Whether it was the intention of the Imperial Government to deduct English income-tax from the interest payable on promissory notes of the Indian Government where such interest is payable in this country by draughts on the Indian treasuries; whether it was the intention of Her Majesty's Ministers to allow the Indian Government to deduct Indian income-tax from the interest payable on promissory notes of the Indian Government after English income-tax has been already deducted from such interest in this country; or whether, in other words, interest on Indian promissory notes was subject to a double income-tax?

Mr. T. G. BARING said, in answer to the first question, that the Indian office acted ministerially to the Board of Inland Revenue. Whether the English income-tax would be deducted was a legal point upon which he must decline to give any opinion. It would be premature to give an answer to the second question until the Indian Income-tax Bill arrived in this country. The answer to the third question would be found in his answer to the other two.

THE INDIAN ARMY.

Sir DE L. EVANS wished to know whether it was true that the Minister of India or the Indian Government had decided that the local European army in India was to cease to exist. If that were the resolution of the Government, he wished to know in what way that decision was to be carried into effect, and at what time Parliament would have an opportunity of expressing its opinion on the subject.

Lord PALMERSTON said that the Secretary of State for India would give due notice of his intention to explain the decision that had been come to.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.

The directors state in their report that the progress made in their undertaking since the first ordinary meeting has been in the highest degree satisfactory. The report states that Colonel H. C. Cotton, the chief resident engineer, entered upon his appointment in Madras in July last. The directors acknowledge the great promptitude and liberality with which Sir C. Trevelyan, the Governor of Madras, afforded every possible facility and assistance to Colonel Cotton, to enable him to execute their instructions in the most effectual and satisfactory manner. With a view to insure the complete success of the company's operations, the Governor of Madras appointed Captain Rundall, then acting as superintending engineer of the Godavery Irrigation Works, as the representative and adviser of Government. Captain Rundall, in his official capacity, accompanied the company's resident chief engineer throughout his investigation, and most cordially rendered his aid and advice in the determination of the course and situations of the various contemplated works, and also in drawing up approximate estimates, thus securing, as far as could be, the approval of the Local Government to the plans prepared. It was under those favourable circumstances that the course of the proposed line, canal, and general features of the undertaking were determined upon, and the chief resident engineer was enabled to forward, in a remarkably short space of time, the further and most satisfactory report dated December 21, 1859. The directors remark "that the works as now planned with their subsidiary channels, will irrigate and render cultivable vast tracts now lying waste, and will also form the natural line of communication between Madras and those tracts, as also with the extensive countries drained by the Kistnah, the Toombudra, and Pennar Rivers, and their tributaries, embracing the Southern Mahratta country, with a large portion of the Nizam's dominions, &c., and that the Kistnah is believed to be navigable for a considerable distance, and capable of being rendered so, at a trifling expense, for 600 miles above Kurnool. The resources of the territories thus affected (naturally among the finest in Southern India) have been hitherto almost wholly undeveloped for want of irrigation and proper communication with each other and the coast, and as these essential requirements will be supplied by this company, the result, can hardly be otherwise than beneficial to all. In February last the directors received intelligence that in consequence of the failure of rain during the last monsoon in Bellary and Kurnool, a very serious famine was impending over those districts, and, feeling that by entering at once upon the actual construction of that portion of the works comprised within the fourth section, recommended by Colonel Cotton, as the first to be undertaken, without waiting for the completion of detailed surveys, plans, and estimates of the whole scheme, the interests of the company would be considerably advanced and earlier returns realized, while, by the employment thereby afforded to large numbers of the native population, the apprehended evils would be materially mitigated, they forthwith communicated with the Secretary of State in Council upon the subject, and having procured his sanction to the adoption of that course, on the 26th of February last forwarded instructions to their manager at Madras, under which, with the sanction and approval of the local Government, the construction of the Anicut, or Weir at Kurnool and the cutting at Mittacondal was on the 5th of April last entered upon. Within a few days after 2,000 labourers were secured in the locality, and these works will therefore now be prosecuted to completion as rapidly as possible. The supply of labour—a most important item—has also been found to be ample. The necessary machinery, tools, and stores for immediate use have been procured in India, while others in considerable quantity are now on their way from England to the scene of operations. Immediately after the first general meeting the directors transmitted to the Secretary of State in Council copies of the resolutions then passed fixing the annual allowance divisible among the seven directors at £1,000 per annum, the salary of the secretary at £1,000 per annum, and the remuneration to the auditors at £20 per annum each, for his approval; but he declined to accord such approval, or to sanction out of the guaranteed capital any increase upon the £1,500 per annum previously sanctioned for the expenses of home management. The disbursements in question have not therefore been increased by the directors, but remain as before the first general meeting. The capital account to the 31st of December last shows that £446,028 had been received, and £10,062 expended, leaving a balance of £435,557 with the Secretary of State, and £408 cash in hand.

BY J. R. YOUNG,

(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College),

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS,
PURE AND MIXED.

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. Young has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. Young's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELEY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

THE PERFECT SUBSTITUTE FOR SILVER. The real NICKEL SILVER, introduced more than twenty-five years ago by WILLIAM S. BURTON, when PLATED by the patent process of Messrs. Elkington and Co., is beyond all comparison the very best article next to sterling silver that can be employed as such, either usefully or ornamentally, as by no possible test can it be distinguished from real silver.

A small useful Plate Chest, containing a set, guaranteed of first quality for finish and durability, as follows:—

safe and salutary remedy for Indigestion, Liver Complaints, and all manner of Eruptions and Skin Diseases. Pains in the stomach after eating, evictions of wind, pains in the back, aching of the right shoulder, weakness, languor, and tawny hue of the skin, all disappear under the purifying powers of these admirable Pills. They contain no ingredient which could by possibility hurt the feeblest frame. They effect a momentous change throughout the system, by thoroughly expelling all impurities and imposing on every organ its natural functions. Many Testimonials of their efficacy can be produced, the latest of which has been forwarded by EDWARD SMITH, of Newport, Monmouth, who was cured after waiting under dyspepsia fifteen years.

PULVERMACHER'S GALVANIC ANTIRHEUMATIC CHAIN-BANDS FOR SELF-APPLICATION.

—Unequalled and certain as are the effects of the Chain-Bands in all kinds of Rheumatic Pains, still more remarkable and speedy is the relief they afford in Neuralgia, Tic Doloré, Head and Toothache, &c. Even the most inveterate cases of Paralysis, Epilepsy, Deafness, Gout, Strabismus, Lumbago, Indigestion, Nervous Debility, &c., disappear in a comparatively short time. Prospectuses, recording a vast number of private cures and extracts from numbers of scientific works, sent free. Chain-Bands, 6s., 10s., 16s., 22s., according to power.

J. L. PULVERMACHER and Co., 73, Oxford-street, adjoining the Princess's Theatre, London, and all Chemists.

THE MAGNESIAN EFFERVESCENT is

the most agreeable and effective remedy in all cases of Gout, Rheumatism, Acidity, Heartburn, Indigestion, and Biliary Affection, Nausea, Fever, Thirst, and Sickness. It is highly recommended by the profession, and will be found especially valuable to those going to India or travelling in warm climates; as a mild and efficacious saline aperient it stands unequalled, and will be found peculiarly adapted for delicate females and children. To be obtained through all respectable chemists, and wholesale from Messrs. BACCLAY, Farringdon-street (put up in stoppered bottles at 4s. 6d. for India), and smaller size at 1s. 10d. and 2s. 9d.

Prepared only by EDWARD PRICHARD, Chemist, 10, Vigo-street, Regent-street, W.

LENTUM, A NEW COMPOSITION

for Artificial TEETH and GUMS, recommended to Invalids and all who suffer from Indigestion. Its flexibility and lightness give the greatest power in mastication, avoiding all pain or pressure on the gums, without springs, wires, or any unsightly gold. It supports all loose and tender teeth, and does not require the extraction of stumps. Prepared only by

Mr. ALFRED JONES, SURGEON-DENTIST to

Her late Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, Her late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France.

64, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE. At Home from Eleven till Five.

FINE HEAD OF HAIR.

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL

POSSESSES wonderfully nourishing powers for the growth, restoration, and improvement of the human hair. It prevents it from falling off or turning gray, strengthens weak hair, and makes it beautifully soft, curly, and glossy. In the growth of the beard, whiskers, eyebrows, and mustachios it is unfailing in its stimulative operation. In reference to the hair of early childhood the use of the oil is attended with the happiest effects; mild, invigorating, and purifying in every instance, it dispels scurf and dandruff, and renders unnecessary the use of the fine comb. In all climates it alike displays its incomparable results, and has long been an established favourite in India. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (equal to four small), and 21s. per bottle.

On the wrapper of each bottle are the words, "ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL," in two lines.
Sold by A. ROWLAND AND SONS, 20, Hatton-garden and by Chemists and Perfumers.

THE Bombay and Calcutta Mails having arrived simultaneously, we are in receipt of intelligence from the latter Presidency up to the 4th May, and from the former to the 12th of the same month. The news received by this double channel is not very important, unless credence be given to the numerous rumours afloat in the native bazaars. At Delhi the evident disaffection of the population has rendered it necessary to adopt unusual precautions. The drawbridges of the fort are raised at night, guns are pointed to command the principal thoroughfares, and the neighbourhood

LIFTING THE VEIL.

Who are the Wuzerees Mahsoods? The heraldry of violence and crime must answer this question. Their golden book is that which gives the catalogue of the murders, robberies and cattle-liftings committed by these land-louping caterans against our more peaceable subjects. Judged by this test, the Mahsood is not without distinction. No "Illyrian or dark Suliote" more ready to leave his mild flock to the wolf and vulture whilst he carries fire and sword into the neighbouring plains. The Mahsoods are perhaps the most powerful subdivision of the Wuzerees. Their hills are counterminous with the border of the Dehra Ismail Khan district. Not much is known of them as yet, but they are reported to be difficult. They have never yet been entered by our troops; they are still veiled.

The British Government has long been irritated by the frequent raids committed by this tribe, and has twice meditated vengeance. In 1855 it was seriously proposed to establish a station nearer to the hills, in order to check their depredations, and in the same year it was intended that an expedition should enter the hills, but circumstances did not admit of this being effected. Again in 1857 sanction was obtained by Sir John Lawrence to the despatch of a force, but the events of the mutiny a second time saved the Mahsoods from the punishment due to their sins. Since then they have persisted in their old habits of marauding. At the foot of their hills no camel is safe. One thousand head of cattle yearly are carried off. The irregular levies are constantly turned out for their recovery. Impunity has increased the audacity of their incursions. It was natural, therefore, that the misdoings of this unchastised clan should come into the memory of the authorities when there was no more pressing business on hand, and as the corn showed signs of ripening. Still there is much to be said in favour of peace at all times, and peace from the Khyber to Cape Comorin is of rare occurrence; so, perhaps, the Mahsoods might have carried their own harvest but for their own incredible impudence and folly.

The commissioner had gone with the principal chiefs of the border to Sealkote to meet the viceroy. With him went the Nawab of Tak, the Lord Marcher of the district of that name, which abuts immediately on the hills. The safest politicians were lulled in the belief that the serenity of the frontier would not be disturbed. Some fifteen miles within the hills opposite the town of Tak is a place called Jhundola. Here there had formerly been a small fort commanding the passes to the plains. Some of the Nawab's friends during his absence commenced erecting some sort of works there. The Mahsoods assembled, dispersed the builders, and threw down their works. They then probably felt committed. They knew that their relations of the Kabul Khial had recently felt the weight of the British arms. They knew that they themselves had harboured a notorious freebooter Zungee, and one of the murderers of Capt. Meclum, and that one day or other they would be called to a reckoning. In the meantime there were some 3,000 Mahsood Wuzerees in arms. The breadth of the Punjab was between them and the commissioner. The Lord Marcher was far away. The infantry guard had been removed from the Tak Fort. What more agreeable and easy than to plunder the town, slay the inhabitants, and add fresh glory to the Mahsood name? Accordingly the whole body marched into the Tak gorge, encamping a mile or two within the hills on the night of the 12th of March. But the Nawab's steward, Kouroo Khan, was not asleep. He gave intelligence of their arrival to Resaldar Saadut Khan of the 5th Punjab Cavalry at Tak, and the detachments from the neighbouring posts were hastily called in. On the morning of the 13th the little force, numbering 159 sabres of the Punjab Cavalry, with some 50 of other sorts, found the Mahsoods posted a mile within the plain. Coming within gun-shot the Resaldar gave the order to retire. The Mahsoods followed up in high glee. But suddenly the Resaldar faced his party about, and fired a volley. The Mahsoods no longer on their native heath, and quite out of their element, fled in every direction. The cavalry pursued, and put some 300 hors de combat. The gallantry and conduct of Saadut Khan has been rewarded. The Mahsoods lost one of their most noted leaders, and were much discomfited by this rough rebuff.

The punishment administered is not, however, deemed sufficient, and it has been determined, on the recommendation of Sir Robert Montgomery, that the veil shall be lifted from the Mahsood country. Its seclusion will be immediately invaded by the 6,000 troops whom we enumerated in our last. There are difficulties before the expedition. The Mahsoods themselves may number 15,000 men. The country abounds in strong positions familiar to the enemy. Our own officers are as yet ignorant of the locality. The troops must carry their provisions with them. On the other hand, the Mahsoods may have had enough of fighting, and may at once submit. Our troops have ere this marched successfully through hills equally strong and equally unknown, and marched, as they do now, under the conduct of such well-known leaders as Lumsden, Wilde, Jones, and Green, and under the generalship of Neville Chamberlain. Humanly speaking, therefore, there can be no fear of miscarriage. One main object of the move is to get good maps of the territory to be unveiled, and with this view Major Walker and Captain Pollard, of the Engineers, and Captain Johnstone, all well-known border surveyors, accompany the force.—Friend of India.

THE DEFICIT AND ITS REMEDY.

The Legislative Council is fast assuming the appearance of a Parliament. We have the ministry in the shape of the Supreme Government, and the germs of an opposition in the persons of Messrs. Harington and Seonce. The judges are "below the gangway;" Mr. Forbes is the working silent member. But yesterday the opposition were in power, and Mr. Harington came down to "the House" with an ill-digested measure of taxation, which, like Mr. Disraeli in different circumstances, he was content to throw upon the members, and to allow to pass by a process somewhat similar to the Commons' "Resolutions." When the Council proved recalcitrant and were unable to forget that they were Englishmen, Mr. Harington taunted them with assuming the functions of a House of Commons. They were informed that they were of use only to register the decrees of the Government of India. When they asked for a connected financial statement such as that of the 18th February last, they were told not to arrogate to themselves the responsibility of the Governor-general. On Saturday, the Council presented a very different scene. Mr. Harington, no longer in power, forgot his former dignity, practically recanted his despotic opinions, and humbly asked for details of the deficit to meet which the country was to be taxed. On the 18th February he had unfortunately committed himself to the unqualified support of all the financial measures of the Supreme Government, and two seemingly innocent questions, followed by a profusion of thanks when they were answered to his satisfaction, was the only form his opposition could assume. Mr. Seonce having never so grievously committed himself, was free to indulge in a bolder course, which resulted only—if he was correctly reported—in proving his ignorance at once of arithmetic and logic. But we are indebted to both the honourable members for the clear explanation they elicited from Mr. Wilson. There were many besides them and the Madras Council who doubted if the deficit of 1860-61 would be so large as six and a-half millions, if the reductions of military expenditure already effected had not quenched at least half of that sum. There were many more who, believing it might turn out to be even larger, and glad that there was at last a prospect of extinguishing it for ever, were anxious for details as accurate as the case allowed of. And there was an evident necessity that the absurdities of the Madras minutes should be exposed, and all waverers reassured. We now know the extent of the deficit; we have a clearer idea than before of the nature of its remedy.

The income of the year which expires in a few days is £37,706,209. The increase of the excise on salt recently effected raises the estimate of the income for 1860-61 by £410,000, or to £38,116,208. The expenditure of the year about to expire is £41,770,018. By a decrease in military charges over and above the saving of the last six months, the expenditure of 1860-61 is estimated at only £40,230,000. The deficit in India will thus be £2,118,810. The mutinies have increased the debt in England from nearly 4 to upwards of 26½ millions sterling. Even understanding the charges on this account, they will not be less than £4,393,020. The sum required for payment of railway interest, deducting railway receipts, will be £1,000,000. This gives a total deficit for 1860-61 of

Home charges .. ..	4,393,020
Railway interest .. ..	1,000,000
Total .. ..	£7,511,830

This includes the million for compensation. As that is a charge which will not again recur, the whole deficit between income and expenditure is reduced to 6½ millions, as originally stated.

How much of this will be met by farther reduction of expenditure? how much by the new taxes? There may be a further saving in the military charges of £800,500, making the total military reductions in the year 2½ millions, and in the two years 6 millions, and bringing down the cost of the whole Indian army to £14,258,065, or a quarter of a million less than the minimum fixed by Lord Derby, and not three millions more than the cost of the native army in 1856. This lessens the deficit, which is to be met by taxation alone, to £5,700,000. The new taxes will not yield much in the first year of their operation, the improvement in the Customs will be small. Both cannot fairly be expected to reduce the deficit lower than to £3,500,000. This sum will be met, not as heretofore by loans, but from the cash balances in the exchequer. But this is an operation which cannot be repeated. If so, how is the Income-tax to be dispensed with in five years? By the saving which will be effected when, out of the chaos of levies a military police, and civil police, a new constabulary force is formed; by the direct profits of the paper currency and its indirect benefits to trade; by the repayment of the accumulated interest which the completion of their lines will enable the railway companies to make; by the development of the commercial policy just inaugurated, and the expansion which it will give to existing sources of revenue; and by the administrative reforms which the system of annual estimates and audit will introduce. If the Presidencies give their willing and hearty support 1865-60 should see India without an Income-tax. Its trade of 80 millions should be developed into 150, its revenue of 40 millions into 60, its people prosperous, wealthy, and contented.

That finance is a matter of politics, not of figures, is more fully illustrated in Mr. Wilson's speech of 21st April than in even that of 18th February. The reiteration in stronger language and in fuller detail of the determination of Government to maintain an efficient European force, a "subordinate and supplemental" native army, and a well-organised police constabulary, gives a strength and security to the empire not too dearly purchased at the cost of the blood and treasure of the rebellion. It may be considered as settled that India is to have 80,000 European soldiers, lodged, cared for, valued as only the sepoy has hitherto been. Time will mould the existing police of the presidencies and provinces into a civil force, and extinguish the myrmidons of the courts who swelled the number of the rebels of the north-west, who oppress Madras, who now foment revolt in Bengal. Whether we are to have a native army for all India of only 40,000 men, as The Times supposes, and as we believe, to be sufficient with a large police force, or whether the exposed and turbulent state of our frontiers from Martaban to Scinde will render twice that number necessary, is not yet decided. But taxation, which at once extinguishes financial deficit, secures ever increasing prosperity to the people, and guarantees permanent peace to the empire, was never less intolerable.—Friend of India.

THE LICENSE TAX—ITS INCIDENCE.

Eighteen Sections make up a bill by which it is proposed to include in taxation a very large number of classes hitherto exempt over the length and breadth of India. The gist of the law, practically, is comprised in twelve sections and just fills a couple of columns of the Gazette. A new law, like a new railroad, drags into the light of day names and things which had long enjoyed only a rural celebrity. Of the existence of the Moturpha tax we had all heard something before. It had been mentioned in a debate. It was denounced as "a barbarous tax with a barbarous name." It had even been quoted by Indian philanthropists as justifying the epithet of "be-nighted" when applied to Madras. But though the Draft Act before us repeals the Moturpha tax, as well as another termed the Veesabuddy, on the profits of trade, of which not one of our readers in fifty had ever heard in his life, it is still, apparently, from the land of night and barbarism that we are about to select the germs of a taxation which shall take root and expand, and cover the whole of the Peninsula. To all intents and purposes we shall have the Veesabuddy and the Moturpha, in an expurgated but amplified form, through the income tax and the tax on arts, trades, and professions.

The latter, nothing is too great or too minute to escape. Section three simplifies matters, and by the lightness of the schedule annihilates every excuse. It applies to the humblest handicraftsmen, to the chartered company of shareholders, and to the snug and comfortable partnership. The Oriental Gas Company, and the Burdwan Stone Company, the jewellers of Calcutta, and the tea growers in Assam, the monopolists of lime on the eastern frontier, the wealthy houses of Mirzapore, and the manufacturers of silks and brocades, the shawl merchants of Delhi, and Gungaram, the village blacksmith, will all contribute something to the burdens of the State. One obvious objection to the bill is the ridiculously small amount which men and companies whose looms and engines are counted by scores and their gains by hundreds, will be called on to pay. But this will be set right by the voluminous bill for the Income Tax, in the ample folds of which the representatives of commercial enterprise, native and European, will all be ensnared. Another difference between the two is that the License Bill will endure as long as the Perpetual Settlement itself, while the Income Tax may cease and determine at some remote and uncertain epoch, when railways girdle the empire, and five years shall have passed without a single campaign.

We throw out a few hints for the benefit of those whose duty it will be to set the License bill a-going. Fortunately, the retail traders, and the wholesale dealers in most parts of the Mofussil, are gregarious. A bazaar is recognised at a glance, and the rudest agriculturist can tell in a minute how many such bazaars there are within ten miles of his village. To speak correctly, the places where the usual commodities of a province or district are collected and exposed for sale, are of three kinds. There is the Gunje or mart where the wholesale dealers congregate, but where retail is not unusual. There are the permanent small bazaars, and there are the Hauts, which are held on one or two days in the week, in the centre of a bazaar, or on the raised sides of an old tank, or under half-a-dozen fine trees. There may be Hauts with or without bazaars, and bazaars with or without Hauts. In the case of large emporia, such as Nulchitty, in the Backergunge district, or those huge hives, Narayangunge and Serajunge, there can be no difficulty. Every wholesale trade there may be called on for his Rs. 10. In the case of ordinary bazaars the collecting authorities must determine whether the trader belongs to class one or to class two, and whether he is to pay Rs. 2 or Rs. 4 per annum. But we warn officials that the simpler the classification, and the fewer the attempts at discriminating between the profits of contiguous bazaars, the easier and more satisfactory will be their task. When the great Gunjes have been cleared off, of which there may be two, three, or half-a-dozen in a district, we should suggest a general division of the bazaars into two classes. There is the populous and thriving collection of well-built houses, in number 50, 80, or 100, and there are the six or eight "Moodees" shops which, by courtesy, are elevated to the dignity of a bazaar. All residents and shopkeepers in the latter may be summarily taxed at Rs. 2. All the inhabitants of the former may pay the higher rate of Rs. 4, unless for special reason it may be thought necessary to divide the traders of one locality into two distinct classes. As regards the preparation of lists every experienced magistrate, joint or deputy, in charge of a sub-division, will tell off on his fingers nearly all the bazaars in his jurisdiction. The Darogah will supply any deficiency in a week's time, and when once all the bazaars are enumerated, a morning's ride, an evening's walk, or an encampment for eight or ten days on the scene of taxation, ought to do the rest. One penalty, under section eleven, from which there should be no appeal, descending sharply on the first recusant, will awe the remainder into submission, and with a judicious mixture of conciliation and firmness such as the members of the services, covenanted or uncovenanted, are adepts at exhibiting, we shall have little fear of the working of this part of the scheme.

With regard to hauts or open markets the case is somewhat different. When they are held in bazaars, there should be little difficulty. But, in other cases, there is little to mark a haut on ordinary days, save half-a-dozen bamboos and some used-up matting. A retail trader cannot take his house on his back, walk away from a bazaar, and so elude taxation. But a disturbance in the neighbourhood, a sudden panic, an idle rumour, or an inconvenient pressure, may empty a haut for weeks, and even cause it to vanish entirely. Many who resort to these open markets are, moreover, the ryots, cultivators, or "agricultural menials," specially exempted under section fifteen. We think, then, that the authorities will exercise a judicious discretion if they abandon the attempt to pry too closely into the dealings of hauts, unless there be clear reasons why the holders of open stalls or other habitués shall be considered fit subjects for taxation, like the resident shopkeepers and sellers of grain.

There still remain the large class of artisans, taxable at one rupee a year. As the amount is small, and the classes in question are much scattered, it is precisely here that we may have the largest amount of discussion with the least productive return. In many parts of India, and especially in Bengal, each village has not its full complement of regular artisans. There is a blacksmith in one; a potter in another; a carpenter two miles off in a third; in a fourth are congregated a set of sleek and well-contented dealers in oil, running over with fat and rupees; and one quarter of a fifth village is thronged with "chamars," or leather curriers, sometimes suspected of poisoning cattle for the sake of their skins. Minute inquiries, prolonged residence, intense activity, and continuous supervision of willing and able subordinates, may effect much. There is not one of these classes, who, under the late rise in prices for skilled labour, is not as able to pay down his one rupee share of taxation as Mr. Wilson himself, but there is hardly one of them who will not take refuge in that business which shrouds so much of the mere villager's daily life. The petty Mahajun, if he thinks to evade the collector, may be brought up sharp, under section twelve, the very first time he endeavours to sue Kinnu or Gopal for his debt of Rs. 20. But carpenters, blacksmiths, workers in gold and ornaments, oil-makers, potters, weavers, barbers, and the like, may never come into Court at all. They have no rent but what they can take in kind, or collect with facility. They lend no money, and nothing but a foolish squabble about caste, or marriage, or a feast of the tribe to which they were not invited, may ever make them acquainted with the law. Still, something may be done if the local knowledge of European residents in the Mofussil be profitably turned to account. And we trust that no weak-minded official will allow any of these thriving handicraftsmen to escape on the plea that they wear common clothes, or have a few patches of land, and therefore fall into the category of ryots. They must, one and all, pay for the peace and security which a settled Government has conferred on their trades for three generations. We do not wish to see even the barber escape. A celebrated functionary of that class drew his line elsewhere. We would draw ours at the barber himself, and let the actual ryots whom he shaves, go scot free, but no one else.—Friend of India.

THE EXPEDITION AGAINST THE WUZEREES.

TELEGRAM FROM COMMISSIONER LEIA, CAMP PULOOREEN, April 20.

The force marched this morning from Khirjee to this. The whole of the cavalry marched at midnight for Khote Shingee in hopes of surprising a camp in its neighbourhood, perhaps of driving a body of men into the position at Khote Shingee. The infantry and mountain train were to follow. Khote Shingee was found nearly deserted; some cattle were picked up, and some slight skirmishing took place. The buildings were burnt to announce to the country that the Mahsoods were not possessors of that reputed strong point. The country still promising; cultivation very extensive; when destroyed, the aggregate cost to the Mahsoods will be very great. There are sheets of cultivation which will hold our camp. The character of the hills is easy; in the chase, men escaping from Khote Shingee were pursued by the cavalry to the tops of the hills.

TELEGRAM FROM CAMP PULOOREEN, No. 1, dated 23rd April.—Colonel Lumsden's column was attacked at daylight this morning by the Wuzerees in considerable force, about 3,000 men. Our piquets were overpowered, and the Wuzerees got into our camp, and did considerable damage among the cattle and camp followers; they were ultimately driven back with great loss, and pursued for three miles over the hills, and, to all appearances, have broken up. Our loss is 50 killed and 115 wounded; of the enemy 92 bodies have been counted in and about the camp, and many more were seen by officers being carried away. Heavy firing has been heard in the direction of General Chamberlain's camp.

TELEGRAM No. 2, dated 24th April.—No further attempt on our camp by the Wuzerees. They are reported to have broken up and dispersed, in consequence of the punishment they received yesterday. There were 92 killed on the spot, besides those carried off by the Wuzerees, and very many wounded. No news from General Chamberlain's camp to-day. Major Taylor wrote on 21st from Tooram Chunn, that they had seen many Wuzerees, but had met with no decided opposition. This was written before we heard the guns in the direction of their camp. Our communication with General Chamberlain's camp is very uncertain.

TELEGRAM No. 3, dated 25th April.—Heard from General Chamberlain's camp this morning. They were to be at Hydergee Kush to-day and rejoin the force to-morrow; some opposition is probable at the Shadrow Lunga, between this and Hydergee Kush. All well with them, and no further movement in Colonel Lumsden's camp by the Wuzerees. The wounded are doing well.

Lahore, 27th April, 5 P.M.

SERVICE MESSAGE.

From MAJOR TAYLOR, CAMP KURRACHEE, dated April 17th, 1860, 6 P.M.

The force marched to this place this morning, nine miles.

The Muhsoods deserted their breastwork on the Jumshinjee yesterday, and have broken up and returned. A small body is still collecting near Khote Shingee.

PROCLAMATION.

TO OMER KHAN, KHAN ZUM, ACHMEDEEN DOORANEE, AND OTHER MULICKS OF THE MUHSOOD TRIBE.

"Ever since the Daman has become the British boundary, the Muhsood Wuzerees have never ceased to harass the border, and so commit injuries upon the persons and property of British subjects, and likewise upon merchants and travellers.

"Further, the evil intentions of the whole tribe have lately been made manifest by their assembling to the number of 5,000 or 6,000 men in the Tauk Zam, and coming out of the hills for the purpose of plundering the town of Tauk.

"How this army of Wuzerees was met and defeated by a small band of Government horsemen, and driven back in rapid flight to their hills, leaving their chief Mullick and 250 bodies in the plain, need not here be entered into; and had this been the only aggression committed by the Muhsoods, the punishment which they suffered might have been considered by Government to have been sufficiently severe to obviate the necessity of further retaliation.

"But the Muhsoods have, as before mentioned, for years past committed deeds of violence; and this last unprovoked attack, in which all sections of the tribe joined, convinces the Government that its previous policy of leniency and forbearance is misunderstood, and that consequently there is no hope of its territory being respected, or of future immunity from injury, until it shall have evinced to the tribe that it has full resources and ability to redress the wrongs done to its subjects.

"Wherefore, the Viceroy and Governor-general has desired that a force shall enter the Muhsood country and there obtain redress for the past and security for the future. This proclamation then is to inform you that a force will enter your mountains in a few days, and to explain to you the reason of its doing so, and the object with which it comes.

"If the tribe will comply with the just demands of Government, force will not be employed against them, but if the Muhsoods refuse to make restoration for the past and to give security for the future, and appeal to arms, then they will be met by the Government troops in the full hope that, if our cause be just, God will help us, and the bloodshed on both sides will be on the heads of the Muhsoods themselves.

"Lastly, with the object of avoiding bloodshed, if possible, the Mullicks of the tribe will be permitted to attend the camp, to have any points in this proclamation which may not appear clear to them explained in viva voce communication, after which they will be permitted to return unmolested.

"(Signed) NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN, Brigdr.-gen. REYNELL G. TAYLOR, Commis. Supt. (True Copy.)

"(Signed) H. R. DAVIES, Govt., Punjab."

The engineers with the force have been engaged in making the surveys since the force went through the "Junis Pungah." The property of the three most mischievous members of the Muhsood tribe has been destroyed. On April 20 General Chamberlain, with 3,000 men, marched through the "Sheeboor Tungah." There was some firing on the part of the Wuzerees, and a horse of ours was killed. The tail of the Wuzee-ree party was subsequently overtaken by our advance guard, and in the skirmish three Wuzerees were killed, and a Mullick. On our side three men and four horses were wounded. Col. Lumsden, with some two thousand men, remained encamped at "Polloosen," near Kote Shingee. On the 21st the buildings in Kote Shuboor were burned by General Chamberlain's force, which was to move towards the Koondeegur mountains on the morning of the 22nd. The country is said to be tolerably open. The Wuzerees appear to be hanging back, but it is not probable that they will give up the game without some efforts of resistance.

The following account of Colonel Lumsden's Force has been supplied to us (Lahore Chronicle):—

"On 28th, at gunfire, some 3,300 Wuzerees attacked Colonel Lumsden's force, overpowering the pickets and coming in with them—rear and flank being attacked at the same time. A sharp matchlock fire ensued, accompanied by volleys of stones, as is the habit with these hill men. For an instant, Wuzerees, camp followers, native allies and our men were indiscriminately blended, tulwars flashing in every direction, and every kind of row possible as an accompaniment. Very soon, however, the Guides threw themselves into small compact bodies, meeting the Wuzerees hand to hand. With admirable steadiness and determination the guns were brought to bear on the men of the Wuzerees, who were thus checked, and the Goorkhas and Sikhs quickly seized the ridge. Major Rothney with admirable promptitude rapidly cleared the rear, while the Guides assembled their various small fighting parties, and the three corps then attacked the Wuzerees with a vigour which drove them in utter confusion over the near hills. The pursuit was kept up for three miles, and then the men returned, the enemy being scattered in every direction; 93 bodies of Wuzerees were counted in and about camp; many more must have fallen in the pursuit, and altogether their loss is estimated at not less than three times that number wounded; our loss is heavy. Though no European officers were wounded, yet we have some 50 killed and 100 odd wounded natives, but the fight was hand to hand, and the result has shown the Wuzerees that, with every advantage in their favour, time, place, and numbers, they are utterly unable to cope with men disciplined and led by British officers."

The latest telegram says:—"The sick and wounded were sent into Tak this morning. General Chamberlain and Major Taylor went to Jhundola to inspect the position of the Irregular Levies established there, and found them well and securely posted. All well in camp."

An officer with the force under General Chamberlain writes as follows:—"The force, not including our allies, consists of 5,190 fighting men of all arms, under the command of Brigadier-General Chamberlain. We arrived at this place (without a name), 25 miles from Tak nearly a week ago. General Chamberlain, on the second day, went off on a flying expedition, taking with him about 200 cavalry, the Peshawur and Huzara Mountain trains, the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 6th Punjab Infantry, the 6th Police, the Sappers and Miners, and some of the allies; and we have remaining here 'the Guides,' the 4th Sikhs, the 14th Punjab Infantry, part of the 24th Punjab Infantry, the Huzara Goorkha Battalion, Nos. 2 and 3 Light Field Battery (consisting of three guns and a cohort)—about 150 cavalry and 100 'allied' horse (called Kooshadas). The enemy has been very busy in trying to cut off camels and killing their proprietors when the former have to go out to graze, but have seldom been successful. He (the enemy) came down rather stronger than usual yesterday, in consequence of which a detachment of the Horse Guard Battalion and 3rd Light Cavalry went out and skirmished with them, wounding some of their men, they in return wounding one of the Goorkha buglers. This morning at daybreak our whole camp was attacked—in fact the Muhsoods came down in great force and surprised us, thereby showing great negligence on the part of the pickets. I have no time to write more than just to tell you that after a sharp struggle we drove them off (though not till they had got right into the centre of the camp), and that our casualties are—

	Fighting men	Killed.	Wounded.
Camp followers	..	60	118
	..	6	12
Total	..	66	142

One hundred and forty animals, viz., horses and camels, have been killed outright, or so disabled as to be useless. Of the enemy ninety bodies have been already found, you may at least reckon thirty that had not been found, and, I think, 150 would be a very proper proportion for the wounded.

"The Horse Guard Battalion and part of the guides followed the enemy several miles, and having seen them scuttle off some five miles further, retire to cantonments.

"A whole guard of the Guides, consisting of one havildar, one naick, and eight sepoys, were out to pieces on their post, dying like men, and allow me to add, though not belonging to the regiment myself, 'like Guides.'

"The pickets here must have been negligent, the surprise was complete. Our troops fought beautifully. Post is going, so I shut up with this consoling piece of news, 'not a single European was touched.'"

MISCELLANEOUS.

ORISSA.—A letter from the hill-tracts of Orissa reports that the punishment inflicted on the Khonds last year for infanticide has had the very best effect on the entire population. Most satisfactory reports have been received from some of the chiefs as to the number of female children now reared, and a census is being taken. Nothing is now heard of Mereah sacrifices. The Khonds and the Ooriyas bitterly complain against the followers of the camps of the surveyors who have this year entered China Kimmedy. The Khond chiefs declare that the camp followers plunder in all directions, seizing whatever they can find, and never paying for anything.

BEGUM KHAS MEHAL, principal wife of the King of Oude, petitioned the Governor-general on the subject of her late losses by fire, and asked for assistance. The President replied as before, that she should make her application to the King, her husband, as the Government of India had nothing to do with their private affairs.

THE POST-OFFICE AUTHORITIES propose that if the site originally selected for the New Post-office is required for the Custom-house, the site on which the ice-house is situated, and the Bank-shall, should be taken, or else that piece of ground in Coelah Ghat Street, adjoining the Pay-office. The inconvenience of the present premises is very great, and they are anxious for an early settlement of the question. The application has been referred to the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal for his opinion.

MEHRAB KHAN, the Adjutant of the Kotah rebels, and Ewaz Khan (who were apprehended in November last, near Gwalior, by Major Meade), the murderers of the late Major Burton and his sons, and Doctors Salder and Savel, have both been sentenced to be hung at the Kotah agency. Jeydeal, the ex-Kotah Vaquell, and chief leader of the rebels, was apprehended at Byral, a village in the Jeypoor district, on the 11th March, and has been sent to Kotah to undergo his trial. No doubt he also will meet his reward ere long.

CIVIL SERVICE APPOINTMENTS.—The changes consequent on Mr. C. B. Saunders' appointment to the Commissionership of the Hyderabad assigned districts are these. Mr. F. H. Bullock will be in charge of the Raichore Doab and Shorapore territory; Lieutenant Cadell of Dharaseo district; Captain Hamilton of West Berar, and Captain M. Taylor of East Berar. Captain Campbell is appointed to the charge of West Berar, but meanwhile will continue to act as Inam Commissioner.

THE MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONERS have applied to Government for a loan of two lakhs and Rs. 70,000, to enable them to complete the experimental drainage works now in progress. They propose to draw this sum by monthly instalments of Rs. 18,000, in fifteen months, after which the commissioners engage to pay the amount by instalments in eighteen months more from the Municipal funds. The Lieutenant-governor has recommended this proposal to the Supreme Government, and in the mean time has authorised the commissioners to borrow the monthly requirements from the Agra Bank. This bank has agreed to grant the monthly sums as a loan, pending the reference, and is also willing to lend the whole sum required, at the Bank of Bengal rates of interest.

AN EXTRAORDINARY GAZETTE issued to-day publishes the Queen's Message by the Red Sea Telegraph to the Governor-general. The break from Malta to Alexandria, and the break from Suez to Aden have delayed its transmission, and rendered Lord Canning's apologetic explanation necessary. "The Viceroy and Governor-general of India has had the honour to receive from her Majesty the Queen the following most gracious message:—"The Queen congratulates the Viceroy and Governor-general of India on the completion of the telegraph line which connects the Indian Empire with England. The Queen has much pleasure in sending by this new mode of communication her greetings to her native allies, and to the princes and people of India. The Queen trusts that this rapid communication will, under Providence, be the means of increasing the prosperity of all classes of her subjects both in England and India." Although there continue to be interruptions to the complete efficiency of the line, his Excellency deems it right that her Majesty's most gracious message be made known to all in India."

THE EXTINCTION OF THE COUNCILS.—The Bombay papers of last week inform us that on the 11th April, Mr. Frere, Provisional Member of Council, had been sworn in as Member of Council on the retirement of Mr. Malet. They now inform us that instructions have since then been received from home to fill up no more vacancies in Council. The matter seems to have caused some surprise in the Western Presidency. To us it causes none. We do not even wonder at the discourtesy of sending out the intimation of a resolution many months since recorded—no more vacancies in Council are to be filled up—so as to arrive a week after the new Councillor was installed. The date of Mr. Malet's retirement was true to a day any time the past five years; but the proverb of like master like man, would fail were the Secretary for India not to resemble the Governor-general in being always too late. At Calcutta, it has been believed, ever since September at all events, that Mr. Frere would never take his seat. Our anticipations have not been greatly out; he took his seat but had scarcely time to warm it, he had to leave it within the week. The Act of Parliament of 1833 provided for the extinction of Councils at the minor Presidencies without the necessity of applying to the legislature on the subject. They have been preserved only through the lust of patronage at an average of £50,000 a-year to the State, or a total up to the hour of a million and a quarter sterling in salaries. The mischief they have done may be estimated at ten times this at least. Last year when Lord Stanley was in office, Sir James Outram sent home an admirable letter recommending the extinction of the Supreme Council in its existing form. It was then short of the legal member. He stated that for his own part he would feel in no way offended by being bundled down stairs for the good of the State. One journal speaks of the reasonableness of permitting Sir George Clerk to have his own councillors. The governor has no more to say in the matter than we. No man knows better than he the annoyance that may be given by a strong-headed council, when consisting of men of experience, somewhat self-willed. When Sir George presided at the Bombay Council before, he had incessant contentions with his two colleagues. Any one of the three if left alone would have governed the Presidency admirably; the three together brought Government nearly to a stand still.—Friend of India, May 3.

CALCUTTA AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The Secretary of State has instructed the Governor-general to continue the exemption of seeds from Customs' duty hitherto enjoyed by the Calcutta Agricultural Society, on the ground that as such importations tend to the development of the resources of the country, they are entitled to the same privilege as machinery. This will save the Society Rs. 900 a-year. Punjab flax is similarly exempt from export duty.

VOLUNTEER CORPS.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette says, a Volunteer Rifle Corps has been formed at Lahore, under the auspices of Mr. Roberts, the judicial commissioner. It is expected that a company of two hundred and fifty will be formed. The Calcutta Government will sanction the establishment of a body of volunteers after the next mutiny. Meanwhile, why should not every station have a rifle corps?

COL. J. TRAVERS is appointed to officiate as Commandant of Meade's Horse and political agent in Western Malwa for Capt. R. E. Hutchinson, who has left for England.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—Mr. A. K. Corfield, who was appointed civil auditor, Fort William, from the 1st of May in the notification from the financial department, No. 23, dated 31st March, 1860, being about to proceed to England on leave on medical certificate, the Hon. the President in Council has been pleased to make the following appointments:—Mr. H. D. Sandeman, sub-treasurer at Madras, to officiate as civil auditor, Fort William; Mr. F. Forbes, 1st assistant accountant-general, Madras, to officiate as sub-treasurer, vice Mr. Sandeman; Mr. W. J. Raynor, 2nd assistant accountant-general, Madras, to officiate as 1st assistant, vice Mr. Forbes. Mr. W. Waterfield, 1st assistant accountant-general to the Government of India, to officiate as civil auditor, Fort William, pending the arrival of Mr. Sandeman from Madras. Mr. S. G. Wyatt, 3rd assistant accountant-general to the Government of India, and at present officiating as 2nd assistant, to officiate as 1st assistant accountant general, vice Mr. Waterfield. Mr. G. W. Kellner, at present officiating 3rd assistant accountant general, to officiate as 2nd assistant in the room of Mr. Wyatt. Baboo Govind Chunder Dutt, assistant sub-treasurer, and at present acting as additional assistant to the accountant-general, to officiate as 3rd assistant accountant-general in the place of Mr. Kellner.

THE REASON WHY.—We (Friend of India) notice in the North-west journals continued speculations as to the absence of Dost Mahomed from the Peshawur Durbar. The real truth is this. The Dost was not asked to meet the Governor-general, to avoid a difficulty. He did nothing during the rebellion for which he deserves reward, and had he been present in durbar, etiquette would have made some acknowledgment of his imaginary services necessary.

SEALKOTE.—Sir Robert Montgomery has ordered the enclosure of the tombs of the officers who fell at Sealkote in 1857, at the public expense.

OFFICIAL MURDER AGAIN.—When the whole facts of the cruelty and mortality attending the shipment of the families of the soldiers of our Indian army are made public, they will rival the horrors of the Crimean war. Some six weeks ago we (Friend of India) mentioned the arrival at Kurrachee of the wives and children of the soldiers in the Punjab. It was not to be expected that the Emigration Commissioners, or even the War-office, should know the geography of India, or imagine anything else than that Kurrachee is a suburb of Lahore. Accordingly, the women arrived at the beginning of the hot weather, and had the prospect of a six weeks' voyage up the Indus in the months of April and May. The home authorities seemed determined that those whom a sea voyage in crowded and badly-provisioned vessels round the Cape had spared, should fall by the heats of the Sind and Bhawalpore deserts. We remembered the mortality of a similar voyage in 1858, and promised to watch the results on the present occasion. The first batch of 30 women, 30 children, and 12 men, arrived at Mooltan on the 18th April. We have not received particulars of their voyage. We shall suppose that it was pleasant in April to beat up against the current of the Indus for six weeks with a sahara on either side for miles. As the victims must march from Mooltan to Lahore and Peshawur by road, the Punjab authorities of course had notice of their departure from Kurrachee? Not a bit of it. Soldiers' wives and children are chattels to be forwarded without the system and without the care that ensure the safe delivery of packages. Well, they arrived at Mooltan, and three similar batches are to follow. The serais on the Mooltan road are slightly different from the rest-houses and dāk bungalows of the Grand Trunk Road. Each consists of one room ten feet square, and into that successive bands of seventy human beings, men, women, and children, must crowd to escape the rays of a Mooltan sun in the month of May. The Punjab authorities have done all that they could in the absence of any warning. The deputy commissioners have been busy opening out doors and windows, and fitting up other accommodation. Tatties, punkahs, and such comforts as could be provided on a week's notice, have been supplied. The Commissioner of Lahore has sent his own assistant, an Englishman and a Christian, to see that the victims are really cared for. Even English travellers who know the language, travel alone, and have all the comforts wealth can purchase, describe the journey as "fearful." What will it be to a crowd of women and children in these circumstances? The first batch was to leave Mooltan on the 25th April, and to proceed by double marches.

PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.—It has been decided that the post of director of public instruction shall no longer belong to the covenanted, but is to be thrown open to the public. The salary will now be considerably reduced, as a matter of course.

MR. W. H. ABBOTT, junior, has been appointed officiating ecclesiastical registrar, in the place of his father, who takes leave in ill health.

COURTS MARTIAL.—Recent general orders are filled with notices of court martial. Lieut. W. Owen of H.M.'s 52nd, Sealkote, has been sentenced to be reprimanded for "over indulgence in wine." When in a state of intoxication he entered, without permission, the sleeping apartment of Ensign J. C. W. Lever, of the same regiment, when that officer was in bed, and refused to leave the room when desired. Two privates, Daly and Carr, of H.M.'s 88th at Allypore, have been sentenced to one year's imprisonment for having stolen treasure to the value of Rs. 8,000. The sentence of fifty lashes each was remitted by Lord Clyde, as both are in the first-class as regards corporal punishment under the recent order. Another private, Scanlan, was sentenced to one year's imprisonment for having stolen money in his possession. Sergeant John Dann, of H.M.'s 97th, Banda, has been sentenced to four years' penal servitude for having killed two natives.

RAWUL PINDEE.—Rumour with her thousand tongues is still busy among the inhabitants of this part of the country. A crisis is approaching: either the feelings which are now being engendered will subside harmlessly, or they will be productive of some event fraught with serious consequences. Every Mahomedan child, within a circuit of two hundred miles from Rawul Pindce, has been circumcised, in order to evade the expected tax. Every beard is to be taxed, every marriage, every birth, every death; but apart from such ridiculous reports, there are others which are serious, inasmuch as they are abhorrent to the religious sensibilities of the natives. All along the borders of the Indus, in Pindce Gheb, Mukkud, and other tracts, inhabited by the wild and lawless tribes of Khutturs, Awans, and Pathans, it is currently believed that the "goor," which is now being imported by the bunyas, is mixed with swine's fat. The consequence is, that no goor is purchased. It is also said that large importations of European women are under contemplation by Government. These, backed by insinuating missionaries, will act as syrens to allure the Punjabee from the paths of Mahomedanism to the folds of Christianity. Two or three utterers of these lying reports have been caught, flogged, and imprisoned. But it is difficult, if not impossible, to detect their originators. Meanwhile rest assured, the authorities are taking every precaution and observing due vigilance.—Delhi Gazette.

NATIVE RUMOURS.—The vague reports to which currency was given by the Hurkara from the North West, have ripened in the bazaar, into definite details of the revolt and destruction of the 13th Punjab Infantry at Delhi, and all kinds of horrors. We (Englishman) are enabled by our own communications from the Upper Provinces to give the most unqualified contradiction to these reports, and we know also that no reports of the kind, or of any similar tendency, have reached the Government. They are the mere inventions of disaffected men, watchful to misrepresent for their own purposes, the position and the intentions of their rulers.

OUDE.—We hear most shocking accounts of sickness in the districts. In the city it has abated within the last few days. We do not know what to call it, but, as described to us, probably it has the nearest approach to apoplexy. Old and young, of both sexes, are suddenly seized with a giddiness, and drop and die usually within a few hours. Indeed, we have not heard of a single instance of recovery after the attack. In the Sultanpore district ten persons out of eleven travelling on one occasion together, and fifteen out of twenty-three on another, died in a single day. The population is fleeing in all directions, and, what with the plague and taxation, we are not surprised to hear all sorts of reports of their fears. This double visitation has created a degree of alarm and apprehension which we would fain trust are founded on a very large proportion of exaggeration of the evils.—Oude Gazette.

A CALCUTTA CROAK.—A somewhat serious disturbance occurred in the Allahabad central jail on the 15th April. The superintendent of the jail deemed it advisable to introduce the oven for the preparation of the chupatties or flat cakes, used by the natives of northern India, the bread being more wholesome, and requiring less labour in its preparation. An oven was introduced, but several of the convicts would not touch the chupatties, whilst others refused to eat those prepared in the ordinary manner. A slight punishment was inflicted upon the latter for this offence. This took place on a Friday. On the following day several influential Brahmins consented to cook and eat their food, and were anxious to have an oven put up in their barrack yard. The superintendent inspected the prisoners on Sunday morning, and he found everything quiet. The Brahmins were at this time engaged in preparing the ground for the oven. When the oven was about to be carried into the barrack, a Brahmin prisoner from Cawnpore rushed out of the barrack yard, abused and cursed all who should partake of oven bread, and called on the prisoners to turn out. Some of the gates being open 300 prisoners found their way into the centre court, whilst a few ran after the doorkeepers. They were checked in their course by the guard. The Superintendent was soon on the spot. The Sikh Company of the Military Police was marched into the centre yard. Their presence had the desired effect. The convicts made no further resistance, and the oven bread is now without hesitation used by them. There seems to have been for some time an under current of intrigue going on among the Mahomedans in Delhi. Vindications of the speedy subversion of British rule in India, and the restoration of Mahomedan supremacy over the country, have been industriously circulated in the bazaars of the city. The Mussulman who encounters a European in any one of the streets of Delhi, while making way for the Feringee, scowls upon him as he passes by. Reports are rife there that another mutiny will shortly take place, and that, like the one of 1857, it will commence at Meerut. The authorities have, however, taken every precaution to meet such a danger. The drawbridges are drawn up every night, patrols are sent out, and loaded guns placed in almost every street. In the bazaars of Calcutta, still more vague reports prevail of an intended rebellion. This time, it is said, the Sikhs will mutiny with the Mahomedans. It is reported that the present hostile feeling of the natives has originated from Mr. Wilson's Income-tax Bill. No class or community likes to be taxed, and the Income-tax Bill has doubtless occasioned much discontent among native zemindars, fund-holders, &c., but this does not explain the proceedings of the Mahomedans at Delhi, who had long before the advent of Mr. Wilson in Calcutta, uttered the same kind of prophecies as those to which we have referred. It is probable that, like the greased cartridges in the first rebellion, the Income-tax Bill is being made use of by agents as a means to excite the people to revolt a second time, and that the absence of a portion of our European troops in China has been considered by them as a fitting opportunity for such a demonstration. Fortunately, we have still a large European army left to crush at once any attempt at another rebellion.—Hurkara.

THE DALHOUSIE INSTITUTE.—The municipal commissioners of Calcutta object to assigning the part of the Calcutta plain facing the esplanade as a site for the Dalhousie Institute. They recommend part of the Strand bank, or the large compound of the Small Cause Court in Chowringhee. The Lieutenant-governor agrees with the commissioners in refusing to allow any encroachment on the plain, and cites a strict order of the Home Government against it. Lord Canning has reported in favour of the site, and has asked the sanction of Sir Charles Wood. Unless there are military objections the erection of a fine building on that part of the plain surrounded by a garden on all sides, would add to the health as well as beauty and convenience of the city. The spot is at present defiled by native carriages, and unsightly mat erections for circus performers.

OPIMUM.—The Englishman mentions that the sum received by the sale of opium during 1859 was nearly 4½ millions sterling, grown and manufactured at a cost to Government of less than one million sterling. Mr. Wilson announced in council on Saturday that there will be a re-arrangement of some matters connected with opium, so far as to harmonise the different and conflicting rates of opium charges that now prevail on the East and West sides of India.

INDIGO PLANTERS' ASSOCIATION.—On the resignation of Mr. Theobald, as secretary of the Indigo Planters' Association, it was proposed that the object of the society should be extended, and all political parties were invited to join, as the interests of all non-officials are nearly identical in this country. A secretary was advertised for, and in the mean time Mr. A. Forbes officiated. For many and obvious reasons it was thought that the editor of a Calcutta paper, whether in opposition or in accord with Government, was not the best representative of a society formed for the purpose of obtaining redress for grievances, and seeking the support and countenance of the Government for their undertakings. Whilst we believe Mr. Forbes' talents and experience fit him in a rare degree for the duties of the appointment, we concurred in the view taken of the incompatibility of the two employments. It was always evident to us that the association would not long be on cordial terms with him as secretary and editor, and for the sake of the public interest we were not sorry to hear that it had been resolved to obtain another and a permanent secretary able to undertake the work. We have always looked upon this association as public property, for though the planters advocated very exclusively their own interests, these were so much those of all settlers in the country that their actions were of the last importance to all whom fate and an adventurous spirit had brought to this country to seek their fortune, and at the same time, help in forwarding its best interests. Looking at the matter in this light the progress of this society is of public importance; it is our duty to watch it and press upon it the necessity of acting vigorously as well as to prevent it, as far as possible, from falling into that state of indolence and apathy which has hitherto been the fate of all associations here, whether for political or literary objects. We have lately been informed that the committee of the association has appointed Mr. Kingsley as their secretary; this, we fear, is a very great mistake; for, however able and intelligent Mr. Kingsley may be, we understand he has no experience of the wants of the planters or of the nature of their business. An experienced railway officer is certainly not the right man for the arduous duties of the planters' association, arduous if they are properly worked, and have justice done to them. Mr. Forbes would have been, in all respects, a better selection for the office, for whatever the objections to him are they are as nothing to the absence of a sufficient knowledge of the country. The experience of mofussil practice, both official and non-official, which Mr. Forbes possesses, in our opinion more than counter-balances the objection to his holding the secretaryship, if no other candidate appears to whom the same objection cannot be made. We believe the planters in the mofussil will be much surprised and disappointed when they learn on whom the choice of the committee has fallen. We regret it ourselves in the interests of the public, which must suffer with the planters, if this, the only political organization we have, should sink into a useless mediocrity or become a mere medium for carrying up local complaints to the Government of Bengal.—Englishman.

THE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA completed the first portion of his visitation by reaching Simla on Wednesday, April 11, where he has taken a house called Ravenswood for the season, to which all communications should be addressed till further notice. He started from Calcutta on Wednesday, September 21, 1859, went up the river as far as Benares, and thence by the Trunk-road to Peshawar, which he reached on Wednesday, February 15. He diverged from the regular route to visit Banda, Futtelghur, Roorkee, Ferozepore, Murree, Kangra, Dharmasala, and Kupperthala. The week before Easter was spent at the Lawrence Asylum, Sanawur, where he consecrated the church, examined the schools, and confirmed 81 of the pupils. On Good Friday he preached at Dugshai, and on Easter-day to the men of the Rifle Brigade at Subathoo.

THE MYSTERIOUS GHARRA.—The investigation into the circulating "gharra" story, once or twice alluded to by us, has been carried out thoroughly, a trustworthy native official having been deputed from the Agra district to follow up the progress of the mysterious pot from village to village, and trace its course. The affair was first known on the 3rd April, when a man brought the gharra to a chowkeidar of a village in the Dholpote territory, saying it had arrived from the Dholpote district, and every zemindar in the country, after contributing either a pice, a small ring, or grain, had passed it on to the next village. On examination the gharra was found to contain the following articles:—Two hundred and fifteen pice, one hundred and sixty cowries, ten brass rings, six copper rings, four plated rings, and one silver ring and a little tobacco. The track being taken up was traced through ninety-two villages, through the wildest part of the Gwalior territory, till at a place called Simreea all vestige of it was lost. The officiating political agent at Gwalior has been requested to follow out the investigation. The conclusion arrived at by the investigator, after full inquiry and learning the ideas of the villagers through whose neighbourhood the mysterious token had travelled, was that among the inhabitants of Rajwarra, on which the Gwalior territories border, when a community is visited by heavy sickness or other affliction, it is the custom to send forth such a token, after due ceremonies have been performed, under the impression that the affliction they suffer under will accompany it and leave them. Three years ago, the people said, a similar token had been sent. Different directions appear to have been given with regard to the circulation of the token at different places. At one place directions were given that it was not to be placed on the ground but sent on to Agra, and that if the zemindars did not put two pice into it they would be visited with some heavy misfortune; at another place it was stated that it had come from Bombay, and was to go to Agra, and that he who carried it was on no account to halt at his peril. While every effort has been taken to obtain a thorough and satisfactory account of the mystery, the matter will not, we hope, be allowed to drop until it has been ascertained from whom and whence it originally started. A question also proposes itself. Has there been any great epidemic or disease prevalent in those parts of the district through which the token has been circulated, by which the theory of its being supposed to carry off misfortune may be substantiated? The kind intentions of the people in sending their plagues into Agra are duly appreciated.—Delhi Gazette.

SIAM.—The Maulmain Advertiser says the kings of Siam have sent two of their sons, accompanied by Sir Robert Schomburgk, the British Consul at Bangkok, as an embassy to Queen Victoria. They are now on a visit to Maulmain, Tavoy, Mergui, and probably Rangoon, previous to their departure for England. Men like the two kings who now jointly rule Siam, the King of Honolulu, and the Imam of Muscat, show the gradual influence of English civilisation. Caste shuts in the Hindoos from all the world, and leaves them far behind in the race of nations. The same journal complains of the insecurity of the frontier of Martaban. Bands of armed dacoits infest it, so that the native foresters cannot pursue their avocations, and the rising trade between the Shan States and British territory is stopped. Europeans are not attacked, but the timber trade is almost stopped. Our own native subjects are crossing over into the Shan States. Is there no local force in Tenasserim like the Pegu light infantry? Disturbances occur periodically on that frontier. It is not two years since the revolt under Meng Loung was suppressed.

GRANTS-IN-AID.—The Lahore Chronicle gives details of increased educational grants-in-aid, sanctioned by the Punjab Government, for several missionary schools. The total amount given to 8 schools is Rs. 945 a month.

SONG OF THE BELL.—A correspondent of the Hurkaru mentions that the Revenue Surveyor of Akyab had found a bell in one of the ruined Pagodas on the Koladyne, weighing from 8 to 10 cwt. It is covered with Burmese inscriptions, which are being deciphered and translated. We fear they will tell us nothing of the aboriginal Mugs. Mug history, as contained in the only record they possess, the "Radzawang," begins in the year A.D. 701, with the death of the first of their kings. In 1783 they became subject to the Burmese.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.—The returns of accidents on the Indian railways have hitherto afforded a striking and pleasing contrast when compared with those recorded of the European and American lines. The total number of accidents on the Indian railways during the past five years, in proportion to the mileage and number of passengers carried, are not only less than the average total of the European and American railways for the same period, but, in the majority of instances, are of a less severe and fatal character; and when we consider that such a result has been attained with a working staff chiefly composed of natives, to whom railways were entirely new, and who are, at best, so greatly inferior in ability and intelligence to the class of men usually employed in Europe, the highest meed of praise is due to the energy and ability of those who have been entrusted with their training and management.

There are few who can fully appreciate the difficulties of such a task; nor is it our object, in the present article, to point them out; suffice it for us to say, that success is only obtained by untiring energy, perseverance, patience, tact, and temper, coupled with a strict, but just and discriminating supervision; and while the judicious exercise of such qualities has proved so successful in the past, they lead us to hope and expect still greater and more marked triumphs for the future.—Great Indian Peninsula Railway Journal.

A MERITED TESTIMONIAL.—A sum of 2,520 rupees was raised by several Europeans for a testimonial to Drigbeji Singh, the Rajah of Morar Mow, who saved the lives of Captains Thompson and Delafosse, and Privates Murphy and Sullivan, on their escape from the massacre of Cawnpore. A native service of silver plate was purchased with the subscriptions, and presented to the rajah by Mr. Wingfield, on the 16th April. The plate consisted of a hooka, chilumchee, pan-dan, utter-dan, lotah, mugs and trays. The address, signed by upwards of 200 Europeans, chiefly of the North-west Provinces, stated that the testimonial was presented, "that it may be known that Englishmen cannot forget a noble act, performed at much personal risk, which contrasted with the barbarities of the period when few were inclined and few did give shelter to Englishmen."

THE FORT OF CALPEE has been completely destroyed. The sappers under command of Lieutenant Cologan passed through Oorai, en route to Jaloun and Oomri, to destroy the forts at those places, the latter of which is an exceedingly strong fortress.

MAJOR HUNTLY GARDEN, of the Quartermaster-General's department, is to succeed Captain Paton in Calcutta, and leaves Simla almost immediately to take up the appointment.

THE SCHOOLMASTER IN BIKANER!—We (Delhi Gazette) are informed that the Rajah of Bikaner has ordered all the Sikhs in his service, of whom there are a great many, to learn English!

PESHAWUR, April 27.—I was not here at the time, but from what I hear I am of opinion that the discontent was caused by the misunderstanding of the proclamation or translation of Mr. Wilson's speech which I think was most injudiciously read aloud at the Kotwalee, when each fellow who heard it made his own version. I hear a set of mischievous scoundrels spread reports like the following:—That a Doctor Sahib was always to be present when a woman was confined. That all the people were to be forced to become Christians. That no one was to be married except by a Padre. That all Grunthees and Moollas were to pay Rs. 10 a year each. That a man was to be taxed every time he went to pray. That a poll tax of one rupee per head was to be levied on small and great, including women and children, &c., &c., &c., and the men not only here but in other parts of the country in Hazara, at Massem, at Boodhan really believed or professed to believe this nonsense. The city Bunnials and people talked over the matter for several days, and had determined to remonstrate a day or two before they did, and it was the business of the police to stop the demonstration, or report the intention; they did neither, and the Kotwal has very properly been dismissed. I do not believe, when they first started, the people had any intention of making a riot, but there is in a Peshawur crowd a species of social yeast which, when they get together, works and works until a regular ferment is produced, and they go off before they have any intention of doing so. The fact of the Ramsan, too, may have had something to do with souring their usually placid dispositions. Both Punjabees and Peshawurees, however, remark that it is deuced hard lines that they should be taxed for the mutiny of the Hindustanies—they are somewhat backwards as yet in their "political economy," and Mr. Wilson's speech was not I think well translated, being not appreciated by them. In fact, they are not anxious for taxation in any shape, though I really think they would prefer an octroi tax of 10 per cent. to an Income-tax of 2. My idea is, the business has been badly managed; the publishing Mr. Wilson's financial statement would have been very well for England, but was a decided error in India. I do not think the shindy would ever have occurred had Colonel Edwards been here. Though, when it did happen, Captain James behaved with a great deal of temper and coolness—only having out the 17th Light Cavalry with sticks to drive the crowd back to the city, two men were killed by being ridden over, and others hurt; but this was more the effect of accident than premeditation. The people appreciate the way James dealt with the business, as they say, if in 1857, a native regiment, though unarmed, had done as much, not one would have escaped. I know a good deal of the men in these parts, and I think you will find the above pretty correct. The institution of the tax, as far as Peshawur is concerned, is, I hear, deferred to this time six months, when, in case of necessity, Europeans could act with effect. A number of the ringleaders in the late riot have been imprisoned for long periods, and a number of the minor offenders were flogged or put in for short periods, while the whole city was fined. I forgot to mention that the tobacco tax, which they said was to be 8 annas a seer, was another of the causes of discontent.—Lahore Chronicle.

THE MAHARAJAH OF PUTTALIA, having completed his devotions at Umritsur, has been on a visit to the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab. The troops at Mean Meer were reviewed in his presence, and as the Europeans marched past, they gave the chief three cheers for his loyalty during the revolt. He was allowed to make the men a present of Rs. 1,600.

INSPECTORSHIP OF HOSPITALS.—The Phoenix says the Government of India has resolved meanwhile not to fill up the Inspectorship of Hospitals in Lower Bengal, vacated by Dr. G. Brown, as no mention is made of the office in the medical warrant lately received. They have made a reference to the home authorities on the subject.

ALLAHABAD, April 20.—I believe that there is no doubt whatever of the decision of the Griffin court martial being a full and honourable acquittal; of course it will not do to halloo till he is out of the wood. The jewel case came on for trial yesterday before the principal Sudder Ameen. After a considerable amount of evidence had been read, the parties, on the strong recommendation of the principal Sudder Ameen, agreed to fall back on arbitration, the native judge himself having agreed, at their request, to act as umpire. The decision was, that as there had been a great amount of negligence on both sides, so that the case had been permitted to lie over till the required evidence to push the enquiry was no longer available. Mr. Palmer should make good to Captain Griffin half the value of his property, as there was no evidence that any part of it had ever reached him, and there was, at the same time, no reason to suppose that Mr. Palmer had not dispatched the jewels as affirmed; they must have gone astray after quitting his hands.—Englishman.

DR. CRAWFORD, who was sentenced to undergo penal servitude for eight years as an accomplice of Silbkissen Bannerjee, has sunk under an attack of acute dysentery.

Exports (Calcutta, May 5).—The fortnight has again been characterised by dullness. There has been no animation in any article of export, and we believe that unless there be a general decline business will continue in the present unsatisfactory state. In Indigo there is nothing worthy of note. Sugar.—In moderate demand, and fully 2s. above home rates.

Saltpetre.—In moderate demand, but 6s. to 7s. above London value. Raw Silk.—Dull, but still above home quotations. Coran.—Unsaleable, but holders firm. Oilseeds.—In fair demand. Jute.—In moderate demand. Lac Dye and Shell Lac languid.

Imports (Calcutta, May 5).—A perfect stagnation has prevailed for all kinds of importations. Piece Goods have been in very limited demand, both in our, as also in all the up-country markets; prices have already declined to a certain extent, as is shown from our quotations, and there is little or no hope of a speedy improvement; the imports have been extensive, adding thus a considerable amount of goods to the stock of our market. Yarns have been in a very limited request at easier rates. Metals very dull, and there is little or nothing doing; quotations for Copper Sheathing, 45 to 45-1/2 per maund.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE MEDICAL COLLEGE.—The annual meeting of the classes at the close of the session took place on the 4th May, in the Medical College. His Excellency the Governor presided, and among those present we observed the Commander-in-Chief, the Hon. Mr. Morehead, the Hon. Mr. Maltby, &c., &c. Dr. Shaw, the Principal of the College, read the report, in which the leading events of the past session were recapitulated. From this it seems that the progress of the students had been, on the whole, extremely satisfactory; but the want of a preliminary acquaintance with such matters as are picked up by a medical apprentice in a surgery was dwelt upon. For the system of fines that of confinement had been substituted, and been found to work remarkably well. After the reading of the report, his Excellency the Governor distributed prizes and certificates to those who were entitled to receive them, saying a word of encouragement now and then to the more distinguished of the recipients. Certificates of qualification as assistant apothecaries were given to twenty-one students; and as second dressers, the number who received certificates was twenty. Mr. Lyons received the diploma of the college for independent practice. Dr. Chipperfield then delivered the customary valedictory address. H.E. the Governor next rose, and addressed a few words to the assembled students. He told them that, when Lord William Bentinck was Governor-General, that nobleman had appointed him (Sir Charles) and other gentlemen to be a committee for the purpose of reporting on the state of medical affairs, and that the result of their labours was the medical college of Bengal, which has served as a model for that at Madras. H.E. then alluded to a change in the constitution of the subordinate branch of the medical service, which had been sanctioned by Government. The service, it appears, is to be thrown open to all Christians, Hindoos, and Mahomedans; from those now in the department, sub-assistant surgeons are to be selected; and the vaccination operations are to be included in the duties of the newly arranged department. And after a few further remarks, H.E. sat down amid loud cheers, and the meeting broke up a little after seven o'clock, proceedings having commenced shortly after five.—Athenaeum.

MALABAR COAST, April 12.—No rain yet; we have not even had the usual mango showers. Weather very oppressive. Among the departures are Brigadier J. Fitzgerald, commanding the provinces; Captain R. H. Bolton, brigade major; Rev. C. Rhenius, chaplain; and Dr. Lovell, superintending surgeon. Colonel C. E. Low departed to Bombay, and from thence to Europe, on 15 months' leave. Lieut.-col. G. Maxwell has assumed command of H.M.'s 60th regiment on the departure of Colonel Low. The amateurs of H.M.'s 66th regiment enliven the station with fortnightly performances at the "Theatre Royal" (as it is called) of Cannanore. The Roman Catholic bishop of Mangalore made his pastoral visitation throughout the churches in Malabar during the last two months. At Calicut the greater portion of the parishioners, who were dissatisfied with their clergyman, applied for his removal from the parish; the bishop refused to attend to it, and as they were clamorous in their request the bishop threatened them with excommunication, and the result has been their seceding from the jurisdiction of the Vicar-apostolic, and applying for aid to the Archbishop of Goa, who provided them with a vicar, and rented a house, meanwhile, for a church, until the recovery of the church from the Vicar-apostolic, the seceders being now about to file an action for the purpose, and placing the church and themselves under the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical authority of Goa, as was the case prior to 1834. The present priest at Calicut, receiving a Government allowance of Rs. 100 a month for affording spiritual aid to the Catholics of the European detachment there, will have to rent or purchase a building for a church for the European detachment and others who continue their allegiance to the jurisdiction of the Vicar-apostolic of Malabar and Canara. At Tellicherry the Bishop has had further contention to meet with, certain influential inhabitants of the place refusing to attend to the Bishop's edict, directing the immediate removal of their children from the only school established there, superintended by the missionaries of the German Evangelical Society. These men were threatened also with excommunication, and their families from all the rites of the Roman Catholic church; here the result has been different from that at Calicut. Some of them have made their protestations of faith and turned Protestants; others are also expected to follow the example set to them. The German missionaries will have a pleasant report to make this year of the fruit of their labours at Tellicherry in nearly the wholesale conversions of Roman Catholics to the Protestant faith. The bishop's visit to Cannanore has passed off very quietly. The Roman Catholic children of this place attend the garrison school, superintended by the military chaplain and the schoolmaster, a converted Protestant from the Roman Catholic religion. No prohibition as to the attendance of Catholic children to this school has been made.—Englishman.

CHURCH AT KURNOOL.—Government Order, 5th April.—It is observed that, of the contributions expected towards the erection of a church at Kurnool, only Rs. 1,857 have been paid up, the proposed grant from the Church Building Society of Rs. 560 having yet to be made good. On this being done and the same intimated to him, the collector of Kurnool will disburse the sum of Rs. 2,240, as a contribution from Government, towards the construction of the proposed building, the work to be executed by the engineer of the division, under the orders of the Department of Public Works.

PUBLIC WORKS.—The works of the Madras Irrigation Canal Company are proceeding very satisfactorily. From a telegram, dated 27th April, from Kurnool, we learn, that in connection with the Anniut, four hundred yards of low rubble stone of the dam had been completed, and two hundred and sixty more were in progress. In all, six thousand tons of stone have been deposited, and two thousand seven hundred and fifty people have been employed on the work. The first stone was put in on the 17th April.

THE CIVIL SERVICE SUPPLEMENTAL MEMORIAL, lately published, has been sent in to Government signed by no less than fifty-eight members, all men of less than twenty-two years' service in India, no senior having been invited to join. This will, it is hoped, prove to Government and to the authorities at home that it is useless to attempt to extend the time of residence in India from twenty-two to twenty-five years, as lately proposed.

THE "MADRAS CRESCENT," the organ of the high caste natives of the Presidency, condemns the publication of Sir Charles Trevelyan's Minute as dangerous, not in exciting revolt among the natives, but in increasing race hatred between Europeans and natives. The writer says, "The people of this Presidency are too fond of peace and quietness to break out into rebellion on account of a little extra taxation; but there are such things as passive resistance, and secret combination, in which the people are not novices, and it is not very safe to raise and spread discontent even among a population peaceably disposed."

LORD ELPHINSTONE'S FAREWELL ADDRESS.

A public meeting, very numerous attended by Europeans and natives, was held in the Town Hall, on Wednesday, the 9th of May, to consider in what most suitable way the governorship of Lord Elphinstone should be commemorated. A memorial to his Lordship was adopted by the meeting, and a subscription commenced, a committee being appointed to determine what form the testimonial should take. On the following day, the address was presented to Lord Elphinstone by the following gentlemen, who formed a deputation from the public meeting:—The Hon. W. E. Frere; Rev. Dr. Wilson; Captain Rivers; Messrs. Jugunathjee Sunkerset, R. Strong, Michael H. Scott, E. Heycock, Bomanjee Hormusjee, S. Compton, M. R. Westropp, Rustonjee Jamssetjee Jejeebhoy, Sorabjee Jamssetjee Jejeebhoy, Cowasjee Jehangeerjee, E. Howard, C. M. I. Pollock, F. D. Faithfull, Cursetjee Nusserwanjee Camajee, D. J. Kennelly, Mirza Ally Mahomed Khan Shoostry, Mirza Ally Jhan, H. L. Anderson, C. S. Vurjeevundass Madowdass; Bhawoo Dajee, Mungullass Nathoobhoy, Narayan Dinnanathjee, Vinayekrow Jugunathjee, Dawood Sassoon, Cazeo Mahomed Yooosof Moorgay, and others.

The address having been read by Dr. Wilson, his lordship made the following reply:—

"I receive with deep gratitude this farewell expression of your regard for me, and your approbation of my conduct during the six years and a half that I have been among you.

"In closing an important chapter in my life, nothing could be more gratifying to me than to receive this assurance that I possess, and carry away with me, the esteem and good wishes of so many of the most respected and influential members of this great and flourishing community.

"Looking back, as everyone must at such a period, I cannot but be painfully conscious that much I had hoped to have done is still unaccomplished, and that of those works which have been undertaken, some have not been completed in the manner which both the public and the Government had a right to expect. While I admit the facts, I cannot take the blame to myself of all that has been left undone, or that has been badly done, since I came to this presidency. Thus it will be found that this Government has advocated many important reforms, amongst which I may mention the appointment of a public prosecutor, a final and summary settlement on the basis of a compromise with the holders and claimants of alienated revenue, and to come to more immediately local topics, that we have devoted much time and attention to municipal matters, to the thorough drainage and sewerage of this city, to the formation of docks and wharfs, to the reclamation of land for building purposes, &c., and to the embankment and drainage of the extensive mangrove swamps permeated by the slimy creeks which divide this island and Salsette from Trombay and the main land.

"Circumstances over which we have had no control have impeded the progress of these and other useful measures, but the generous manner in which you have given me credit for the little that has been done, assures me that you will be equally generous in making allowances for the many things which have been left undone.

"It is gratifying to turn to the exertions which have been made, and are still being made, by the community, and more especially by the native portion of it, to establish an economical museum, to be named after our gracious Queen. I could not but take a warm interest in an undertaking which, originating in a feeling of loyalty to the Queen, and of attachment to the British Government, was calculated to promote the ends of science, and to subserve the material interests of India, and, perhaps, of England.

"You are pleased to allude to the interest which I have taken in the cause of education, and to the circumstance that it was first taken up in this presidency by my late revered relative, Mr. Mountstuart Elphinstone. I may here mention, that to the very end of his life he continued to take the same lively interest in this cause, and that this alone would have sufficed to inspire me with a similar feeling.

"I regret that here also the restrictions upon expenditure, necessitated by the mutinies, have cramped and impeded our endeavours; but in some important particulars I venture to hope that considerable improvement has taken place within the last few years.

"You have been pleased to allude in far too flattering terms to the part taken by this Government during the crisis of 1857-58.

"The other members of the Government and myself only did our duty to the best of our ability, and we feel that, humanly speaking, we owe our exemption from disturbance far more to those who had to confront and put down actual mutiny where it showed itself, or to watch an excited and misguided population, than to any measures we may have adopted.

"I should be ungrateful if I did not allude to the behaviour of the native inhabitants of this island, not one of whom, I believe, was implicated in treasonable designs, though doubtless many were beset by those emissaries of Delhi and Cawnpore, who unfortunately succeeded in gaining over a few sepoys of the garrison. But now, and at all times, I would express my grateful conviction that in this Presidency we owe our deliverance solely to the interposition of a gracious Providence. If in 1857 the tide of rebellion had been permitted to cross the Nerbudda, there is no saying where it might have stopped.

"It is in the highest degree gratifying to my feelings that you should intend to perpetuate the remembrance of my administration by some work of public utility or ornament. I have no words to express the sense which I shall ever entertain of this proof of your regard, or of the honour you have done me in presenting me with this most gratifying and flattering address.

"It only remains for me to pronounce a word, which your kindness has perhaps rendered more difficult to utter—Farewell."

MISCELLANEOUS.

ARRIVAL OF SIR GEORGE CLERK.—The Ottawa was signalled on the 11th May at eleven o'clock, A.M., and in spite of the heat a considerable number of gentlemen had assembled by one o'clock at the Bunder head to receive His Excellency on landing. As the Ottawa dropped anchor, the Ajdaha manned yards, exchanging signals at the same time. Mr. Secretary Anderson and Col. Robertson then proceeded on board the steamer, followed by Commodore Wellesley and other naval officers. Owing to the extreme heat the troops were not paraded, Sir Geo. Clerk having expressed a wish to land without ceremony of any kind. His Excellency left the Ottawa at two o'clock, the Ajdaha announcing the fact by the usual salute which was answered by the battery on shore. The little steamer Snake was soon after observed approaching the bunder with the Governor's barge in tow; and Sir George Clerk, after a twelve years' absence from our shores, once more landed as Governor elect of the island. His Excellency seems to have recognised a few old familiar faces upon the bunder, and shaking hands cordially with the little group, stepped into a private carriage, accompanied only by his secretary, and drove to Malabar Point. —Bombay Times.

CAPTAIN H. RIVERS has been appointed Consulting Engineer for Railways, in succession to the late Lieutenant-Colonel J. H. G. Crawford.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—The Right Hon. the Governor in Council has been pleased to appoint J. Scott, Esq., Inspector-General Medical Department, to act as Principal Inspector-General Medical Department, during the absence of B. P. Rooke, Esq., M.D., or until further orders, Dr. Scott continuing to perform the duties of his own office.

CHOLERA.—The Bombay Telegraph regrets to announce that the whole of the Bhoze Ghaut Railway works have been suspended for the season, owing to the ravages of cholera all along the incline. Several European overseers have been swept away, and the native workmen have perished by scores. This is the second visitation of this fell disease, and must prove exceedingly disheartening to the managing engineers, Messrs. Adamson and Clowser, who fully expected to make up, before the rains, the ground which had been lost in December last. They have, however, spared no pains to drive the pestilence from their works: the huts of the workmen were at once pulled down and destroyed, medical comforts were provided, and every care taken both to alleviate suffering and to guard against the direful attacks of the disease. Thanks to their exertions, the virulence of the epidemic has, in a great measure, subsided; but all the great works are stopped, and will be so now, except in the tunnels, until after the monsoon. It is to be hoped that the next fair season will be more propitious; and that the ground which has been lost by unforeseen calamities will be fully made up when the works recommence in October next.

ANOTHER PARSEE TO ENGLAND.—It may be safely asserted that the time is very near when the departure of Parsees to England will attract no notice, or will be deemed as ordinary an occurrence as the voyage of an Englishman to this country. The number of young Parsees who have already proceeded from Bombay have been praised for their spirit of enterprise, but we are glad to hear that a Parsee gentleman, who has nearly reached the good old age of three-score and ten, and is well known as an orthodox follower of Zoroaster, has thought of visiting in his old age a strange and distant land. Mr. Nowrojee Manekjee, superintendent of the distillery at Bhandoop, whose hospitality cannot be forgotten by those who have ever visited that place, proceeds to England in a few days by the ship Lady Canning. —Bombay Times.

KURRACHEE.—The Russian barque Moskwa, Captain Kuhl, left London on the 9th November for this port, and was obliged to put into Lisbon on the 24th idem, the cargo having shifted. She left Lisbon on the 7th of January, and made Trinidad Island in latitude 20 degrees 21 minutes south, and longitude 29 degrees 19 minutes west, on the 4th February, having made up to that point an unprecedentedly quick passage. From Trinidad the Moskwa had mostly light winds, except off the Island of Bourbon, where, on the 24th March, she experienced a severe gale from the south east to south west, with a high pyramidal sea from the north east, round by south east to south west. On the 3rd April she made the east coast of Madagascar, crossed the line in 51 degrees east longitude, and arrived at Kurrachee on the 30th idem, having experienced light north-east winds up as far as Socotra, and from thence light south-west winds, showing that the westerly monsoon had begun down upon the Arabian coast. It has been proved, and cannot be too generally circulated, that vessels passing the meridian of the Cape of Good Hope any time in February, March, and up to the middle of September, will make the best passage to Kurrachee by keeping well into Madagascar and crossing the line between 51 and 58 degrees east longitude; they may also with great safety and advantage come through the Mozambique Channel in June, July, and August, when bound to this port. The Alcyon, bound to Kurrachee, was spoken by the George Arkle (arrived at Bombay on the 23th April) in latitude 16 degrees 54 minutes north, and longitude 72 degree 30 minutes east, on the 23rd April. —Sindian.

NAWAB OF SURAT.—It is reported in the vernacular journals that his Highness Meer Jaffer Ali Khan Bahadoor, Nawab of Surat, shortly proceeds to England, where he intends spending the remainder of his life.

MAJOR-GENERAL CUNNINGHAM, who has been appointed to the command of the Scinde division of the army, arrived at Kurrachee from Bombay on Monday night, April 30, and was received with the salute due to his rank on landing from H.M.'s steamer Punjab, on Tuesday morning.

CHOLERA AT SURAT.—We are sorry to learn that symptoms of cholera are daily becoming more apparent in the town and vicinity of Surat. The epidemic also broke out in the Surat Gaol, but left it without doing much injury. We regret to record the death, at Surat, on the 22nd of April, of Mr. Freeman, employed in the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway as superintendent of pay-clerks of the company. The deceased was attacked early in the morning, and in a few short hours died, though every medical aid was rendered him.

WAMUNROW JUGGONATH.—The principal Sudder-Ameen of Poona has been dismissed the service with a reduced pension of Rs. 91 a month, for having borrowed money from natives within his jurisdiction. The local journal remarks that were the rule under which he has been dismissed honestly carried out, a clear sweep of nearly one-half of the entire native judicial service would be made. The rule in Bombay was first promulgated some years ago, on the removal of two Sudder Judges from the Bench, on the ground that their debts were a scandal to the Court over which they presided.

GRANT MEDICAL COLLEGE.—During the session of the Grant Medical College, Bombay, just closed, the number of admissions of students was twenty-nine, against seventeen in each of the two previous years. The increase is noticeable from the fact of the discontinuance of the practice of awarding stipends. The students, however, still receive their medical education gratuitously. The whole number of students during the year was sixty-two. The scheme of study and examination does not yet seem to have come under the superintendence of the University, as in Calcutta.

KHANDALLA.—The Poona Observer records a dreadful explosion which took place at Khandalla on the 16th of April on the premises where gunpowder is prepared for blasting purposes in the Railway works. The explosion was accidental. It resulted in the death of nine Hindoos, and the serious injury of ten others.

CAPTAIN SPEKE.—In a letter to the Bombay Geographical Society, Captain Speke details his arrangements for another attempt to discover the source of the Nile from the Victoria Nyanza Lake, and if possible so to enter Egypt. The Home Government has given him £2,500 for his expenses on the way, and the Indian Government has allowed him to go on Indian pay. Captain Grant, of the 6th Bengal Europeans, is to accompany him. He is grieved that Lord Elphinstone's proposal to send some officers from Bombay has not been sanctioned. He suggests an expedition "to penetrate Africa from Mombas and to pass up by Dr. Krapf's route via Kituri and Mount Kenia to the head of the Nyanzy, for it is a land of greater promise than any other for every interest of mankind." Captain Patheric, H.M. Consul of Khartum, intends to make an attempt to meet Captain Speke from the Egyptian side somewhere between Gondokoro and Kibuja. Captain Speke was to leave England for Aden on the 27th April.

THE BISHOP OF BOMBAY recently delivered a lecture to the natives who constitute the United Students' Association in Africa. He sketched late discoveries and the history of the suppression of the Slave Trade.

THE WAGHERS.—Jodha Manik, the leader of the late insurrection in Oorkamundel, with fourteen others, surrendered to Lieutenant Barton, Assistant Resident, Baroda, on the 27th March. There is an end of the much mismanaged Wagher expedition.—[Jodha Manik has since effected his escape.—Ed. A. I. M.]

BREVET COLONEL G. H. ROBERTSON, of the 25th Regiment N. I., town major of Bombay, has been appointed Acting Military Auditor-general, in place of Captain J. G. Forbes, deceased.

MR. JOHN WILLIAM ORR was sworn in on the 7th May, before Sir Joseph Arnould, as Clerk to the chief justice, sealer, and acting deputy clerk of the Crown. Mr. Henry Gamble was also sworn in as official assignee of the Insolvent Court, in place of Mr. Ketterer, proceeding on leave to Europe.

BROKERAGE.—At the special general meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, held on the 4th May, the freight brokerage question was settled, after some discussion, by a resolution that in future brokerage on freights to all parts of the world should be at the rate of 1 per cent. A resolution was unanimously adopted that a letter should be addressed to Lord Elphinstone by the chamber, thanking him for the uniform courtesy with which he has met the representatives of the mercantile community.

INCENDIARISM.—There seems to be now but little doubt that the late fires at Colaba have been the work of incendiaries, and so convinced are the agents of the different fire insurance companies of the fact, that they have unhesitatingly offered a reward of one thousand rupees for such information as may lead to the apprehension and conviction of the guilty party or parties.

PROGRESS OF NATIVE LITERATURE.—The history of literature in this presidency will shortly be adorned by a new era. Notices have appeared in the vernacular prints about the starting of religious magazines by our educated Parsee and Hindoo youth. The Parsee religious magazine will treat of the religious doctrines propounded by Zoroaster, the researches of the Pehlvi and Zend languages and the language of the arrow-headed characters, and dissertations on moral truths, all of which subjects will be contributed by learned priests and laymen and an European Oriental scholar. The Hindoo magazine will contain commentaries on the Vedas and Pooranas, with a view to the elimination of all superstitious faiths and absurd doctrines contaminating general truths, which have been followed as time-honoured religion.

IMPORTS (Bombay, May 12).—Cotton Manufactures.—Dullness still prevails in the market, and holders are obliged to submit to a reduction in order to place their stock; transactions are consequently very limited. In Grey Shirtings a moderate business has been done; 40 and 45 inches have further receded in value, those up to 7 and 7½ lbs. show a still greater reduction, 8 lbs. have slightly reced'd, while 8½ lbs. and upwards have pretty well maintained their value; 50 and 54 inches remain quiet, with a downward tendency. Grey Longcloths are in moderate inquiry at reduced quotations, prices remaining nominal. Grey Domestic are neglected. Grey T-cloths are in moderate inquiry at reduced quotations. Twill is steady. Grey Cambric is dull, and has declined in price. Moderate sales have been made in Grey Madapolams and Printers, at a reduction. Grey Jacquets are in limited inquiry, at lower rates. There is little or nothing doing in Grey Mulls. Bleached Shirtings are in moderate demand, at lower quotations. Bleached Madapolams are quiet, and no sales are reported. Dimity has been less steady. Bleached Jacquards, fine and medium, are quite neglected, while other kinds have some inquiry at former quotations. Bleached Mulls are dull, and lower in price. Fine Lappets meet with some inquiry at previous rates; other descriptions, though in moderate inquiry, have receded in value. Coloured Lappets are very dull. Dhories are not much inquired for, and but few sales have been made, at lower rates. Turkey Red Goods are generally dull, and lower in value; the few sales that are reported have been effected at reduced prices. Metals.—The market is inactive, with a general fall of prices. Transactions have taken place in Copper Braziers at slightly reduced rates. Iron is dull, and both British and Swedish Bars are quoted lower. Nail Rod and Sheet Iron are in good request. Steel is quiet. Lead remains firm. Quicksilver dull. Ber, both in wood and bottle, is in good request, especially the superior brands.

Exports (Bombay, May 12).—Cotton.—During the early part of the fortnight a great reduction was effected in prices, owing to the repeated discouraging advices received from Liverpool. The low prices, however, induced a desire on the part of exporters to operate, but this was checked by the firmness lately shown by holders, who are reluctant to part with the staple at such low figures. Oil Seeds.—A very limited business has been done in both Linseed and Rapeseed. Prices have receded from four to five annas per cwt. Coffee.—The market is short of stocks, but fresh supplies are shortly expected. Teap has only local demand, at previous quotations. The market is well stocked. Pepper has a demand on the spot, and prices are a little higher. Saffron.—A few sales of both Mooltan and Seide have been effected at slightly advanced rates. Madder Root.—Seide and Patna are not to be had, and business is, therefore, confined to Muscat, of which there is a good stock, held at Rs. 3-14 to Rs. 4-2.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, April 25.—The London mail of the 10th March arrived here early on the 22nd.

The exact terms of the reply made to the ultimatum by the General Council at Peking have not yet transpired; but it must have been conciliatory, and on the whole approaching to an acceptance of the ultimatum, for, after thinking over the subject for a week, the Plenipotentiary sent, on the 14th, a second communication, explaining that the conditions previously specified in the ultimatum were unalterable, as being the expressed will of Her Majesty, and further intimating that if the Chinese Government would yield immediate compliance with it the demand for indemnity would not be pressed. It is evident that such a repetition of the ultimatum would not have been made unless the reply had been conciliatory and very nearly satisfactory. All the stories about the ultimatum having been insolently rejected, or sent back torn into seven pieces, may be safely considered as totally unfounded. There is little doubt, however, that if the Chinese do not yield full compliance to this second requisition, the matter will be handed over to the Naval and Military Commanders-in-Chief.

Almost every day during the fortnight has seen the arrival of steamers and sailing vessels with French and English troops for the expeditionary force. The opposite peninsula of Chim-sa-tsoey presents quite an animated camp, where the Sikh cavalry and the Armstrong guns are the principal objects of attraction. There are many unfounded and premature rumours as to what is doing and about to be done; but the truth is that the moment for action has not yet arrived. The occupation of Chusan and the blockade of the gulf of Pechele, which rumour accomplished a fortnight ago, have still to be effected, and can scarcely be commenced until our affairs in China pass out of the hands of the plenipotentiary into those of the commanders-in-chief. Meanwhile a portion of the force is being assembled at Kin-tang, to be ready to take such steps as may be decided on should war be commenced. Commissariat officers are busy here, at the ports and in Japan, making preparations for the coming campaign. As to the Chinese preparations nothing is really known. The expedition cannot be met by immediate resistance, and the Chinese are by no means such fools as to waste their powers in fruitless resistance before time and climate come to their aid.

The re-appointment of Lord Elgin is not very popular with a section of the community in China, who find in Mr. Bruce a Plenipotentiary more after their own hearts; but his Lordship's greater experience and consideration are much required at present, and the rule is a good one which removes the conduct of affairs from the hands of those who, whether rightly or wrongly, have caused international difficulties.

From Japan accounts are still unsatisfactory. The foreign residents at Yokohama consider themselves still unsafe. There was a rumour that the Regent had been attacked and wounded by the retainers of the Prince of Meto, who is a pretender to the position of Tycoon, and said to be unfriendly to foreigners.

With one of those turns which happen so often in China, the rebels about the Yang-tsze have of late had the worst of it. They have retired from the neighbourhood of Hang-chow, and the locality is quite tranquillised. The Commander-in-Chief of the Imperialist force on the Yang-tsze declares that the rebels are besieged on all sides, and that the last moment of their existence has arrived! He also states that they have been driven back into the province of Che-kiang, where they will be exterminated.

There has been little change since our last summary was issued in the position of the rebels or marauders in the neighbourhood of Canton. They are not far from Fat-shan, but it is not true that that city has been taken by them. Some of their insignia indicate affiliation with the followers of Tai-ping Wang, and they are known in the province by the name of the "red head," or red turban rebels.

Coolie emigration has now ceased for the present season. We understand that when the new emigration scheme was established at Canton, it was first proposed that contracts should be done away with entirely, and bonds substituted for the amount of the expenses of each coolie to be signed by the coolie and recoverable, by extended payments, from his master, who would, of course, deduct the amount from his servant's wages. This would have removed all shadow of objection to the scheme as one of contract servitude; but both the coolies and the Chinese authorities strongly objected to this, as they feared that the emigrant, on arriving at his destination, would be entirely unprovided for, without a situation, and burdened by an apparently enormous debt. It is possible that emigration may yet be allowed on no other terms, should the coolies gain confident expectation of obtaining remunerative work in the West Indies. Such a plan will effectually remove the trade out of private hands, and so prevent the abuses which have hitherto accompanied it. It will then be beneficial only to the colonies at large; and, if the payments are made to extend over three years and not used as a means of coercion, it will be of advantage to the coolie also, as it will render him a free agent after his arrival.

In Hong Kong we have had the commencement of summer heat, the thermometer having stood above eighty on several days lately. There has, however, been almost no rain lately. There has been a difference between H.M.'s naval and military officers here and the Hong Kong Club.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, May 10.—This is the first of the monsoon mails, and starts five days earlier than usual. But writing in a room whose temperature painfully resembles that of an oven, we summon up all the energy the frightful and long-continued heat has spared to us to announce that as yet the refreshing rains of the south-west monsoon have not made their appearance. So much the better for those who have been employed in preparing and shipping coffee; and limited as is the interval since last mail the aggregate of exports in that period is the largest for the season—perhaps the largest export of coffee that ever left Ceylon in ten days. The quantity added to our exports is 56,795 cwt., in the proportion of 42,790 plantation and 14,005 native. This quantity has been taken away in seven vessels, of which four cleared out for London, one for Falmouth, one for Bordeaux, and one for Havre. The result of this large export is that the total shipments to the corresponding periods in this season and the last are 453,000, against 444,000 cwt. As regards next crop, the effects of the severe and long-continued drought are exciting serious apprehensions, in respect to the low lying districts at least.

The railway continues to be the great topic of discussion, the publication of a pamphlet by Mr. Doyne, and the revelations it contains, adding fervency to the hope already entertained, that Mr. Hawkshaw's report may eventuate in ridding us of the company. We are waiting anxiously to know our fate.

The immigration tax seems to be as unpopular, if not more so, than the railway scheme. In accordance with the resolution arrived at by those who took part in the famous pavilion meeting, the commissioners ordered Capt. Graham to the Northern Circars. The result of a conference, however, between the gallant agent and members of the Planters' Association has been that he goes for the present to Travancore.

A general meeting of the Planters' Association is summoned for the 24th May, to proceed to elect new office bearers, in the room of Messrs. Tytler and Brown, who retire.

Much astonishment, and no little amusement, has been created by the publication in the Gazette of a Royal Warrant of precedence, the intention of which evidently was to place the Anglican Bishop above the Puisne Judges of the Supreme Court, and under the Chief Justice. But the document is so awkwardly worded that it may be so construed, and apparently must be so construed, as to place the Chief Justice not only under the Bishop, but under the Puisne Judges!

The new step in rank has not prevented the bishop from getting into fresh trouble. Newera Ellia has, on this occasion, been the scene of strife, and we learn that at length the governor is seriously annoyed with the conduct of his right reverend friend, whose battles he, in former days, so fiercely fought.

There is some sickness abroad already, and if the drought continues, we fear we must be prepared for an epidemic.

Major Henry C. Bird, one of our oldest, most respected, and most enterprising colonists, and one of a family who were the pioneers of coffee planting in Ceylon, goes home by this mail. The Kandy firm of C. Pitts and Co., of which Major Bird is the head, is to be conducted in future by Mr. Henry Bird and Mr. Thompson, under the designation of Henry C. Bird and Son. We are happy to believe that Major Bird has not failed to earn a competency from his long-continued industry.—Ceylon Overland Observer.

LONDON AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—A proposal has been brought forward for organizing the London and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, with a capital of £2,000,000, in 40,000 shares of £50 each. The parties who are understood to be moving in it comprise influential individuals, and the object is to establish monthly communication with India, via the Cape of Good Hope, by means of first-class steamships, sufficiently powerful, fast, and capacious to allow of the passage to or from Calcutta being regularly performed in forty-five days. It appears it is intended to construct ships of 6,000 tons register, fitted with engines of 1,200-horse power, expressly for this important route, the prospects of profitable employment for vessels of that superior class becoming daily more encouraging. It is recommended that these large steamships shall leave England for Calcutta, and vice versa, on the 1st of every month, touching at Madras, but coaling only at the Cape, by which arrangement the delay and increased expenditure which, it is said, has hitherto prevented the successful establishment of steam communication with the East may be avoided.

C. HUGH LUSHINGTON,

Batta to the Persian Expedition.

Military Dept., Simla. April 18, 1860.—H.E. the Gov. gen. is pleased to publish for general information the following extract, paragraphs 1 and 2, from a despatch from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 101, of March 8, 1860, authorising the grant of a donation of six months' batta to the officers, soldiers, and seamen engaged in the Persian expedition, in acknowledgment of the great service rendered by them.

Para. 1. The earnest recommendation conveyed in your letter dated Oct. 8th last, that, in lieu of the small amount of prize money realized by the Persian expeditionary force, six months' donation batta should be granted to the land and sea forces engaged in that expedition, has been under the consideration of H.M.'s Government; and I have now the pleasure of informing you that H.M.'s Government have acceded to your recommendation, and have resolved that a donation of six months' batta be granted to the officers, soldiers, and seamen engaged in the expedition, in acknowledgment of the great services rendered by them.

The time which has elapsed since these operations renders it especially necessary that all diligence should be shown in the preparation and transmission to this country of rolls or the officers and men who have left India, in order that their claims to the batta should be settled, you are requested to give instructions accordingly.

H. E. the Gov. gen. is pleased in consideration of their gallant services and exemplary loyalty to the state, to sanction the advancement of jemadar Sew-churn Misser, of the 1st Belooch extra batt., from the 3rd to the 2nd class of the order of merit, and to admit jemadar Elahoe Bux, of the same regt., to the 3rd class of the order.

Medals to Sergeants.

H. E. the Gov. gen. is pleased to publish the following copy of the Horse Guard's circular memorandum, dated June 1, 1859, No. 170, defining the principles which regulate the grant of medals to sergeants for "good conduct" and "long service" and for "distinguished conduct in the field":—

CIRCULAR MEMORANDUM ADDRESSED TO THE ARMY AT HOME AND ABROAD.

Horse Guards, S.W., 1st June 1859.
General No. 140.

Medal and Gratuities. 1 (1859).
It being desirable that the principles which regulate the grant of annuities and medals to sergeants who may be already in possession of medals and are at present, the following rules have been framed by his Royal Highness the general command-in-chief, in concurrence with the secretary of state for war, for the guidance of the army gene-

1. The medal accompanying the annuity, and inscribed "for meritorious service," is to be considered as given for service of the same nature as that accompanying the gratuity. "For long service and good conduct," the former being held by sergeants only, the latter by non-commissioned officers and privates indifferently.

2. Both annuity and gratuity are also given, under special circumstances, accompanied by medal similarly inscribed "for distinguished conduct in the field."

3. When a sergeant, on becoming an annuitant, receives a medal denoting by its inscription that it is given for service similar to that for which he has already received a medal, he will be required to relinquish the latter medal, together with its accompanying gratuity, and to sign a declaration that he does so voluntarily.

4. When, however, the inscription on the medal granted to a sergeant, together with an annuity, shows that it is given for service of a different nature from that for which he already holds a medal, he will be required to relinquish the gratuity only, making a like declaration as to the voluntary relinquishment.

5. Commanding officers are at liberty to recommend the re-appropriation of a relinquished gratuity to any other deserving soldiers, provided they shall have been serving in the year for which the gratuity was originally awarded, and shall have fulfilled the required conditions as to service and character in that year.

By command.

(Signed)

G. A. WETHERALL,

Adjutant general.

It is notified that her Majesty's Government have resolved that the principles laid down in the above memorandum shall be made applicable to her Majesty's Indian army.

STAFF APPOINTMENTS. EXPEDITION TO CHINA.

No. 189.—The Hon. the Gov. in Council is pleased to publish the following extracts of a despatch from the Govt. of India, relative to the tenure of staff appointments by officers proceeding with the expedition to China.

"I am directed to acquaint you, for the information of the Hon. the Lieut. gov., that, with regard to officers belonging to H.M.'s regts. which form part of the expedition to China, such officers necessarily vacate their appointments because their corps are struck off the establishment. This decision includes the case of Lieut. Goldard, H.M.'s 87th fus."

"With regard to officers of the local forces (case of Lieut. W. C. Anderson, offic. adjt. 1st Punjab cav.), I am directed to state that it must depend upon their having volunteered for the expedition, or having been taken for the benefit of the public service, whether or not they vacate their appointments. Officers who have volunteered are to vacate, but officers who have been taken from their appointments for the public service will retain their lien on their appointments and draw half the salaries as usual on such occasions."

FLOW OF GOLD AND SILVER TO INDIA.—A return presented to Parliament shows that the precious metals, coined and uncoined, were imported into India in the financial year 1857-58 to the amount of £15,815,436, which was about £1,400,000 more than in the preceding year, and £4,500,000 more than in the year before that. But, until 1855, the influx was much less; from 1850 to 1855 the annual average was below £4,500,000. In the nine years ending in 1858 the total amount reached no less than £87,522,689. For 1858-59 the Bengal return has not yet been received; in the other two presidencies the import was nearly a sixth less than in 1857-58. The value of the coined money issued by the mints of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay in the year 1857-58 was as follows:—Gold, Rs. 4,37,835; copper, Rs. 13,96,055; bar silver, Rs. 12,55,14,032; in the nine years ending in 1858—gold, Rs. 70,85,055; copper, Rs. 60,18,268; silver, Rs. 51,70,17,709.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, June 6, 1860.

WAR WITH CHINA.

THERE is no longer any uncertainty as to the course to be pursued with regard to China. Averse to a renewal of hostilities, and perhaps conscious of being itself not entirely free from blame, the British Government furnished the Emperor of China with an easy mode of extrication from the difficulties produced by the too-spirited conduct of Prince Sang-Kolin-sin. His Imperial Majesty was simply called upon to repudiate the treacherous attack on the British squadron at the mouth of the Peiho, to restore the guns and materiel captured on that occasion, to ratify the Treaty of Tien-tsin, and to pay the stipulated indemnity for losses and military expenses incurred through the insolence of the Chinese authorities at Canton. The moderation evinced in these demands is undeniable. It was impossible to ask for less without endangering the prestige of the British arms throughout Asia. To have submitted to the outrage committed by the Imperial General in command of the Taku forts would have been regarded by the Chinese as an act of pusillanimity, and as an avowal of our incapability of competing with the might of the Celestial Empire. Impunity in this instance would have emboldened every governor of a province to adopt aggressive measures whenever it suited his interest or caprice, and no security would remain for life or property. It may easily be imagined that so far as this country is concerned an apology would have been far more welcome than the rejection of the ultimatum. The state of Europe is not such as to render a distant and troublesome warfare at all desirable. Were there no other objection, the necessity of again acting in concert with the French would suffice to make hostilities with the Chinese altogether distasteful to the nation, and vexatious to the troops employed on that service. The final results, too, are likely to be far from advantageous to the true interests of Great Britain. Our allies are apt to convert their "ideas" into substantial acquisitions. They ask for something more enduring than the renown of victory, or the honour of avenging an insult or redressing a wrong. In China, indeed, there can be no question of geographical boundaries, nor will it be possible to appeal to universal suffrage. Nevertheless, in the name of Christianity and civilisation, France will demand territorial cessions, if for no other purpose than as affording a pretext for henceforth maintaining a powerful squadron in the China seas. The island of Chusan, so unwisely abandoned by the English, has long been an object of French ambition, and now an irresistible opportunity presents itself for gratifying the lust of aggrandisement, under the plea of preventing the recurrence of acts of violence towards French missionaries and merchants. Already a station has been acquired in the Red Sea, and it is proposed to establish a regular communication with Cochin

China, by means of a packet-service similar to that of the Peninsular and Oriental Company. In all quarters of the globe the feline policy of Louis Napoleon is stealthily making progress. His object is to establish a point d'appui whence he may one day be able to operate against every dependency of the British Crown. This unfortunate war with China now furnishes him with a specious pretext for seizing upon Chusan, and it will be well if a port on the northern coast be not also appropriated. Were it not for this ill-omened alliance, England would be content to inflict summary chastisement on the Chinese for their treachery at the Peiho, and to insist upon the right of trading with any point on the coast, and with any town in the interior.

It is not impossible that the present difficulty might have been entirely avoided if the Government had acted frankly and cordially towards that of Russia. Were China to become a Russian Province to-morrow, England, so far from being injuriously affected, would immediately profit by a vast extension of trade. There is not the slightest reason for entertaining a jealous fear of the progress of Russian influence in the East. It is through that Power alone that either China or Central Asia is likely to become truly civilised, and it indicates a mean and grovelling mind to envy her the glory of humanising those semi-barbarous peoples. The true policy of this country is rather to forward than to retard the development of Russia to the eastward. France is the only Power from whom we have anything to fear, and yet by a strange fatality she is the only Power whose ambition we aid and encourage to our present detriment and to our future peril.

MR. WILSON'S EXPLANATIONS.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council of Calcutta on the 21st of April, Mr. Harrington asked the following questions of the Financial Member:—First, How far the expected deficiency for the next year of six and a-half millions was likely to be met by reduction of expenditure? And secondly, Seeing that it is proposed to take the Income-tax Bill for the limited period of five years, how is it contemplated in the interim to provide ways and means, so as to enable the Government to dispense with the tax at the expiration of that period? In reply, Mr. Wilson entered at considerable length upon an explanation of his former financial statement, and cleared away much of the obscurity in which it was previously enshrouded. He began by reminding the Council that the income of 1859-60 was £37,706,209, while that of 1860-61 was estimated at £38,116,208, the increase being chiefly attributable to the additional duty upon salt. On the other hand the expenditure of 1859-60 was £41,770,018, while that of 1860-61 was not expected to exceed £40,230,000. The deficit in India would therefore be £2,113,810, to which must be added £4,393,020 for Home charges, and £1,000,000 for the payment of interest on the guaranteed railway capital; making in all the large sum of £7,506,830. From this, however, must be deducted the million sterling allowed for compensation for losses incurred in consequence of the mutiny, as that item will not again appear in the estimates. The actual difference, therefore, between regular income and regular expenditure may be stated in round numbers as six millions and a-half. This deficit, it must be understood, does not include the sums required for the redemption of the Tanjore Bonds and the payment of the debts of the Nawab of the Carnatic, which Mr. Wilson refuses to recognise as belonging to the category of expenditure, because they affect only the finances of the single year in which they take place. Such being the state of the exchequer, the question arises how is this "yawning chasm" to be bridged over? Reduction of expenditure will not alone suffice. In the Civil Service there may be room for improvement, but certainly not any opportunity for retrenchment. The public works, too, that have been temporarily suspended will have to be resumed, so that it is more likely that the civil expenditure will be increased than diminished. The military charges, however, may without doubt be considerably reduced. In 1856-57 they amounted to £11,303,780, in 1857-58 to £15,089,391, in 1858-59 to £20,258,065, and in 1859-60 to £16,855,275. These aggregate sums are thus divided between the three presidencies:—

	MILITARY EXPENDITURE.
	Bengal.	Madras.	Bombay.
1856-57 ..	£ 6,247,517	£ 3,005,283	£ 2,050,981
1857-58 ..	8,656,965	3,653,150	2,778,976
1858-59 ..	11,613,922	4,643,774	4,011,269
1859-60 ..	8,346,486	4,313,030	4,208,795

Whence it appears that the reductions already effected have been almost entirely confined to the Bengal army, though the Bombay Government are now in a fair way of following that example. The Madras Government have not been equally careful or provident. Their expenditure has been actually reduced by only £300,000, though so far back as last May they estimated the expenses for the current year at £2,782,000, which implied a reduction to the extent of £1,850,000. But, asks Mr. Wilson, is it possible to bring down the military charges for the year 1860-61 yet further? And this question he himself answers in the affirmative—to the extent of £800,000, which would lower the entire cost of the Indian army to £14,258,065. This may be regarded as nearly the minimum to which the military charges for India can be permanently reduced, for whatever changes be introduced into the organisation of the army it is manifest that a much larger European force must henceforth be maintained than was thought necessary prior to the mutiny. It thus appears that the deficit may be brought down to £5,700,000 in place of £6,500,000, but beyond this nothing can be done, notwithstanding the assertion of the Madras Government that by the end of next year income and expenditure may be equalised by cutting down the military estimates.

Mr. Wilson objects, with good reason, to an economy that would incapacitate us from defending the empire against either internal or foreign foes:—

"It may indeed be," he said, "and I sincerely believe that it will be so, that as long as we maintain in India an adequate European force, and as long as we resist every temptation to revive the native army which has been dissolved, there is no probability that we shall ever again have a repetition of the events of the last three years; but looking to the altered state of intercourse in the Eastern seas, looking to the many questions raised in reference to the political importance of Egypt and the Red Sea, and looking to the state of affairs in Europe, every day becoming more seriously complicated, it would be impossible that a prudent Government, charged with the preservation of interests, both public and private, so enormous as are involved in the security of India, could be insensible to the duty of maintaining its military defences in an efficient state. For certain it is, if ever we are to have another European war, and how long that may be postponed no one will venture to say, yet come when it may, it is certain that, in the altered state of things, we may expect operations in India and against India to form no small element in such a war. Therefore, sir, while it will be our duty to persevere in the course we have begun of reducing expenditure to the utmost, it will equally be our duty to see that we take every precaution to preserve India alike secure from internal disturbance and from foreign aggression."

There still remains, then, to provide the £5,700,000 which stand on the wrong side of the account after every desirable retrenchment has been made. The Customs may be expected to produce a small sum, but the other taxes proposed are not likely to yield more than two millions in the course of the present financial year, and the Government will think themselves fortunate if they succeed in reducing the deficit to £3,500,000. This deficiency may, indeed, be covered by having recourse to the balances in the exchequer, but that is an operation which cannot be repeated, and will not be available for more than one year.

"What, then," asks the right hon. gentleman, "are we to rely upon in succeeding years? Well, we hope that, after the first year, our new taxes may yield more richly; but it will then only be by a continuation of further reductions and of improved systems that it will be, under the most favourable circumstances, possible to make both ends meet. Sir, the task is a most difficult one, and is surrounded with impediments the full value of which no man can judge of who has not gone carefully into every part of the subject as it affects the present and the future. I say, sir, without hesitation, that the readjustment of Indian finance is a task so difficult, that, except with the full and hearty concurrence and co-operation of all who are interested in the Queen's Government, I do not believe that it is possible. We cannot hide from ourselves that we have received a severe shock—a shock which it will require all the patriotism, self-denial, and zeal of the public service to counteract."

Notwithstanding this somewhat gloomy view of public affairs, Mr. Wilson is hopeful for the future. He fondly believes that in five years it will be possible to dispense with the Income-tax, though the reasons he assigns for that agreeable anticipation are not altogether convincing. He looks forward to a considerable saving being accomplished by the gradual disbandment of the new levies and military police, and the substitution of a well-organised civil police force under European officers. The new Currency system is also to stimulate trade and industry, which will further be developed by the completion of railways, canals, and navigable rivers. It must be admitted that this is not very reassuring; and if this be all that can be urged in justification of the hope that that objectionable impost will expire and determine in five years, the Indian taxpayers may as well make up their mind to bear it somewhat longer. After all, they have only themselves to thank for the additional burdens now laid upon them, nor have they any right to complain that having sown the wind they have now to reap the whirlwind.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

The report of the directors stated that they had the satisfaction of announcing to the proprietors the opening of the first portion of the line, twenty-nine miles, between the Taptee and Nerbudda rivers, from Anrolee to Unklesar. Trains were running regularly up to the last dates from India. Running one train each way daily, the gross earning for the week ending the 12th February last was at the rate of 3s. 6d. per train mile; for the week ending the 19th February, 4s. 7d. per train mile; ending the 26th February, 5s. 3d. per train mile; ending the 4th March, 5s. 7d. per train mile; and the 11th March, 5s. 6d. per train mile; the number of passengers conveyed each week being 693, 1,849, 2,157, 2,351, and 2,255 respectively. Running two trains each way daily, the gross earning for the week ending March 18, was at the rate of 3s. 3d. per train mile; week ending March 25, 3s. 1d. per train mile; week ending April 1, 3s. 8d. per train mile; and for the week ending April 8, 3s. 0d. per train mile; the number of passengers being 2,078, 2,595, 2,965, and 2,475 respectively. The progress reports to the 29th February last, in respect of the works on the section between Surat and Ahmedabad, 143 miles, stated that the whole of the earthwork was executed, and also the whole of the brickwork and masonry. 35½ per cent. of the ballast was spread of the line, 72½ per cent. of the fencing completed, and 48½ per cent. of the permanent way laid. With regard to the works on the section between Surat and Veturnee, 117 miles, the quantity of earthwork executed was 71·2 per cent.; of brickwork and masonry, 22·1; of fencing, 49·75 per cent.; and of permanent way, 6·75 per cent.

The latest advices from India gave a most satisfactory report of progress in the erection of the large iron-bridge across the Taptee river. This bridge would consist of thirty-two spans of sixty feet, for which both the piers of cast iron and superstructure of wrought iron had been supplied from England. The erection commenced last November, and on the 7th April nearly the whole of the perpendicular piles forming the piers had been screwed into their places. It was expected that the few that were not so would be completed within a week from that date. The fixing of the strut piles and superstructures are likewise proceeding rapidly; and, according to these advices, there was no doubt that this bridge, 2,000 feet long, across a tidal river, would be completed either before or during the coming monsoon,—that was, within a period of about six or seven months from its commencement. The bridge over the Nerbudda, of a similar nature, would be more than 3,800 feet in length, composed of sixty spans of sixty feet each. The difficulties to contend with here were greater than in the case of the Taptee; one of the most formidable—the strength of the tidal current—had already twice impeded operations by injuring the staging. A further delay had also been occasioned by the cholera, which had lately appeared in the district, and driven the labourers from the bridge. Of the fifty-nine pile piers for this bridge, seventeen had been erected on the north side, reaching the deepest water of the river, and several others were in the course of erection on the south bed above low-water mark. It had been found necessary in some instances to screw these piles to a depth of forty feet,—the more usual depth being about eighteen feet. The directors were glad to say that by the last advices the cholera had abated, but not sufficiently to enable them to anticipate that the piers of this bridge would be completed before the monsoon. All the minor iron-bridges over fifty-four miles of line between the Nerbudda and the Mhye rivers were in an advanced state, and were expected to be completed before the monsoon, as well as those on the first thirty miles south from Surat. The permanent way was laid from the Nerbudda to near Etola, within twelve miles of Baroda, and was passable for an engine. The company's officers were in possession of the land for the line from Ahmedabad to Mahim, about 300 miles. The short distance (nine miles and three-quarters) from Mahim to the terminus in Bombay was the only portion which now remained to be decided. This included the purchase of the Mahim branch from the Great Indian Peninsula Company. The directors proposed to raise a further sum of £250,000 by debentures, convertible into shares at one month's notice after the expiration of twelve months from the date of their issue. An offer had just been made officially through the Bombay Government by his Highness the Guicowar of Baroda, to give to this company the construction of a line of railway through his territory from the vicinity of Etola to the towns of Dubhoee and Bahadurpore, in the direction of the line now being surveyed by the company towards Indore. His Highness offered the land free, and the usual 5 per cent. guarantee. The proposed line was about twenty-five miles in length, through a rich, populous, level country, producing cotton largely, and free from all impediments to railway construction. It would constitute a valuable feeder to the main line. Over 79,700 tons of materials in weight and measurement had been shipped to Bombay up to the 30th ult., and the shipment of the remainder of the materials was actively proceeding.

The capital account showed that £1,871,526 had been received, and £1,595,709 expended, leaving a balance of £275,817.

CEYLON RAILWAY.

The report of the directors of this company states, that in consequence of the very high estimates prepared by Mr. Doyne, the company's late chief resident engineer, of the cost of the railway, arrangements were made with Messrs. Brassey, Peto, Betts, and Wythes, and Messrs. Waring Brothers, to send out independent agents of their own to examine the country, with a view to competitive tenders. This was represented to the Secretary of State, and, with his concurrence, Messrs. Waring's agent left England for Ceylon at the end of August last, and returned in December, but Messrs. Brassey and Co. were unable to despatch their representative until October, who consequently did not return until the end of February. Immediately on his arrival a general specification was prepared and settled with Mr. Hawkshaw, the engineer acting on the part of the Government, as the basis of the tenders. This specification was issued on the 10th of April, and tenders were invited for the 19th of the same month. A copy of the specification was forwarded to Captain Moorsom, the Government engineer, and an additional week granted to enable him to send in his tender; instead of doing so he expressed his inability to tender upon the company's specification, although both the other contractors were ready to do so. It was then intimated to him that his tender would be received upon any specification of his own, and the time for tendering was extended for a further period of a week, expiring on the 10th of May. On that day tenders were received from Messrs. Brassey and Co., and from Messrs. Waring, Brothers, and referred to Mr. Hawkshaw and Mr. Gregory. Some additional information, however, required in the specification, did not accompany the tenders, and had still to be supplied. Captain Moorsom did not put in a tender. It had been the earnest endeavour of the directors to bring the matter to a speedy and satisfactory conclusion, and the correspondence with the Government on the subject would show that they had left no means untried to enable them to attain that result in time to communicate it to the proprietors at the meeting. While the directors, in common with the colony and the proprietors, regretted the delay which had taken place, it was nevertheless satisfactory to observe that it had not been unattended with benefit. In consequence of the wish of the Government that operations should be partially suspended until the question of the estimates and contracts should be decided, comparatively little progress had been made with the works during the past half-year. About fourteen miles of the line were far advanced in construction, and the present acting engineer, Mr. Molesworth, had so judiciously conducted his operations that he had kept the whole of the staff profitably employed, and everything that had been done would tend to facilitate arrangements for resuming the work. The number of coolies employed, according to the latest accounts, was about 1,400, but in order not to lose the dry season the Government had sanctioned the employment of a thousand additional men, so as to push on those portions of the line which were liable to be flooded at certain seasons of the year. Fresh surveys had been made in various directions, some with a view to improvement in Mr. Doyne's line, and others with a view of obtaining a line through the upper country susceptible of better gradients, the results of which, as far as they had gone, convinced the directors that by devoting more time to the exploration of so difficult a country a more advantageous route than that recommended by Mr. Doyne would yet be found. With this object the Government had lately authorised the survey of one of the most important of the suggested deviations. Since Mr. Doyne's return Mr. Molesworth had administered the twofold office of agent and engineer, and the directors expressed the high sense they entertained of the able manner in which he had conducted the company's business. Up to the 14th of April, 1859, neither the directors nor the Governor of Ceylon, with whom the late chief resident engineer was in constant communication, had the smallest reason to suppose that the estimates would exceed £1,200,000; they consequently entered into contracts for permanent way, stores, and other materials applicable to the whole line, the cost of which was included in the expenditure already incurred. Large supplies of rails, 100 iron bridges, and other materials and stores were purchased, and ready for shipment; but directly the Governor had reason to suspect that the estimates would greatly exceed £1,200,000 means were taken to suspend shipments, and to diminish every expenditure in their power. The actual expenditure in England to the present time was £95,538, and in Ceylon, to the 9th of February, £115,075; total, £211,214. The amount received on capital account was £294,231, leaving £83,007 in hand.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HOME CHARGES FOR INDIA.—The annual accounts for India estimate the year's charges in this country for the Secretary of State and the Council of India, and the members of their establishment, at £122,138, after deducting £7,098 applied from the fee fund in part payment. There is also an item for contingent expenses, of which the only account given is, "Repairs to India-office, taxes, rates and tithes, coals, candles, subscriptions to charities, and on public occasions, printing, stationery, stamps, bookbinding, postage, and various petty charges, £27,376." Annuitants and pensioners will take £243,193, and there is a further charge:—"Lord Clive's Fund, payments for pensions, £84,222." Addiscombe takes £24,268, but there will be £16,013 received from cadets. Recruiting charges mount up to £101,927, passage and outfit for a Governor, a member of Council, staff officers, &c., £111,540; war medals, £12,729. There is a very humble charge of £45 for cultivation and manufacture of vegetable products of India. During the past year pensions to the amount of £11,862 have been granted, some of considerable amount, being for superior Indian functionaries; many of the pensions are for widows and families of officers killed in the mutiny, and some to the widows of pilots and others.

THE EAST INDIA COAL COMPANY have held their half-yearly meeting, when the balance in favour of revenue up to the 31st December last being only £541, a dividend was not proposed. The East India Railway Company have entered into a contract to take 28,500 tons of coal in the course of two years on terms similar to those of the Government contract, and considerable savings are expected to accrue from the formation of two lines of railway to the company's property.

HIMALAYAN TEA COMPANY.—The project started under the name of the Himalayan Tea Company, not having met with adequate support, although several of the daily journals quoted the shares at ½ pram., has been withdrawn, and the subscribers are receiving back their deposits in full.

APPOINTMENTS.—MAURITIUS.—Downing-street, May 28.—Adolphe Barrant, Esq., M.D., has been appointed assistant health officer, and Immigration depot surgeon for the island of Mauritius.

WORKS IN THE HINDUSTANI LANGUAGE,

BY

DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D.,

PROFESSOR OF ORIENTAL LANGUAGES IN KING'S COLLEGE, LONDON; MEMBER OF THE ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND, &c.

REDUCED IN PRICE.

The indisputable superiority of this Series of Works to all others of the same kind having created a demand very far beyond their most sanguine expectations, the Publishers take the opportunity to testify their gratitude for the public favour so unequivocally manifested, by making a considerable REDUCTION IN THEIR PRICES. They are further encouraged to take this step by the consideration of the greatly-increased number of Europeans who will henceforth be located in India, and to whom the possession of these Works may be regarded as indispensable. Serviceable to all, they will be found especially adapted to meet the requirements of Officers of her Majesty's Army serving in India.

DICTIONARY, HINDUSTANI-ENGLISH and ENGLISH-HINDUSTANI. Second Edition, greatly enlarged, and revised throughout. By D. FORBES, LL.D. In One Vol. royal 8vo, price in cloth, £2. 2s.; or, half-bound, £2. 5s. 6d.

*.* This edition of Dr. Forbes's Dictionary contains a greater number of words, with their explanations, than are to be found in any other dictionary in the language; and here, for the first time, the whole of the Hindee words have been printed in the Devanagari as well as in the Persian characters.

A ROMANISED DICTIONARY, HINDUSTANI-ENGLISH and ENGLISH-HINDUSTANI. By DUNCAN FORBES. Royal 8vo. (Nearly ready.)

A SMALLER ROMANISED HINDUSTANI DICTIONARY. By DUNCAN FORBES. (In the Press.)

To which is added a copious Selection of Easy Extracts for reading in the Persi-Arabic and Devanagari Characters, forming a complete introduction to the Bugh-o-Bahar, together with a Vocabulary and Explanatory Notes. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. Octavo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

HINDUSTANI MANUAL; a Pocket Companion for those who visit India in any capacity, containing a compendious Grammar, Exercises, and Vocabulary of Useful Words. 18mo, 3s. 6d.

BAGH-O-BAHAR; consisting of Entertaining Tales in the Hindustani Language. By MIR AMMAN, of Delhi. A New Edition, carefully Collated with Original Manuscripts, having the essential vowel points and punctuation marked throughout; to which is added a Vocabulary by DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. Royal 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

*.* The Bagh-o-Bahar is the text book in which Cadets and Assistant-Surgeons have to pass an examination in India. This edition was prepared under the authority of the Honourable the East India Company.

BAGH-O-BAHAR, Roman Character with Vocabulary. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. 12mo. (Just ready.)

*.* This book is being printed in a clear and distinct type, and will be very moderate in price.

BAGH-O-BAHAR. Translated into English. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. With Notes by the Translator, illustrative of the Manners, Customs, and Ideas of the Natives of India. A New Edition, Revised and Corrected throughout. Octavo, cloth, 8s.

THE BAITAL PACHISI; or, the Twenty-five Tales of a Demon. A New and Corrected Edition, with a Vocabulary of all the words occurring in the Text. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. Royal 8vo, 9s.

*.* Military and Medical Officers have to pass in this work.

TOTA-KAHANI; or, Tales of a Parrot. In Hindustani. A New Edition, with the vowel points, &c., carefully marked, and accompanied by a Vocabulary of all the words occurring in the Text. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. Royal 8vo, cloth, 8s.

ORIENTAL PENMANSHIP; an Essay for facilitating the Reading and Writing of the Ta'lik Character, as generally used in the East in Persian and Hindustani Manuscripts and Printed Works; consisting of various Specimens of Fine Writing, accurately lithographed from Original Native MSS., accompanied by letter-press Descriptions, together with Explanatory Notes and Observations. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. Quarto, cloth, 8s.

A GRAMMAR of the BENGALI LANGUAGE, with Reading Lessons and a Vocabulary. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. Royal 8vo. (In preparation.)

London W. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street.

THE MILITARY ENCYCLOPEDIA; a Technical, Biographical, and Historical Dictionary, referring exclusively to the Military Sciences, the Memoirs of distinguished Soldiers, and the Narratives of Remarkable Battles. By J. H. STOCQUELER, Esq.

"Mr. Stocqueler's former works, and his well-known proficiency in the military sciences, will insure a favourable reception for this very useful book, which possesses the advantage of compressing into one portable volume a vast mass of information on military subjects, arranged especially for reference. No one could be better qualified than Mr. Stocqueler for such a task, and certainly he has accomplished it in a very able manner. In a volume which occupies but little room, the officer and soldier may here command at a glance the cream of many valuable works, and obtain information on almost any point of interest. This work, indeed, forms for the camp and barracks what Maundrell's 'Treasury of Knowledge' represents in the counting-house; and we cannot doubt that it will obtain corresponding success."—United Service Magazine.

THE INDUS and its PROVINCES; their Political and Commercial Importance considered in connection with Improved Means of Communication. Illustrated by Statistical Tables and Maps.

By W. P. ANDREW, F.R.G.S.,

Chairman of the Scinde and Punjab Railways, and Indus Steam Flotilla; Author of "Indian Railways as connected with the Power and Stability of the British Empire in the East," &c., &c., &c.

"The Indus and its Provinces" is really as interesting to the general reader as it is essential to the merchant, the trader, the politician, and the historian."—Morning Chronicle, May 27, 1858.

"Not contented to repose on his laurels as the early advocate for the construction of Railways in India, Mr. Andrew has steadily persevered in developing his original idea, and now, after twelve years of incessant application, we find him concentrating his energies on the improvement of land and river communication in Scinde and the Punjab, though with ulterior views, extending far beyond the immediate benefit of those Provinces."—Allen's Indian Mail, June 13, 1858.

London: WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street.

BY J. R. YOUNG,

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS,

PURE AND MIXED.

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the Military & Civil Service EXAMINATIONS. WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. Young has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. Young's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

London: WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.

IRREGULAR CIRCULATION, PALPITATION.—Few diseases distress their victims more than disorders of the heart. The tight, suffocating, anxious feeling alarms the patient, to whom immediate death seems imminent. When these results depend on indigestion, flatulency, or debilitated nervous power, a ready remedy has been discovered in Holloway's Pills and Ointment. At the commencement of the disturbed action of the heart, a course of these digestive and purifying pills will daily diminish the symptoms till regularity is perfectly restored. When the case has been neglected, or the palpitation is severe, the Ointment should be rubbed over the heart, pit of the stomach, and right side; it will much quicken the curative power of the Pills.

PURITY OF COMPLEXION, AND A SOFTNESS AND DELICACY OF SKIN
Are realised by the Use of

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed, by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen, to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. JOHN WHITE, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

THE MAGNESIAN EFFERVESCENT is

the most agreeable and effective remedy in all cases of Gout, Rheumatism, Acidity, Heartburn, Indigestion, and Biliary Affection, Nausea, Fever, Thirst, and Sea-sickness. It is highly recommended by the profession, and will be found especially valuable to those going to India or travelling in warm climates; as a mild and efficacious saline aperient it stands unequalled, and will be found peculiarly adapted for delicate females and children. To be obtained through all respectable chemists, and wholesale from Messrs. BACCLAY, Farringdon-street (put up in stoppered bottles at 4s. 6d. for India), and smaller size at 1s. 10d. and 2s. 9d.

Prepared only by EDWARD PRICHARD, Chemist, 10, Vigo-street, Regent-street, W.

LENTUM, A NEW COMPOSITION

for Artificial TEETH and GUMS, recommended to Invalids and all who suffer from Indigestion. Its flexibility and lightness give the greatest power in mastication, avoiding all pain or pressure on the gums, without springs, wires, or any unsightly gold. It supports all loose and tender teeth, and does not require the extraction of stumps. Prepared only by

Mr. ALFRED JONES, SURGEON-DENTIST to Her late Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, Her late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France.
64, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

TO SUFFERERS with CORNS and

BUNIONS.—Ask for a Box of YOUNG'S CORN and BUNION PLAINTELS, which will eradicate corns or bunions in a very short time. Be careful that you have YOUNG'S—the name is printed on the label; all others are imitations. Price 6d. and 1s. per box, or by post for thirteen postage stamps. Address H. YOUNG, 31, Shaftesbury-place, Alders gate-street, E.C. May be had at most chemists throughout the world. Agents wanted abroad. N.B.—A Liberal Allowance to Wholesale Dealers.

BLAIR'S GOUT & RHEUMATIC PILLS.

Price 1s. 10d. and 2s. 9d. per box.
This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated by unsolicited testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age. These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.

Sold by all medicine vendors. Observe "Thomas Prout, 229, Strand, London," on the Government stamp.

"INDIAN BAEI," for DIARRHŒA,

UNFURNISHED HOUSES at CLAPHAM-COMMON.

Mr. McLACHLAN, of 35, St. James's-street and Clapham-common, is instructed to LET TWO HOUSES in the GROVE, adjoining that beautiful spot, Clapham-common. They consist of dining, breakfast, and double drawing-rooms, and five bed-rooms, with the usual domestic offices, coach-house, stable, &c. The houses have just been put into thorough substantial and ornamental repair, and are fit for immediate occupation. The locality is highly respectable; and as the rents are moderate, and several Indian families reside in the neighbourhood, Mr. McLachlan begs to recommend the houses to the attention of families recently arrived from India. The drainage is warranted. Omnibuses to West-end and City pass constantly. One mile to the Balham Station, for Pimlico, Crystal Palace, Brighton, &c.

CLAPHAM COMMON.—APARTMENTS, handsomely furnished, consisting of Drawing-room, Dining-room, and Two or Three Bedrooms, pleasantly situated on the South side of the Common.
Apply at Brunswick House, Clapham-common.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 25th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

Books under 1 lb. 6d.; under 1 lb. 1s.; and for every additional 1 lb. an additional 1s.

The Mails for China are despatched at the same rate of postage as those to India; but must be pre-paid.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

By the Bombay Mail of the 24th of May we learn that the Governor-general reached Allahabad on the 15th, and that Lord Clyde was expected at that station on the following day. There is, in fact, a general movement and dispersion among those placed in authority over the armies and peoples of India. Sir Hugh Rose, the new Commander-in-Chief, left Bombay on the 16th, after issuing a highly complimentary address to the army of that Presidency, not a little at variance with his private reports to H.R.H. the General Commanding-in-Chief, to one of which we have alluded elsewhere. The publication of these letters among the papers presented to the House of Commons on Tuesday, the 13th, will scarcely tend to make Sir Hugh very popular with the late Company's officers, in whatever light he may be regarded by the Royals. His successor at Bombay, Major-General Sir William Mansfield, appears to be equally prejudiced against the local service, and impressed with the idea that the best of all possible systems is that presided over by the Horse Guards. The personal staff of the Commander-in-Chief, we may observe, consists of Colonel Warre, H.M.'s 7th, as military secretary; Dr. Vaughan, of the Bombay Medical Establishment, as private surgeon; and Lieutenant Moore, 6th Bombay N.I., as interpreter. Sir George Clerk, again, has appointed Brevet-Major Coley, 10th Bombay N.I., military secretary, and Mr. T. C. Hope, Bombay Civil Service.

On the 18th Sir G. R. Clerk held his first levee for the reception of the European officials and residents, and on the 19th his first durbar. At the latter considerable dissatisfaction was afforded to the native gentry in consequence of his Excellency remaining seated during the whole of the ceremony. Formerly it was the custom for the natives, whatever might be their rank, to take off their shoes on entering the durbar-room, retaining their caps or turbans, but latterly they appear to have evaded the removal of either article of attire, a proceeding equivalent to an expression of supreme contempt. Lord Elphinstone was probably not sufficiently acquainted with native usages and etiquette to be fully aware of the rudeness of his visitors, but Sir George's lengthened experience enabled him at once to see through their covert insolence. He met them accordingly with their own weapons, and asserted his dignity in a manner that will probably render a repetition of the lesson quite unnecessary.

Brigadier Chamberlain's expedition is reported to have been completely successful. After a sharp struggle the Mahsood Wuzerees were driven from their last stronghold, and have since sent in a deputation to sue for peace. Lieutenant Ayton, doing duty with the 5th Punjab infantry, fell while forcing their stockades.

The Court Martial on Captain J. G. Griffin, of the Madras army, has sentenced him to be cashiered, and Lord Clyde has confirmed the decision.

From the other parts of India there is little news worthy of record, unless it be the birth of a son and heir to his Highness the Nizam.

BENGAL.

THE PROBABLE AMOUNT OF THE INCOME-TAX, AND THE MEANS OF COLLECTING IT.

Immediately after Mr. Wilson made his financial statement, and proposed the income tax, our contemporary the Englishman (the well-known Calcutta daily paper) put forward an estimate of the yield of the new tax. "The income-tax proposed by Mr. Wilson," said the writer, "is 4 per cent. on all incomes above Rs. 500, of which 3 per cent. is to be taken by the Imperial Treasury, and 1 per cent. laid aside for local improvements; and 2 per cent. is to be taken on incomes below that sum; but for the sake of simplicity we will take the whole all round at 3 per cent. to arrive at our approximate estimate. The revenue derived from land throughout India is 18 millions sterling, this is the Government rental. Of this, 6 millions are paid by the permanent settled provinces and 12 millions by the rest of India. If, then, we estimate the income of the permanent settled provinces at 150 per cent. of the rental we have an income of 9 millions sterling for taxation."

"The rest of India," continued the writer, "is to be valued at one-half of the Government rental, from which there are many deductions for small incomes; but allowing the whole to be taxable, this gives us an income of six millions." The funded debt payable in India is estimated by the same writer at seventy millions, giving an income, at 5 per cent., of three and a-half millions. The probable income of bankers, merchants and tradesmen is placed at fifteen millions. The profit at 5 per cent. on the foreign trade of the country, imports and exports, taken at sixty millions, is put down at three millions. The income of professions, salaries of civil and military officers, clerks, agents, &c., is fixed at the high figure of ten millions: and the income of the distant and small settlements is placed at three and a-half millions. It was the object of the writer to point out the comparatively small way the income-tax, under a favourable estimate, would go to fill up the anticipated deficit of six and a-half millions; and putting every item at what he conceived to be a most liberal valuation, he was unable to place the income of India higher than fifty millions, and the tax upon it at a million and a-half sterling.

Now, to put the above valuation into the schedules of the Income Tax Act, we must make some alterations in the distribution of it. We must add the three and a-half millions estimated for the distant settlements, and consisting chiefly of profits, to the fifteen millions estimated as profits of merchants, bankers, and tradesmen; and to the latter we must also add the income of non-official professions, agencies, clerkships, &c., having deducted it from the aggregate amount fixed for it, and for official salaries, by the writer in the Englishman—say four millions from ten millions. To the fifteen millions of income from professions and trades we must further add the income derived from foreign trades, viz., three millions. The Englishman's estimate will then stand as follows in the schedules of the New Act:—

	Taxable Income.	Tax.
Sched. 1. Profits by landlords	£9,000,000	£270,000
Do. by ryots	6,000,000	180,000
2. Trades and Professions	25,500,000	765,000
3. Public Funds	3,500,000	105,000
4. Official salaries Civil and Military	6,000,000	180,000
	£50,000,000	£1,500,000

On comparing this estimate with the actual sum realised by the English Income Tax, according to a statement before us, we are at once struck with the enormous disproportion of the sum estimated by the Englishman, for the income of trades and professions. For, in England, that income is only one-fourth of the whole: whereas, for India, the Englishman estimates it at more than one-half of the entire income of the country. There is, however, every reason to suppose that in so thoroughly an agricultural country as India the income derived from trades and professions will bear a far smaller proportion to the whole than it does in England, and therefore if we, in revising the Englishman's estimate, place the income of trades and professions in India at a proportion no lower than what it bears to the entire income in England, we shall be most liberal in our allowance. This, however, will reduce the twenty-five and a-half millions of the Englishman to six and a-half millions.

The Englishman also places at six millions the income derived from the ryots who pay direct to the Government: he puts the tax, we observe, on the entire six millions; but here he is altogether wrong. A very small proportion of that six millions will be touched by the tax. In Madras, for example, out of 1,030,364 ryots paying direct to Government, not more than 3,000, at the utmost, we should say, pay Rs. 400 or upwards a-year; and these only will be amenable to the tax. In the absence of exact statistics we will estimate these 3,000 to pay on an average Rs. 800 each, a most liberal estimate. This gives us a sum of twenty-four lakhs of rupees; which sum is not one-thirtieth of the total amount of land revenue. In revising the Englishman's estimate, therefore, we shall place the total amount of ryotee taxable income at just one-sixth of the amount set down by the Englishman, i. e., at one million instead of six; and this, it is obvious, is a very liberal valuation. The Englishman has given no estimate for house-rents. We will add a million for those; now our revised estimate will then stand as follows:—

	Taxable Income.	Tax.
Sched. 1. Profits by Landlords	£9,000,000	£270,000
Do. by Ryots	1,000,000	30,000
Do. on houses	1,000,000	30,000
2. Trades and Professions	6,500,000	195,000
3. Public Funds	3,500,000	105,000
4. Civil and Military Salaries	5,000,000	150,000
	£26,000,000	£780,000

Thus, chiefly by giving to the income derived from trades and professions the same proportion to the entire income which it bears in England, we have lowered the Englishman's estimate by one-half; and we believe we are far nearer the mark than he. Observe, too, that the profits by landlords, in the permanently assessed provinces, are estimated at nine millions by the Englishman; and that only so much of this nine millions is taxable as consists of incomes at and above 200 rupees a month.

The means of collecting a great part of the tax will be the same as those which are adopted in England. There are, however, some differences. The tax upon the income of the landlord is, in England, paid by the tenant on the actual rent; and the receipt for it is taken by the landlord as part payment of the rent. There is, therefore, no room here for evasion or fraud. In India the tax on the income of the landlord is paid direct by the landlord himself. This provision has been, doubtless, made in consequence of the large number of tenants in this country; there often being fifty or more tenants on a property yielding 1,000 rupees a year. But the landlord's opportunity for fraud is destroyed by the evidence given in the returns which will have to be furnished by the renter, whether of houses or lands. Leases, if necessary, may be called for by the assessor from the landlord, as well as from the tenant. The duties on the profits of the ryots are to be computed in the same manner as are those on the profits of the farmers in England, that is, not on any return, but according to a fixed portion of the rent or kist. There is, therefore, no room for fraud here. Thus we see that the whole of the tax collected under schedule 1, amounting to £330,000, will not be liable to this taint.

It is under schedule 2 that there will be room for that demoralising system of fraud and evasion that is so complained of in England. This schedule, as we have seen, embraces all the profits upon trades and professions, and on those things which are not specified in the other schedules. Here, then, we have every opportunity for fraud; and here will be concentrated every motive which men may have for giving fraudulent returns.

The amount of tax to be collected under this schedule is only £105,000, or one-fourth of the whole, which, bear always in mind, is the same proportion as is borne to the entire income-tax by the duty on trades and professions in England.

The amount collected under schedule 3, or £105,000, will be free from even the chance of fraud. It is the tax accruing from the dividends upon the public funds, and will be collected as these dividends become due by the officers entrusted with the payment of interest.

The same may be said of the tax collected under schedule 4 upon public salaries, military and civil. This will be stopped at its source by the officers by whom the salaries are payable. The amount of this portion of the tax we place at £150,000.

Thus we see that out of the total estimated amount of the tax, or £780,000, only £195,000, or one-fourth of the whole, will be peculiarly liable to be attended by fraud in the collection: and the fact may be exultingly paraded by those who are favourable to the new imposition. It must be remembered, however, that, although the amount, viz., £195,000, is comparatively small, it is on the whole six millions of taxable income that the returns will be made. We are perfectly aware that there will be those who will laugh to scorn our "ridiculously small" estimate of six millions as the total amount of the taxable income of trades and professions in all India; nevertheless, it is incumbent on those who laugh to show, in the absence of detailed and definite information, why this portion of the tax should, in an almost purely agricultural country like India, bear a larger proportion to the whole than it does in the greatest trading nation in the world.—Indian Statesman.

A ROMANCE OF THE REBELLION.

The mutinies and massacres of 1857 gave rise to not a few facts which time proved to be baseless, to many a story which afterwards turned out apocryphal. The naked truth was horrible enough; the garniture of fancy and the extravagance of exaggeration only made it less terrible. Prominent among the events which the poet decked out in verse, with which the penny novelist fed the prurient tastes of the London mob, which the low dramatist set forth as "spectacles" in the cheap theatre, were the incident of the Highland Girl in Lucknow hearing the pipes of the relieving force, the oath of the 78th at the Cawnpore Well, and the heroic fate of Emily Wheeler. The first two were long ago exploded, over the last has hung a cloud of doubt and mystery, in the gloom of which the real facts have been magnified into gigantic proportions. Some months ago it was roundly asserted that she was still living with the sower who was said to have carried her off, and that she wished to hide her sorrows and her shame alike in oblivion. If it was not unlikely that any Christian girl would deliberately prefer such debasement, it was most certain that no Christian officer, no Government such as ours, would permit her captor to remain unpunished, or cease energetic efforts to induce her to return to civilisation. Obscurity was a right desire, but a swinish rebel's hut in a native State was not the place for a Christian's broken heart. We are now able to give all the facts which will probably ever be known as to the fate of Emily Wheeler.

Was a daughter of General Wheeler, was any Christian lady carried off by a sowar after the massacre at the Cawnpore Ghat? So far as the depositions taken by Col. Williams on the spot can be trusted, the answer must be decidedly in the affirmative. Twelve witnesses, Christian, Mussulman and Hindoo, testify to the fact. Perma Nund, General Wheeler's jemadar, was shut up in the entrenchment with the others. After describing the life there and the capitulation, he says:—the General, his lady and two daughters proceeded on an elephant to the Ghat on the fatal morning. With Captains Thompson and Delafosse, four servants and others, they embarked, and pushed off unhurt to gunshot distance from the spot. The boat was fired into, evidently from the other side. One of the General's daughters jumped out with Captains Dalafosse and Thompson, and the servants. The jemadar says, "I saw a cavalry sowar take Miss Wheeler out of the Nulla." William Clarke, a musician, saw two sowars carrying off a lady on horseback. "She wore a chintz gown, which appeared to be wet; she seemed to be eighteen or nineteen years of age." From the evidence she appears to have been carried off to Futtehgurh. There W. T. DeCruze, a musician, "saw one lady with the troopers." The matter became noised abroad among the other rebels, and he deserted with her. At the same place the drummer Fitchett saw her. He was told by the sepoy that the Nana had ordered her captor to give her up, and he accordingly decamped. He afterwards heard that she had destroyed herself. Elahee Buksh, a faithful sepoy of the 56th N.I., who was in the intrenchments, when a prisoner, "saw a sowar carrying a lady on a horse; she had on a green dress, her legs were hanging over one side of the horse and the sowar held her with one arm." He was told it was General Wheeler's youngest daughter, and afterwards heard that she had killed the sowar and thrown herself into a well. Such was the report current among the sepoys. Several testify to the fact that the sowar's name was Nizam Ali Khan, Pathan, resident of Rampore. A fellow trooper thus describes him:—"age twenty-two or twenty-three years, a fair complexion, height about five feet seven inches, long nose, dark eyes, wears a beard and small moustache." Finally, Manuck, a spy who was sent by Colonel Williams to discover the sowar, traced him to Rampore, and was there told by a jemadar of the Nawab's troops that he had seen him "with a young lady, the daughter of a gentleman, with him; she was disguised in native clothes. Ali Khan shortly afterwards left Rampore for the rebel camp at Toolseepore." Such were all the facts elicited by Colonel Williams.

Major Hervey, Thuggee and Dacoity Superintendent, Bombay, took up the scent. He employed Mahomed Buksh, a rebel whose guilt was too great to allow him to hope for mercy even under the royal proclamation. To secure his fidelity, the man's son, equally guilty with himself, was kept as a hostage. The spy bound himself by the most solemn of native oaths, and by the life he believed would else be forfeited, to the faithful performance of his perilous mission. He was a native also of Rampore. His route to the rebel camp, then in Nepal, lay through the entire length of our watchful frontier outposts. He ran many dangers, and had to assume various disguises. Step by step he traced his way, communicating with Major Hervey from several places. Every arrangement was made to secure Miss Wheeler's escape in the event of her being discovered. But at each step the truth became evident that she had been brutally murdered, and that her captor had fallen in the Bootwal engagement. We give the spy's deposition:—

"I went in the first place to Rampore where I made very close inquiries regarding the sowar whom I was to trace out, but I could get no tidings of him. I learnt, however, that at the request of Mr. Wilson, the Nawab of Rampore had rased the man's house to the ground. I then proceeded in search of him into the districts round about Rampore. I went to a place in that province called Belaspore, where I put up at the 'Surrai.' A man, a Persian, who had been Captain Wheeler's servant, happened to alight there also. At night we got into conversation with each other, and he then told me that the sowar who carried away General Wheeler's daughter had murdered her and thrown her into a well. I went on to Shahagpur, where, too, I made inquiries. There I was informed that a man named Nizam Ali Khan, a Resaldar, was killed in the battle at Toolseepore. On this I sent Major Hervey an intimation by post from Bareilly, and informed him that this name corresponded with that of the sowar after whom I had been deputed by him. I then went on to Phillibheet, where I learnt that some of the enemy arrested at one of the outposts as they were escaping from the fight at Bootwal, had, when they were interrogated about the man Nizam Ali Khan, declared that he had acted very wickedly. They said he had also been accompanied (from Cawnpore,) by his wife and sister; but that on some quarrel taking place among them all one night, his wife became estranged from him, and that thereupon he went and killed the young lady in the jungle and cast her body into a dry well. Such I heard was the account they gave of him, and that they had also declared that he perished soon after in the battle at Bootwal in a very miserable manner ('burree khurabee ke sath'). All this every one swore to; so that I thereupon left and turned my way back towards Jubbulpore, where now I have arrived.

"I know nothing more. I made all the inquiries I could, acting up to my promises on the subject. If the man had been still alive, I would have gone on in my search for him. The jungle in which the young lady was slain was in the Koothar district (Kuttao?). My informants also said that it was not known where the wife and sister had gone to, but that as for the man himself, he had been killed at Bootwal."

To the native mind the expression translated in the above "in a very miserable manner," conveys the idea of something shocking and disgusting. The phrase would be used of such deaths as those of Sulla or Herod. The myth of the well is thus accounted for, and another illustration afforded of the saying that truth is stranger than fiction.

In the circumstances we must accept the above as generally conclusive regarding the fate of Emily Wheeler. The speculations which it suggests we leave to our readers. The troopers of the 2nd cavalry carried off four ladies and three musicians' wives from the massacre at the Ghat, but all, with the exception of Emily Wheeler, were delivered up to the Nana, and placed in confinement with the 130 victims who afterwards perished. We know that more than one Christian woman was altogether carried off by rebels,—but the victims were so-called Portuguese, the families of almost natives. We know that one such refused to return with a large force which had been sent out to rescue her after the siege of Delhi. But we have no reason to believe that any European lady, that any officer's or soldier's wife, sister or daughter, is still experiencing the tender mercies of the heathen, which are cruel.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE CENTRAL INDIA TRANSPORT TRAIN, we are informed, has proved a loss to Government of Rs. 1,18,624 per annum. The expenditure was Rs. 3,03,340. The receipts from private traffic Rs. 33,998, and for carriage of Government stores Rs. 1,50,727. Total receipts, Rs. 1,84,725. Under these circumstances the Governor-general has ordered that the Director-general of Post-offices take over charge of the Bullock train from the political agent of Indore at as early a date as he possibly can.

MR. RAVENSHAW, BENGAL C. S., having written in a most disrespectful manner to Mr. Davidson, the Commissioner of Dacca, the Lieutenant-governor brought the matter to the notice of the Supreme Government, enlarging on the necessity of supporting the authority of the commissioners of revenue, whose duty it was to report on the conduct of their subordinates, and who could not be expected to uphold the discipline required by their office if not properly supported. The Lieutenant-governor was of opinion that the displeasure of Government should be expressed at once, as Mr. Ravenshaw had applied for, and even obtained, his furlough leave to Europe. The Supreme Government in reply, it is stated, has suspended his furlough leave, pending further consideration of this case.

THE WUZEREES EXPEDITION.—We (Lahore Chronicle) are now in a position to give our readers a connected account of General Chamberlain's operations against the Mahsood Wuzerees to the end of April. The hills were entered on the 17th, and there was some notion that the enemy would defend the Junis Tangah; but they thought better of it, and retired, although they had thrown a strong breastwork across the whole breadth of the Tam Durra. On the 18th the General advanced to Kot Shingee, twenty-one miles within the hills, and the Mahsoods again making no fight, the place was burnt, and more cattle captured. On the 19th the force halted at Polloseen. On the 20th Colonel Lumsden was left with 1,600 infantry, 100 sabres, and four field guns in position; whilst General Chamberlain made a flank movement in a westerly direction through the difficult Shahoor defile, with the double object of surveying that country and punishing the Shingee, Navakhail, and Mullikehye tribes, for their raids along the Tonk border. The cultivation, however, turned out to be so rich as to render its entire destruction troublesome and unnecessary! Hence only that belonging to the most mischievous communities was laid waste. On the 20th, as the force went through the Shahoor Pass, it was fired on, and a horse belonging to the irregular levies was killed; but subsequently the advance guard came upon the rear of the Wuzerees and killed several, having themselves three men and four horses wounded. Major Taylor offered to allow the Wuzerees to take away the dead bodies which had been brought into camp, but owing probably to distrust, advantage was not taken of the offer. After this brush on the 20th the halt was at Hydnee Kutch, the western mouth of the Pass. On the 21st Kot Shunhoor was burnt, and the force halted at Tooran Cheera: on the 22nd at Barwund, under the Koondegurh mountain; on the 23rd at Jungee Khan's fort. Jungee Khan was the Mullik who headed the movement on Tak, and fell in the skirmish in which Resaldar Saadut Khan so much distinguished himself. His post, situated at the head of the Burwund valley on a high scarp hill, and consisting of a centre keep with four towers and good stone walls, was razed to the ground, its village close at hand, belonging to a tribe not guilty of plundering, was spared, whilst some cultivation in the neighbourhood, appertaining to the aggressive Nava Khail tribe, was trampled down, when the troops could eat no more. The 24th and 25th were spent on the march to rejoin Colonel Lumsden, which was effected on the 26th. How it fared with Colonel Lumsden's force has in a former issue already been narrated. His camp was attacked on the morning of the 23rd by some three or four thousand Wuzerees, overwhelming the pickets. About 500 men made their way to the camp, and did much mischief near the godown, where the mounted levies were placed, amongst the camp followers and camels. The main body kept up a matchlock fire from the ridge. But the guides and Goorkhas speedily cleared them out. Ninety-two bodies were left on the ground, and forty of those which fell in the pursuit were found on the day following. Even the Wuzerees admit that many of their best men were killed. Our own loss, particularly amongst the levies and camp followers, was also severe, and a valuable officer, the Tehsildar of Bunnoo, was amongst the slain. From the nature of the case the intelligence to be had is meagre: the tribe is strong and united, and the Buttunees, who are employed as spies, are known, and hoodwinked by the Mulliks. A force must consequently depend almost entirely on its own strength and vigilance; and the chastisement administered in the present instance will make the Mahsoods think twice before they attempt another chapao. From the 26th to the end of the month the united force remained halted at Gulrung Kot, after which the forward movement on Kaneegram was undertaken. The damage done to the Wuzerees by the presence of the force is rated at about Rs. 600 a day, but collaterally it must amount to much more.—Telegram from Major Taylor, dated May 4, to Secretary to Government Punjab:—"The Mahsoods held the Barrah Pass in force this morning. They had rows of strong Tangas (?) on the heights, and a tremendous abatis of stones and poplar trees across the Dera. General Chamberlain attacked the pass about ten a.m., and in two hours the heights were cleared, and the force marched through the Bungeewalla. The Wuzerees on the heights on the right fought bravely. We had one officer, Lieutenant Ayton (doing duty with 5th Punjab Infantry), and twenty-eight men killed and twenty-six wounded. The Wuzerees have suffered severely; they left thirty-two bodies on the ground at the point of the chief struggle, and must have had many more killed and wounded in other places. The Wuzerees were from six to seven thousand strong; they were completely driven from the pass, and retreated in two bodies to the east and west. We are encamped two miles on the Karneegoonah side of the pass."

NAWAB SOHRAB JUNG.—The serious attention of Government has been at last attracted to the extraordinary case of Nawab Sohrab Jung and the other heirs of the celebrated Nawab Munerood-dowlah. Some months ago we (Englishman) alluded to this case as one deserving consideration. The heirs of the late Nawab are living in Patna with stipends scarcely sufficient to keep soul and body together, while the Government enjoys their fine estates, which were made over to the State to be managed as a trust, and, to speak plainly, bagged by the honourable trustees. These are the acts which create disaffection, and if Sir Chas. Trevelyan would hunt up, and remonstrate against acts of robbery and spoliation like this, instead of opposing reasonable measures of taxation, he would be worth listening to. We shall shortly give the particulars of this case, and reveal some curious circumstances connected with it. A full report of the circumstances has now been peremptorily called for from the Commissioner of Patna, and there are distant signs that justice may yet be done. We recommend a Bill of Discovery in the Supreme Court, which would soon bring the Government to its senses.

JHANSI, May 4.—A Mr. Fuller, a European possessed of some property, was lately transferred from Mote (distant some twenty-five miles from this, where he held the position of the Tehseeldar), to the Tehseeldarship of Jhansi. The citizens of Jhansi not appreciating the change, did all in their power to make the place too hot for Mr. Fuller, and actually in many instances his own underlings, in the shape of Kotwal chupprassees, &c., refused to carry out his orders. On Sunday Mr. Fuller's chupprassees, headed by Naib Tehseeldar entered Mr. Fuller's house, rushed on him, got him down while the Naib Tehseeldar well licked him with his shoe, and the chupprassees, his own chupprassees (the civil chupprassees of the city) abused him right well, and took the opportunity of walking off with the money under Mr. Fuller's charge. The Naib Tehseeldar and the Government "special" then tied his hands with a rope, and accompanied by a mob of some three or four hundred people, hauled him about the city with uncovered head, and we believe (though we won't vouch for it) undressed. In this position, accompanied by his own august body of responsible and trustworthy dependents, who were heaping all kinds of abuse upon him, Mr. Fuller was met and rescued by a European officer, and conveyed home in his buggy. For days his life was despaired of. He was nearly demented. All kinds of inquiries and investigations that the endeavours of the most trustworthy and truthful detectives can accomplish are being put in force to carry out the utmost rigour of the law! The Naib Tehseeldar will most likely get 14 years' imprisonment, and the chupprassees return to their duty to prepare for another tussle with the next European Tehseeldar. The deep plot of these cowardly ruffians appears to have been the following:—Mr. Fuller having boxed a chupprassees' head for down-right insolence, or refusal to obey his orders, they planned to bring him before the magistrate with a complaint that he was madly drunk, and suffering from delirium tremens, trusting to this plan to get him turned out. It is naturally to be inferred that once down on the ground, the shoe beating on the part of the Tehseeldar, and abuse and licking on the part of the chupprassees was a species of lark that became irresistible! This is Jhansi of 1860, and the chupprassees brigands of Bundelcund. Now anyone with the least perception, knowing how cordially all the people of this part hate us, would have endeavoured to have found a body of chupprassees of any other class than the men of the city itself, but here you have doubtless the participators in the Jhansi massacre, the paid servants of the State and the public castigators of the Civil functionaries.

Have we no Seikhs, no Pathans, not one man of any other nation or creed, but that of Hindooism, on whom can be bestowed the mighty dignity of chupprassees that we must take the men of Jhansi to coerce the men of Jhansi? It is obvious, that if they now get a native Tehseeldar after this, they will have accomplished all they wish for. We should recommend Resaldar Sahadut Khan, 5th Punjab light cavalry, for the post, with 150 Wuzerees armed with a good cat, and one Moonshiee to keep the official ledgers.—Delhi Gazette.

THE PUNJAB.—I must say that matters are not going on so favourably as I had hoped regarding the income-tax. There are sinister influences at work to counteract the wise determination of Government to make the grounds on which the necessity for such taxation rests fully known. The proclamations on the subject are wilfully misconstrued and misrepresented, and nothing is left undone by the un-friends of the English to excite the dissatisfaction that naturally rests in certain quarters as being called upon to pay the piper to whose music they say they have not danced. I am not at all sorry, therefore, at the countenance given to a movement at this place for the formation of a rifle corps (volunteer), which has been actively taken up, and which, I trust, will be followed out in every other station throughout the country. Let it be known that every European in the country is fully prepared to meet any hostile demonstration with arms in his hands, and I feel assured that there will be a sensible subsidence of that feeling that every now and then comes uppermost in the mind of the native population, and which must be repressed for their good and for our safety. I believe that the government of these provinces is personally not at all satisfied with the aspect of things, and fully alive to the necessity of being prepared for any emergency that may arise. I do not mean to say that the agricultural portion, and they are the bulk of the people, are disaffected, but I do believe there are many classes, amongst the Mahomedans especially, who would do all they could to expel us from their fancied inheritance of which they consider we have deprived them. Being thus forewarned we may look upon ourselves as forearmed, and, therefore, in a much better position than when the storm burst upon us in May, 1857. It was owing to this uneasiness that Sir Robert Montgomery, who, by-the-bye, has gone off to his mountain retreat of Muree, impressed on the Rajah of Puteala that the season was much too far advanced for him to visit the Jumoo territories, that he would suffer much from the heat, and that it would be much more to the benefit of his health if he returned at once to his own possessions. The Rajah, like a sensible man, took the hint, left us the day before yesterday, and, on reaching Shallimar, his first encamping-ground, started off by dakh, and is by this once more safe within the palace walls of his ancestral possessions. His people, of course, follow at leisure. I do not know whether any inquiry has been made as to the permission, so unwisely given, to a portion of his escort to enter the busy town armed, but there is no doubt it was a most injudicious permission, that might have led to disastrous results. The Rajah of Jumoo, or, as he is now officially styled, the Maharajah of Kashmere is much disgusted at his brother Rajah not visiting him after all the great preparations he had made to do him honour, and is going or has gone off in the sulks to Kashmere, where he will no doubt revenge himself by taking the cost of his expedition out of the unfortunates of that miserable valley. You may see sundry laudatory paragraphs in Our Paper regarding the improvements contemplated by this Maharajah. I do believe he is more desirous than his father to do something towards relieving the people, but he is surrounded, like him of Kupoor-thulla, by such a frightful set of leeches, who tell him that everything he attempts which his father did not do is a reflection on his paternal progenitor, that there is not much hope of him, and what small spirit of enterprise he has shown is marred in the carrying out of his plans by an unprincipled fellow of the name of Dewan Chund, who was once printer and publisher of a low paper at Sealkote, and who knows more about the said laudatory paragraphs than he would like to own. He suggests sundry plans, obtains money to carry them out, fails and disgusts his master, only to take him in again.—Lahore Correspondent of the Englishman.

THE RAJA OF AMETHEE in Benares has been pardoned under the Royal amnesty, and the sums realised from the sale of his property are to be refunded. The Raja confessed his guilt, "ordered himself lowly and reverently to his masters," and falsified the proverb, "confess and be hanged."

TO THE MEMORY OF WILLIAM PEEL.

His name will ever be dear to the British inhabitants of India, to whose succour he came in the hour of need, and for whom he risked and gave his life. He was one of England's most devoted sons, and with all the talents of a brave and skilful sailor he combined the virtues of a humble, sincere Christian. This stone is erected over his remains by his military friends in India, and several of the inhabitants of Calcutta. Captain Sir William Peel, R.N., K.C.B., was born in Stanhope-street, Mayfair, on the 2nd November, 1824, and died at Cawnpore on the 27th April, 1858.

SIMLA, May 4.—Yesterday Lord Canning held his durbar at "Barnes Court," the accommodation afforded in the one, and only room of any size in the house, was very scanty. The chieftains, together, according to custom, with their heirs or nearest of kin, and the Wuzerees of such States as are large enough to need the assistance of a Prime Minister, were admitted. A guard of honour from the Nusseeree Battalion was in attendance, as also the Governor-general's band, but there were no salutes. The Governor-general occupied a raised platform at the head of the room, Mr. Beadon being on his right hand, and his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief on his left. The several chieftains of higher rank were separately introduced by Lord W. M. Hay, the deputy commissioner, and superintendent of these hills, to Mr. Beadon, who in turn presented them to Lord Canning—the minor chiefs were introduced to the Under Secretary, Mr. Aitchison, and by him to the Governor-general. The Rajahs of Keonthul, Surmoor, Khiloor, Hindoor, and Bussbir; and Ranahs of Bhagul, Joobul, Bhujee, Bulsun, Kaom-harsain, Dhamee, and Koothee, were the principal personages. Lord Canning did not make any long speeches, as he has done elsewhere; he wasted not a single syllable in saying that he would "have peace," for happily in these hills we have had peace. While the rest of India was surging with rebellion and anarchy, these States remained friendly, loyal and devotedly attached to the Government, showing the greatest zeal in assisting the British cause to the utmost of their ability, and giving proofs of their attachment by many individual acts of kindness to Europeans. Lord Canning simply complimented the Rajahs of Keonthul, Surmoor, and Kihloor, more particularly the first; while "he hoped to hear better accounts of Bussbir." Khilluts were distributed to, and nuzzurs presented by each chief, the value of the latter in almost every instance outweighing that of the former. It was customary formerly to present a portion of the nuzzur in coin, but the bulk was in the shape of horses, arms, cloths of gold, shawls, jewels, &c.—which were afterwards sold by public auction, the proceeds going into the Government treasury; but on this occasion it was distinctly intimated that the nuzzurs were to be in gold mohurs, the amount expected from each being stated on their cards of admission, varying from one to thirty gold mohurs.

—May 7.—A Royal salute at sunrise this morning announced the departure of Lord Canning, Viceroy and Governor-general of India. The Commander-in-Chief follows to-morrow. Lady Canning, accompanied by Lord William Hay, deputy commissioner of Simla, leaves on the 21st for Chini, and will proceed via Gurlwall to Mussoorie. The Rajah of Puteealla paid a visit of ceremony to the Viceroy on Saturday afternoon. The Rajahs of Jheend and Naba are also here.—Delhi Gazette.

ALLAHABAD, May 15.—The Governor-general and suite arrived here late last night, and took up his quarters at Government House. He leaves at 5 p.m. this evening. He travels in a light mail-cart, attended by two vans, one containing provisions for the way, the other official papers, and so forth, servants and attendants forming stowage. The Commander-in-Chief is expected by the early train to-morrow morning; he will leave again in the evening. Both great men will make the day spent at Allahabad one of rest. The people here are all perfectly satisfied with both the income-tax and the currency measure of Mr. Wilson, their only surprise is at the extreme moderation of the former. This feeling I am satisfied was nearly universal over India until the Madras minute was published. The tax-payers would never have found out that they were aggrieved unless their grievances had been pointed out to them. Why did not the Madras and Bombay Governments, before pointing out what could be done by retrenchment, show examples of economy? The extravagance of the two is literally shameless. Besides the Rs. 120,000 a-year each Governor draws as salary, the Parliamentary accounts show that they cost the State about as much more in "establishments" and personal charges. Two and a-quarter lacs annually is the interest on half-a-million—one-twelfth of the deficit desired to be made good expended in sheer personal extravagance by a couple of gentlemen who desire to lighten the burdens of the people by reductions! "Be ye fed—be ye clothed!" say they, but not a mouthful or rag do they contribute of their abundance to assist the wretched. The opposition of Bombay to the income-tax is the richest thing in the world. When the English obtained possession of Bombay, just two centuries ago, the entire value of the property of the island was £2,800—it is now, solely through British protection, worth above five millions sterling. The seaborne commerce alone is worth thirty millions in money, having doubled in a quarter of a century! The Peishwa, with his Mahratta horse, would have raised three millions sterling in the island in the course of a forenoon—Napoleon or the Czar would do it now were India in their hands. Another of the Cawnpore murderers has been sent to his account. Jwala Persad was hanged on the morning of the 3rd, at the scene of his crimes. He was escorted from jail by a detail of the Cawnpore police, under the Adjutant, as far as the gallows, where a European guard awaited him. He denied his guilt to the last, and on being asked what was the use of speaking falsely when about to die, said this was no "faida" now, and no "faida" then, alluding to 1857. He died quite unconcernedly, and "appeared not to care a straw in mounting the gallows." A large concourse of spectators was on the ground.—Delhi Gazette.

KISHNAGHUR, May 11.—Since I last wrote to you we have had plentiful showers, and thanks to Mr. Herschel's mode of carrying out the new law framed for the protection of the Indigo crop, scarcely anything but rice has been sown in a great many of the principal concerns in this district. The ryots are in great spirits at the success of their infamous conduct, but they need not halloo till they are out of the wood, and it remains to be proved whether Mr. Herschel has been their friend or foe in encouraging them in their unprincipled acts. The second act of the play is about to begin, and we shall see how they like the decrees for damages, which must be given in spite of all Mr. Herschel can do for them. To the injured planter, Durkhasts will now pour in, not in hundreds but in thousands; the jail, now over-crowded, can never hold a tenth part of the convicted; the laugh will soon be on the other side, and instead of the blessings Mr. Herschel expects, he will have the curses of deluded ryots. Contrast Jessore with the Kishnaghur district, and mark the difference; scarcely 18 men have been sent to prison by the magistrates of the former, and at least 800 by the latter, which might easily have been avoided by a little firmness and consistency of conduct. To this has to be added the utter ruin now hanging over the heads of the ryots whom Mr. Herschel encouraged to break their engagements. He has said that his work is now at an end; poor young man, it is only beginning; he has been obliged, much against his will, to decree for damages some twenty cases. I know of 780 that will be before him immediately from one concern, and that is one that has sown more Indigo than most in the district. What may he not expect from those who have sown rice almost entirely! All business in the collector's office is at a standstill, and hundreds are waiting impatiently till Mr. Herschel appears in the character of collector, which he has not as yet had time to do. There is work enough in the Foujdary for twenty magistrates, and that will be increased to an enormous extent when the cases for damages come in. Verily the Government have not prepared a bed of roses either for the magistrate or the poor ryots they have led astray. I wonder if Mr. Grant has turned his attention to the revenue of this district, and how it is being affected by the present state of affairs. How are Zemindars to pay Government when they cannot collect their rents from the ryots, who are in many places in undisturbed possession of the villages, and drive out planter, talookdars, and servants alike?—Englishman.

SUBAHNDAR KURHEE RAM and a rebel Sepoy of the late 17th Regiment have been apprehended by the exertions of the District Superintendent of Police. Both these mutineers have eluded many attempts made to capture them. Having obtained information of their whereabouts from some spies, the Superintendent of Police sent out a party of sowars in search, who after much hard riding came to the village where the two rebels had taken refuge, and captured them. They are accused of having been principals in the murder of some officers of the 22nd Native Infantry, stationed at the time of the mutiny at Fyzabad. The prisoners will be forwarded to Captain T. Chamberlaine, of the Thuggee Department, for trial. Another man, Madho, the rebel who fired at Captain Hutchinson and murdered Colonel Goldney, is still at large.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN D. A. CHASE.—It is with regret we have to announce the death of Captain D. A. Chase, of the 64th regiment of Bengal N.I., and lately appointed to officiate as assistant commissioner at Henzadah. The lamented gentleman had just returned to India from a sick furlough to Europe, and on reaching his new station, not feeling sufficiently well, was obliged to leave again for Bengal. On the passage up in the steamer Burmah to Calcutta the lamented gentleman's illness increased to such a degree as to produce temporary insanity. He took some medicine, which, we have been informed, was probably laudanum. He retired to sleep, and never woke again. He was found dead in his cabin. Captain Chase was highly esteemed by many personal friends. He was considered a very active civil officer, having held appointments in the Arracan and Tenasserim provinces. He was favourably known as the author of a very useful little work, entitled "Chase's Anglo-Burmese Handbook," which had quite a rapid sale immediately after its publication. He leaves a widow and three children, who are now in England, to mourn his untimely end.—Maulmain Times, April 26.

M. A. SCHLAGEINTWEIT.—We (Lahore Chronicle) are happy to have it in our power to state that two servants of the late Mons. A. Schlageintweit (Mahomed Ameer and Morad by name), have succeeded in discovering the remains of their unfortunate master, besides all the valuables which belonged to him. They communicated the fact to the Deputy Commissioner of Kangra, and have been told in consequence, that if on the opening of the passes in the course of this month they bring in the remains of the murdered Savant and all his valuables, they will receive a bonus of Rs. 200 each, this being in the opinion of the Governor-general the smallest sum that should be given them.

COLONEL HAYTHORNE has been appointed Adjutant-general of her Majesty's forces in India, superseding Colonels Greathed and Denison, the deputies at Madras and Bombay. It is a Horse Guards appointment. Colonel Haythorne is on the Staff of the China force.

MISCELLANEOUS.

"WASTE SILK."—A doubt having arisen as to whether the material known as silk chusum is included with raw silk in the free list of export duties, the Supreme Government, on the 21st of last April, observed as follows:—Silk chusum is represented to be the exterior rough coating of the cocoon, what is called in England "waste silk," or that part which is first wound off the cocoons, or which is taken from imperfect cocoons that have been eaten through by the worm and cannot be wound off. It is clearly, therefore, the same article as silk, only of an inferior quality, and there appears no reason why it should not be included with raw silk in the free list. The necessary instructions have been given to the Customs' authorities to include the article referred to among the free exports.

THE MADRAS MINUTE.—We can assure the Bombay Times, on authority which cannot be doubted, that the minute was sent by the writer of it to Mr. Forbes and to other members of the Council. The moment this became known, a certain member of the legislature most peremptorily directed Mr. Forbes to suppress it, and keep its very existence a secret. The consternation excited in certain of the members can scarcely be conceived. Two indignant and astute legislators determined to checkmate the author of the minute by treating his production with pretended contempt; but Sir Charles is not easily checkmated. He knew with whom he had to deal. He had experienced their insolent contumely when he reclaimed against the licence bill, and for anything we know to the contrary, may have learned their determination in regard to his second remonstrance; but however this may be, certain it is that the consternation of our law-makers was speedily changed to rage when they found that the paper of which they intended to dispose so quietly was given to India in the columns of this journal. "Our precautions were useless; it is published in full in the Madras Times, which has just come in," wrote one of our legislators to another, who doubtless had united with him in applauding Mr. Wilson's proposal to deal frankly henceforth with the Indian public. French frankness, perhaps, he meant. It is not very like the British quality so named, to do everything possible to stifle discussion and censure any attempt to give the people more than one side of a question. Supposing Mr. Wilson to be satisfied of the justice and propriety of his scheme, we can only suppose him a disbeliever in the power of truth, when we find him doing his utmost to introduce Parisian fashions, and silence all who dare to dissent from him.—Times and Spectator.

MR. SHUBRICK'S COTTON.—The Chamber of Commerce has written to Government in reply to a communication forwarding samples of the Egyptian cotton grown in Chingleput by Mr. Shubrick. It considers the sample excellent in its original colour, but much stained in picking; the staple is strong, but not of much length; it is undoubtedly a valuable description of cotton, but for want of any means of comparison with similar kinds, the Chamber is unable to quote its market value in this country. Mr. Nelson has requested that the thanks of the Chamber may be conveyed to Mr. Shubrick for his exertions in carrying out the experiments.

SIR MARK CUBBON has, at the particular request of the Governor-general, from whom he has received a very handsome letter, consented, for the present, to continue in charge of Mysore.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PERSIAN CONSUL.—The Shah of Persia having taken into consideration that numbers of his subjects have not only domiciled themselves in Bombay, but that its port attracts numerous traders of his dominions, who have no proper representative of their country, has deemed it advisable that a Persian Consulate should be established in Bombay, to guard and watch over the interests of his subjects, and with this end in view has entered into negotiations with the British Government for the recognition of a Persian Consul in Bombay.

MR. H. C. BOATE, formerly a surgeon in the Inniskilling dragoons, and who has for some time past enjoyed extensive practice as a medical man in Bombay, has been committed to the criminal sessions on a charge of cruelly beating Captain Gillett, of the Preventive Service. Captain Gillett is an old, nearly blind, helpless man, while Boate is young, vigorous, and athletic; and the assault committed seems to have been of the most brutal and cowardly character. The provocation was an insulting expression used by Captain Gillett as to Mr. Boate's leaving the army to turn "lolliboy" in Bombay; but Boate himself declares that he quarrelled with Gillett some time ago because the latter had seduced one of his sisters, and that this was rankling in his mind when he was still further exasperated by the remark above quoted. It is right to add that this story is not only strenuously contradicted by Miss Boate and Captain Gillett, but is in itself highly improbable.

A TIGER IN SURAT.—On Sunday morning last, May 21, about nine o'clock, a middle sized tiger made its appearance in the town of Surat, and frightened the whole of the district called Nanpoora from its propriety. Indeed, at first nobody believed that a tiger could ever venture into so thickly peopled a quarter of the city. How it came there is still uncertain, but it seems probable that the animal swam across from the opposite side of the river, and ambushed itself in the Dutch Bunder. It was first seen in the compound of a Parsee's house in Nanpoora, whence it was driven by the shouts and noise of the inmates into the adjoining shed. By this time people gathered round it in numbers. It then made a bold rush on the crowd; but there was a bamboo wall intervening, which it could not leap over. However, it made away through a hole in the wall, and secured itself in a narrow lane opposite. By this time information reached the European residents of the town, and Mr. Stewart, deputy commissioner of customs, N.D., and Lieutenant Rees, fort adjutant, were soon on the spot, closely followed by Mr. Bellasis, Mr. Pratt, Mr. Rogers, and others. Messrs. Rees and Stewart fired several shots at the brute and disabled it a little; but recovering itself, it made a desperate attack on the former gentleman, and threw him down. Mr. Rees turned on his back, and the animal got hold of his leg. Mr. Stewart then drove a couple of bullets into its chest. It sprang away, and attacked a poor Parsee woman, who, in the struggle to get loose, was severely scratched on most parts of her body. Mr. Rogers finally drove a dagger through the animal's neck, while the other two gentlemen continued firing. The tiger only became helpless after receiving no fewer than twelve balls. One of these ran through the lower part of its mouth, and appears to have told upon it most effectually. Had it not been for the European gentlemen, the brute would have made desperate havoc in the town. Mr. Rees has received one or two severe wounds, but none of them are dangerous. The poor Parsee woman was taken to her house in Mr. Bellasis's gharry, and the European doctor sent for, who is doing his best for his patient. It is expected she will recover. Mr. Bellasis, the magistrate, has shown her every attention. The carcass of the tiger was carried off by Mr. Stewart.—Bombay Gazette.

CHOLERA.—The ravages of the cholera at the Bore Ghaut continue with unabated violence, and we regret to hear that several more Europeans have fallen victims to this dire scourge within the last few days. The native labourers, panic-stricken by this awful visitation, are rapidly deserting the works, which are now progressing at a very slow pace. The contractors are using their best endeavours to allay the epidemic, by providing medical assistance and distributing medicines among the work-people.

THE TOWN MAJORITY of Bombay has not been abolished, as was believed. From the general orders published in the Government Gazette of the 17th May, it will be perceived that Major E. A. H. Bacon has been appointed to perform the duties of Town Major, in addition to those of Fort Adjutant.

GRANT OF SUNNUDS BY SIR HUGH ROSE.—The troops in garrison, consisting of 2nd Battalion Artillery, with three guns, a detachment of the 2nd European Regiment L.I., 2nd Grenadier Regiment N.I., 23rd Regiment N.I., and the Marine Battalion, paraded in drill order on the afternoon of the 14th May, at the Esplanade parade-ground, before his Excellency Sir Hugh Rose, who was accompanied by his staff. Two of the natives of the commissariat department, Mr. Nana Moroba, clerk in the commissariat, and Mr. Vizianung Moodliar, cattle contractor, whose excellent services with the Central India field force during the mutinies have been so well recognised by Government by the endowment of titles of "Rao Bahadur," and the granting of palanquin allowance, attended the parade with Captain Dunsterville to receive their sunnuds, which were presented to them on the ground by [the gallant "hero of Jhansi and Gwalior," with due acknowledgments of their praiseworthy services and conduct in always having kept the troops well provided with stores. A large concourse of spectators, both Europeans and natives, had assembled to witness the interesting spectacle, which passed off without much pomp and grandeur, but evidently to the satisfaction of all.

THE DURBAR.—His Excellency Sir George Russell Clerk held a durbar in the large room of the Town Hall at four o'clock on Saturday afternoon, May 19, at which the native officers belonging to corps in garrison and a large number of native gentlemen were present. A guard of honour of 100 rank and file from the 2nd Grenadiers and the 23rd Regiment respectively, were drawn up in front of the western entrance of the Town Hall with the regimental colours and bands. The native gentlemen having been introduced to his Excellency by Mr. Chief Secretary Anderson, Subadar Major Gunga Sing, of the 2nd Grenadier Regiment, was presented for distinguished conduct during the late mutiny, a gold watch, a khillut, and a shawl, besides a sunnud conferring on him the grant of a village yielding an annual revenue of Rs. 2,095. The Governor addressed the Subadar at some length. Other native officers were also presented to his Excellency by their commanding officers. Nose-gays and uttur of rose having been distributed, the durbar broke up within half an hour.]

READING THE PROCLAMATION APPOINTING THE HON. SIR GEORGE RUSSELL CLERK, K.C.B., GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY.—Pursuant to general orders of Saturday, 19th May, the troops in garrison, comprising the 2nd Battalion Artillery, a detachment of the 2nd European L.I., the 2nd Grenadier N.I., the 23rd Regiment N.I., and the Native Marine Battalion, assembled on the Esplanade parade ground on Monday evening at five o'clock. After the formation of the troops in contiguous quarter distance columns, the appointment of Sir George Clerk was read to the men of the respective corps by their commanding officers, and then interpreted to the native regiments by their senior interpreters. This being concluded, the troops formed in line, with the detachment of artillery on the extreme right, a salute of seventeen guns was fired, and the infantry wound up the affair with a feu de joie, and then marched past in review order, the several bands playing appropriate tunes. The spectacle attracted a vast concourse of the community of Bombay to the spot. The 2nd Europeans were paraded at Colaba at the same hour, when a similar ceremony was performed. The following appointments have been made on the personal staff of his Excellency the Governor, subject to the approval of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India:—Brevet Major J. C. Coley, 10th Regiment Bombay Native Infantry, to be Military Secretary. Captain J. Clerk, Rifle Brigade, and Captain A. Ellis, her Majesty's 33rd Regiment of foot, to be Aides-de-Camp. H.E. the Governor has been pleased to make the following appointment:—Mr. T. C. Hope, Bombay Civil Service, to be private secretary to H.E. the Governor.

CAPTAIN D. M. MURRAY, of H.M.'s 64th regiment, is appointed to act as aide-de-camp to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

SIR H. ROSE, accompanied by Captain Rose and Dr. Vaughan, left the Presidency for Calcutta in the China mail steamer Malabar, on the afternoon of the 16th May. A large number of civil, military, and naval officers were present at the pier to bid a hearty farewell to the gallant general, who embarked on board the steamer under the salute due to his rank. A military guard of honour was stationed at the pier. The following Bombay Government Gazette Extraordinary was issued the same evening:—General Order. Military Department. By H. E. the Hon. Governor in Council, Lieutenant-General Sir W. R. Mansfield, K.C.B., appointed under instructions from Her Majesty's Government, to be Commander-in-Chief in Bombay, in succession to H. E. Lieutenant-General Sir Hugh Rose, G.C.B., has this day assumed the command of the Bombay army on the departure of Sir Hugh Rose. By order of H. E. the Hon. the Governor in Council.—H. L. ANDERSON.—Acting Chief Secretary to Government. Bombay Castle, 16th May, 1860.

THE ELPHINSTONE DOCK.—The docks in Back Bay and the fine row of houses stretching from Colaba to Malabar Point, so often longed for by Europeans dwelling in gloomy bungalows, are likely to become a great fact. An application was made to Government on the 20th of April, for a provisional consent to that portion of the scheme which embodies the formation of a graving dock and the reclamation of about 200 acres of land on the Colaba side; the formal consent of Government has not yet been given, but we understand that the only objection is a slight interference with the projected harbour defences; this can be easily met and overcome by the projectors, and we may hope shortly to see the necessary capital subscribed, and the final consent of Government given to this important scheme.

THE GOVERNOR'S LEVEE.—Sir George Russell Clerk held a levee on the 18th May, in the Town Hall, at which about two hundred and fifty European gentlemen were introduced to the new Governor. His Excellency, on his arrival in the Town Hall at five o'clock, first turned his attention to the Government Central Museum, with the beauty and taste of all the arrangements in which he expressed himself highly gratified, and signified his intention of allowing it to remain in its present place. The visitors collected in the large hall until half-past five o'clock, and they then passed one by one into the presence of his Excellency. A detachment of native sepoy, and the Governor's mounted body guard, were posted at the front entrance of the Town Hall, and a large crowd of natives gathered on the public road to witness the tamasha. The business of the evening closed after six o'clock.

DR. JAMES VAUGHAN.—Sir Hugh Rose has appointed Dr. James Vaughan F.R.C.S. and F.R.G.S., to be his personal surgeon; and Bombay is thus destined to lose, for a time at least, one of her ablest physicians and most esteemed citizens. If his transference to the other side of India conduce to Dr. Vaughan's advancement, much as the Bombay community must deplore his loss, they will not repine at it. And the doctor himself may be very certain that he carries with him the unfeigned respect of those he leaves behind, their sincere esteem, and ardent wishes for his welfare. Speaking in their behalf, we claim for him a kind and cordial reception at Calcutta. And that the Ditchers may know what manner of man they are destined to have amongst them, we shall briefly detail his antecedents. Dr. Vaughan entered the service in 1842. After a short sojourn in India, in which he had his full share of that kicking about through the Mofussil which goes under the euphemistic title of "General Duty," Dr. Vaughan was attached to the Indian Navy. After sweltering some time in the Persian Gulf, and being duly roasted in the burning fiery furnace of the Red Sea Littoral, he was appointed Port, Marine, and Civil Surgeon at Aden. During the ten years that he held this post, in addition to its very onerous professional duties, he was charged with the performance of numerous civil functions of a miscellaneous nature, and his civil services have been frequently and very warmly acknowledged by the Aden Resident. It was while Port Surgeon at Aden that he was dragged into the famous controversy on the anti-scorbutic properties of alcoholic liquors, in which, by common consent, he worsted his antagonist, the eminent physiologist, Dr. W. B. Carpenter. In 1853 Dr. Vaughan was compelled by sickness to return to England. On the breaking out of the Russian war he was appointed Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals in Turkey, and he continued to hold this high office in connection with the Turkish Contingent till the termination of the war in July 1856. He received most flattering recognitions of his services from General Vivian, Lord Panmure, and his other military superiors, and he obtained the Crimean medal and the Order of Medjidie. In 1857 he served with the Persian expedition, in medical charge of the Light Battalion, attracting the favourable notice of Generals Havelock and Outram, and receiving warm commendation from his immediate commanding officer. For his services in Persia he received a medal and clasp. As Sir Hugh Rose's staff-surgeon, he was present at the attack, siege, and capture of Ratghur, the battle of Barodea, the operations against and subsequent capture of Garrakota, the forcing of the Muddenpore Pass, the siege and storm of Jhansi, the battle of the Betwa, and the subsequent pursuit of the rebels. As field surgeon he was present and very greatly distinguished himself in a military as well as a medical capacity at the battle of Koonch. As field surgeon he was also present at the battle of Galowlee, the capture of Calpee, that of Morar, the battle and capture of Gwalior, the battle of Sindwaho, &c., &c. Sir H. Rose has on more than one occasion publicly acknowledged his obligations, both public and personal, to Dr. Vaughan, and we think it will be allowed that no man in India has equal claims to be appointed His Excellency's body-surgeon. Of Dr. Vaughan's personal qualities we leave the Bengalees to form their own judgment. Suffice it to say that here, where he is best known, he is honoured and esteemed as a man of strong intellect and the soundest judgment, of great benevolence, and of the finest sense of honour.—Bombay Gazette.

EXPORTS (Bombay, May 24).—Cotton.—The market for Cotton is firm, with a moderate business doing. The prices have fluctuated very much during the fortnight, and now close at an advance of from Rs. 3 to 5 on our last quotations. Dhollera and Brouche are both becoming scarce, and will likely maintain their present value. There is a large stock of Oomrawattee at market, but in consequence of its inferior quality it is not freely purchased. New Compts is now arriving in small quantities. The rise of freights has tended to check the demand for the China market, and the sales for that quarter are not very important. Wool.—This staple is at present in good demand, but the reduced stock at market, and that of inferior quality, has checked business; superior qualities are scarcely to be had, and very high prices are therefore asked. Oilseeds.—Prices of both Linseed and Rapeseed have become firmer, in consequence of advices reporting an improvement in the Europe market, and are a few annas higher than our last quotations. The former must be quoted at Rs. 4-2 to 4-3, and the latter at Rs. 4-12 to 5-2. Teel Seed is very scarce, and is consequently held at high prices. Niger Seed can be bought at Rs. 19 to 20. Ground Nuts are not to be had at all, and prices are nominal. Poppy Seed is also nominal. Hemp is in good supply, and in moderate inquiry. Pepper remains unaltered in value and demand. Madder Root.—Business is confined to Muscat at Rs. 3-14 to Rs. 4-4 per maund, which is the only description in the market. Opium.—The increased demand has caused a rise of prices, which are now quoted Rs. 1,395 to 1,400 per chest for first sort Malwa Opium. The exports to China during the fortnight were 775 chests.

IMPORTS (Bombay, May 24).—Cotton Manufactures.—The Piece Goods market is very dull. Grey Goods in general remain without demand at previous rates, which are only nominal; while those descriptions in which a few sales have taken place show a reduction in price. Bleached Goods remain in the same position as last reported. Glasgow Goods have exhibited little or no variation, and a declining tendency is observable. Turkey Red Goods are without much inquiry, as before. Yarns.—The market for both Mule and Water Twist is extremely dull, in consequence of a total cessation of demand, and we have heard of no transactions in either of them. Metals.—Copper is in languid inquiry at reduced rates. A fair business has been done in Iron, which is in moderate request at our quotations. There is nothing doing in Steel. Spelter is dull, and lower in price. Lead, Tin Plates, and Quicksilver, are quiet.

Dated March 30.—Directing Asst. surg. R. D. Burn, royal art., to proc. to Goruckpore, in med. ch. of a party of royal art., and to return to Fyzabad at the public expense.

At the recommendation of the inspector gen. of hospitals, Staff asst. surg. Turton will proc. immediately to Ghazepore, and on arr. he will report himself to the officer comdg. the detach. 77th regt. for duty.

The New Customs Tariff.

Fort William, Customs Department, April 4, 1860.
—Notice is hereby given, that the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, under the authority conferred on him by Section III. Act XVI. of 1857, has this day approved and established the following revised table of fixed valuations for the articles therein mentioned of import and export, and that the said respective values shall, from this date, be the valuations of the said articles for assessment of customs duty thereon at the ports of this presidency, until further notice.

By order of the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal,
A. R. YOUNG,
Sec. to the Government of Bengal.

Marching Recruits.

Hd. Qrs., Camp Jugulpooora, March 21.—With a view to ensuring a more efficient control over parties of European recruits proceeding up country, whether marching or by bullock train, and to prevent the recurrence of those acts of misconduct which have, the C. in C. is pained to observe, been of late so frequently brought to notice, H.E., with the concurrence of Govt., is pleased to direct that the maximum number of recruits for British regiments to be henceforward placed under the charge of one officer shall be fifty; and that, whenever practicable, three officers, with some non-commissioned officers, shall be attached to every one hundred men.

Lord Clyde further directs that the officer in charge of every detachment shall be required to keep a diary of the marches made, and of the conduct of the soldiers, which he will submit to the officers commanding the stations through which he may pass, and finally deposit in the staff office of the station where the last draft is left.

It will be the duty of officers commanding stations to inspect carefully this report, bringing, if necessary, to the notice of superior authority any entries which may appear to require observation or inquiry.

SERVICES OF MAJOR S. C. MACPHERSON.

The following letter from the Secretary to the Government of India with the Gov. gen. is published for general information:—

No. 1,358.—From Cecil Beadon, Esq., Secy. to Govt. of India with the Gov. gen., to Col. Sir R. Shakespear, Knight, agent to the Gov. gen. for Central India.

Foreign Dept., dated Simla, April 18, 1860.

Sir,—I am directed to state that the Gov. gen. has received with deep regret the melancholy intelligence of the death of Major S. Chaters Macpherson, of the Madras army, the political agent at Gwalior.

Major Macpherson's services in the political dept. through a long course of years, especially the part he took in the suppression of human sacrifices and infanticide among the Khonds, have gained for him a high place in the long list of distinguished officers who have adorned the Indian service, and entitle him to the lasting gratitude of the Government and the people of India.

ARMS OF IRREGULAR CORPS.

Fort St. George, May 15.—No. 228.—The following gen. order, by H.E. the Gov. gen. of India, is republished:—

Simla, April 27.—With reference to govt. gen. order No. 1,073, dated July 25, H.E. the Gov. gen. is pleased to direct that irreg. corps shall retain their present arms, except such as are of rifle patterns, which are to be withdrawn under such instructions as the Right Hon. the C. in C. may issue, and sent into the nearest magazine, where they will be received at a valuation, and Victoria carabines will be issued on payment of their value.

H.E. has determined that the Victoria carbine shall be the established pattern for all irreg. corps, and that no firearms shall be furnished to their men by comdg. officers except from the govt. arsenals.

The G.O. No. 1,073, of the 25th July, 1859, and the present G.O. are applicable to the three presidencies.

(Signed) R. J. H. BIRCH, Maj. Gen.,

Sec. to the Govt. of India, with the Gov. gen.

Court Martial.

CAPTAIN J. G. B. GRIFFIN, H.M.'S 3RD MADRAS EUROPEAN INFANTRY.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Simla, May 10.

At a general court martial assembled at Allahabad on April 11, 1860, Captain John George Benjamin Griffin, of H.M.'s 3rd regt. of Madras European infantry, was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—With having behaved in a scandalous manner, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, at Allahabad, on or about the 3rd August, 1859, with the intent to defraud Mr. R. Carr, wine merchant of that place, written and sent to him a letter, addressed to Messrs. Carr and Co., written in a feigned hand, bearing the fictitious signature of C. J. Erskine, captain, 7th light cavalry, in which he requested the supply of one dozen of beer and one dozen of brandy, and which said beer and brandy were supplied in accordance with such request; he, Captain Griffin, well knowing that the said letter was altogether fictitious, forged, and counterfeited.

Finding.—The Court is of opinion that the prisoner, Captain John George Benjamin Griffin, of H.M.'s 3rd regiment of Madras European infantry, is guilty of the charge preferred against him.

Sentence.—The Court sentences the prisoner, Capt. J. G. B. Griffin, of H.M.'s 3rd regt. of Madras Eur. inf., to be cashiered.

Approved and confirmed.

Clyde, General, C. in C., East Indies.
Simla, May 2, 1860.

BY THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF.

DISBANDMENT OF THE 1ST EXTRA BATTALION.
Under instructions from Government, the C. in C. directs the disbandment of the 1st extra battalion as soon as possible after the arrival at Kurrachee of the wing of the 1st grenadier N.L., the date being reported to army head quarters, and from which all establishments will cease.

With the exception of these native commissioned and non-commissioned officers, promoted to fill vacancies in the battalion, who will go with the companies to which they now belong, notwithstanding that they may have previously belonged to other regiments, and those unfit for further service, the native commissioned and non-commissioned officers and soldiers received from the line are to be retransferred in their present rank to their original regiments (taking with them their arms, accoutrements, ammunition, and clothing), to be borne as supernumeraries until absorbed by casualties.

Recruit boys enlisted for the 1st extra battalion are to be discharged.

The privates enlisted for the battalion are to have the option of volunteering for regiments of the line (provided they are fit for the service), or of being discharged with half a month's pay for every complete year's service. Men so volunteering will carry with them to their new regiments their arms, clothing, and accoutrements.

Register rolls and all other necessary papers are to be sent to the officers commanding the regiments which the men are to join, on the strength of which they are to be brought, from the date subsequent to the disbandment of the 1st extra battalion.

The men are to march to their respective stations under orders which will be communicated by the qr. mr. gen. of the army to the maj. gen. commanding Scinde division.

On the receipt of this order a special invaliding committee is to be assembled at Kurrachee for the examination of such native commissioned and non-commissioned officers and soldiers as may be considered unfit for further active service. The rolls are to show the regiments from which the men were originally received, and to be transmitted to the adjt. gen.'s office, Bombay, immediately on the completion of the proceedings.

All stores, arms, and accoutrements which may be left in charge of the batt. on the above orders being carried out are to be returned into arsenal at Kurrachee.

The European officers attached to the 1st extra batt. will proc. and rejoin their respective regts. on completion of the disbandment of the batt.

Maj. gen. Cunningham, c.b., will be pleased to carry out the above orders, and issue any further instructions he may deem necessary, to give them complete effect.

The following order is republished for the information of H.M.'s regts.:—

Sir Hugh Rose's Farewell Order.

Adjt. General's Office, Bombay 15th May, 1860.

By order of her Most Gracious Majesty, I am about to leave this command.

It was in the field that I first joined the Bombay army, and in the conflict for the rights of my country and of civilization that it won my esteem.

I estimate, at all its value, the honour of having commanded, brief as has been the period, an army which stands so high in military traditions, and which, in the last three eventful years, has earned for itself fresh pages in the brilliant chronicles of Indian armies.

It was the Bombay force which, in 1856, landed on the coast of Persia, subdued in a few gallant actions her whole sea board, won a peace, and then hastened back to take an honourable part against the rebellion in India.

Major General Sir Henry Roberts, k.c.b., in 1857, with most inefficient means, and before the rebel cause had been discouraged by defeats, subdued revolt in Rajpootana; and afterwards in command of a field force dealt it a severe blow by capturing Kotah, with its numerous artillery. At a later period Sir Henry Roberts gave a serious repulse to the cleverest of the insurgent traitors, Tantia Topce.

Columns of the Bombay army, under Major Gen. Sir John Michael, k.c.b., routed in several actions the force under the same leader; took all their artillery, pursuing them in marches of unusual length and rapidity, till they lost their leader, and broke up.

Nor can I forget the weak division, incomplete in every requisite, except a resolution and discipline, which, with no other aid but a portion of the Hyderabad Contingent, fought its way in 1858 from Western India to the frontier of Bengal, planting their colours in every hostile camp and fort which opposed their line of march.

So small was this column, so far had it advanced, and so hard was it pressed, that it could not afford a reserve; the tide of war closed round it from every side; sickness was in the camp; marching by night and fighting by day in a summer sun had prostrated many, and weakened all; the intense heat even rendered useless a great portion of the arms and ammunition of the European infantry.

But nothing could prostrate the spirit of the Central India Field Force. Their devotion never allowed them to think that they could be beaten; their discipline told them that they must obey their orders to take Calpee and join the Bengal army, no matter at what sacrifice. They never yielded; they always advanced, till they won the Jumna, and gave their hands on its banks to their gallant comrades of the Bengal army.

Calpee was the fruit of this hard fought for union.

During the short period I have held the chief command of this army I have done my best for its improvement.

Let military improvement, in its broadest acceptation, be your watchword; all the armies of the world are striving for an improvement. We ought not to be behindhand; whenever and wherever our Queen and country call us we must be ready.

All cannot be clever, but all can be disciplined. Devotion goes hand in hand with discipline. A disciplined soldiery is the pride of the profession, the safeguard of public order, and a bulwark of their country's rights.

I know no partialities, no distinctions, except those which belong to merit. Be he the highest or the humblest in my command, it is the same to me; let him show me his patent of merit, I will do my best to obtain for him the patent of his reward.

I am about to obey the orders of the Queen to assume the command of her Majesty's forces in India on the departure of their present most distinguished C. in C. I owe this distinction, perhaps the greatest to which an officer can aspire, less to my own merit, than to those of my gallant troops, and to the kindness of a most gracious sovereign, whose sympathies accompany sailors and soldiers to the furthest limits of her Majesty's vast possessions.

I part from the Bombay army as from true and tried friends. Whilst I wish them a sincere farewell, I can say that I have known no greater gratification than to acknowledge the services of meritorious officers and soldiers, and to obtain for them a just recompense.

I am directed to hand over the command of this army to Lieut. gen. Sir William Mansfield, K.C.B., whose name is well known in India. I do so with the utmost confidence. It would be out of place in me to extol his services, which have been so highly eulogised by a better and higher authority—H.E. Lord Clyde—who has won a reputation in every quarter of the globe.

I am extremely indebted to Major Stock, acting adjt. gen. of the army, for his very zealous and efficient assistance.

I learned while in command of a field force to know Lieut. col. Phayre's value as qmrm. gen. of the army; he never acknowledges difficulties—he overcomes them.

Col. Somerset, dep. adjt. gen. of her Majesty's forces, has performed his duties entirely to my satisfaction.

Col. Skinner's lucid interpretation of military law, and the justice of his views in all matters relating to it has been very useful to me.

I am grateful to Colonel Rowland for the ability with which he has conducted his important duties, and for the zeal with which he has seconded my wish to introduce improvements into his noble arm.

Dr. Rooke, inspector general of Hospitals, has addressed to me valuable reports on sanitaria and the amelioration of the medical department. I fully concur in the opinions which he expresses, and I have done my utmost to have them carried into effect.

All reports of the army will be made to Lieut. gen. Sir William Mansfield, K.C.B., from the date of my embarkation for Calcutta.

HUGH ROSE, Lieut. gen., C. in C.

Sir William Mansfield's Address to the Bombay Army.

Bombay, May 17, 1860.—Lieut. gen. Sir William Mansfield, K.C.B., has great satisfaction in assuming the command of the army of Bombay, to which he has been appointed under the order of her Gracious Majesty the Queen.

Sir William Mansfield has been long associated with the different armies of India, both in peace and war, and has seen them often tried under the most difficult circumstances. His present connection, therefore, with the army of Bombay is the more gratifying to him as he is well acquainted with its high character for discipline and conduct in the field, as illustrated in many arduous contests, and more especially in the late brilliant campaigns conducted by his Excellency Lieut. gen. Sir Hugh Rose, G.C.B., who is about to assume the command of her Majesty's forces in India, by Major gen. Sir H. G. Roberts, K.C.B., and Major gen. Sir J. Michel, K.C.B.

The C. in C. trusts that these great qualities of a military body will not suffer while the army of Bombay is under his command, and he relies on the officers commanding divisions, brigades, and regiments for that cordial co-operation which will best vouch for them.

It will be borne in mind that the more intelligent the obedience of an army, the more perfect, the more certain, is its discipline; that is to say, that when men thoroughly understand the laws and regulations under which they exist as soldiers, they become alive to their necessity, and to the just spirit in which those laws and regulations have been formed.

If properly instructed, British soldiers are commanded without difficulty, and with but little punishment.

To the regimental officers does it chiefly belong to impart the due instruction with patience, temper, and firmness, and thus to maintain the highest description of discipline—that which is founded on unerring, but at the same time intelligent obedience to the laws and regulations enacted and ordered from time to time for the better government of her Majesty's forces.

Above all, let the officers of every rank recollect that important as the duties of parade may be, they form but a very small part of military existence, and of those objects common alike to the men under their command, and to themselves, about which the men have a right to expect information and instruction.

His Excellency hopes that he may soon have it in his power to inspect the troops at the several stations, and to make their personal acquaintance.

This order will be entered in all regimental and company order books.

W. R. MANSFIELD, Lieut. gen., C. in C.

Financial Notifications.

(From the Bombay Government Gazette Extraordinary, May 12.)

The following telegram, dated the 10th inst., received from the Govt. of India, is published for general information, with reference to the notification dated the 9th inst.:—

TELEGRAM.

Please to publish the following in your Official Gazette.

As the object which the Govt. had in view in calling in Treasury Bills which are now in circulation appears to be greatly misunderstood, and as an apprehension appears to exist that it is intended as an indirect mode of creating a new loan, the Govt. deems it needful to issue the following explanations:—

On April 20, 1859, under Notification No. 28, a five-and-a-half per cent. loan was opened, limited to five crores, upon certain conditions, and it was understood that the Government would open no new loan before May 1, 1860, and which understanding has been strictly adhered to. That loan was closed in the ordinary way the 14th of Feb. last. But there still remains open the issue of Treasury bills in the two forms under the notification No. 34, of April 13, 1859, of indefinite duration and amount, and which, as long as such an issue lasted, acted as a continual and unlimited means of borrowing on the part of Government, and of absorbing money from the market. It was the desire of the Government, after the closing of the Five-and-a-half per cent. loan, also to close all other means by which the Treasury could borrow money; and therefore, by notification No. 33, dated the 27th ult., notice was given that money would cease to be received for the Treasury bills, and that this means of clearing debt would be closed. But it becomes necessary to consider how to deal with the amount of bills in circulation which thus constituted a portion of the public debt; and it was decided that, the amount being very small—being only about twenty-three lacs in Bengal, and fifty-nine lacs for all parts of India, including all the different classes of Treasury Bills, that is, three pie Bills and two-and-a-half pie Bills, Nos. 1 and 2—the owners should have the choice of converting them into a permanent stock, or receiving their money as the bills fall due. An option is given to them to take Four per cent., Five per cent., Five-and-a-half per cent. stock, subject to the same terms as regards the time and conditions of repayment as applied to those several stocks which have already been closed, but at such prices as the Government shall fix. It must be plain that by this option given to the present holders of treasury bills, the Government does not add to its entire debt, or abstract any money from the market, while, by the arrangement, Government closes the treasury against any further borrowing. All that is now done to convert a debt, for payment of which the Government might be called upon at short and uncertain periods, to be one of a more fixed and permanent character, is certainly essential to the economical management of the public finances. Such conversion, however, to take place entirely at the option of the holders, and provided they are willing to give such terms as the Government think fair to the public, otherwise they will be paid off in cash. So far, therefore, from this operation being intended as a new mode of indirectly raising loans, it is adopted as a plan for effectually closing all the existing means open to the Treasury of borrowing money, which will be made more apparent when it is stated that the Government has no intention of calling upon the Indian money markets for loans of any kind whatever, whether in the shape of Treasury Bills, or in any other form, during the current financial year ending April 30, 1861.—By order of the hon. the Gov. in Council,

B. H. ELLIS, Sec. to Govt.

Bombay Castle, May 12, 1860.

(From the Calcutta Government Gazette, May 10.)

May 11.—Resolution.—With reference to the financial resolution of April 7, regarding the new system of estimate, budget, accounts, and audit, it is necessary to consider how the details of the several measures involved therein may be practically carried out, and how the principles prevailing in England may be adopted to the existing circumstances of departments in India. A committee will therefore be appointed, consisting of the following gentlemen, to consider the above points generally, viz.:—Mr. C. H. Lushington, Hon. E. Drummond, Mr. R. Temple.

In considering the main points, the committee will enter into such details as they may find necessary. Among the matters for consideration, will be the manner in which the specific sums sanctioned in the Budget should be placed at the credit of the various expending departments; the mode in which such expenditure should be accounted for to the local accountants, the mode in which the local accountants should account to the Audit Department in Calcutta; the manner in which the audit should be constituted, and the detailed rules by which it should be guided in the execution of its functions.

The consideration of the Committee will be primarily directed to all departments and in all presidencies save those immediately pertaining to the military service. But the Committee will observe whatever resolution may be passed relative to the military finance department, the Committee's attention will be specially given to all civil departments, to the postal, telegraphs and marine departments, &c. And as there will be but one audit of each department, namely, that conducted by the audit department in Calcutta, it will be necessary that the future duties and designation of the officer now called civil auditor under each local government, be considered.

The Committee will proceed with their enquiries as soon as practicable, communicating their progress at short intervals to the financial branch of the Supreme Government, and will at the close submit a report on the detailed proposals they may make.

C. HUGH LUSHINGTON,

Courts Martial.

Mahabeshwour, May 9.—The C. in C. is pleased, under the power and authority vested in him by Act No. VI. of 1860, passed by the Legislative Council of India, to empower the comdg. officer of every native regiment of the Bombay army, under H.E. comm., to proc., under Section I. Clause I. of that Act, according to the rules prescribed by Clause III. of the same Section.

Comdg. officers are thus empowered to dispose of all military offences without the intervention of minor courts martial, but it should be borne in mind that it is not intended, by this new authority, to preclude recourse, when desirable, to general courts martial.

When, therefore, comdg. officers are of opinion that offences are of serious nature, to be summarily disposed of under the new powers vested in them, it will be their duty, as heretofore, to make application to the general officer comdg. the div. for the assembly of a general court martial.

The C. in C. trusts that the extensive powers now conveyed to comdg. officers will be temperately and judiciously exercised to the advancement of the discipline and character of the native army.

Inspecting officers will be so good as to satisfy themselves that officers of native corps fully understand the provisions of the Act above quoted.

Court Martial.

LIEUT. WILLIAM OWEN, H.M.'s 52ND L.I.

Adjt. Gen.'s Office, H.M.'s British Forces, Calcutta, May 1, 1860.—Head Qrs., Simla, April 20, 1860.—At a general court martial assembled at Sealkote, on Friday, April 13, 1860, Lieut. W. Owen, H.M.'s 52nd L.I., was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—For conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having at Sealkote at about 2 o'clock in the morning of Feb. 18, 1860, when in a state of intoxication, entered, without permission, the sleeping apartment of Ensign J. C. W. Lever, of the same regt., when that officer was in bed, and refused to leave the room when desired by Ens. Lever, and resisted the efforts which that officer then made to expel him therefrom.

Finding.—Guilty of conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, on the occasion referred to in the charge, when in a state of intoxication, entered the sleeping apartment of Ensign J. C. W. Lever, of the same regt., and not guilty of the remainder of the charge of which they do acquit him.

Sentence.—To be reprimanded in such manner as H.E. the C. in C. may be pleased to direct. Approved and confirmed.

(Signed) CLYDE, General, C. in C.
Simla, April 18, 1860.

REMARKS BY H.E. THE C. IN C.

The C. in C. trusts that the publicity of this trial will be a sufficient reprimand to Lieut. Owen, and induce him to be more careful in future against over indulgence in wine.

Lieut. Owen is to be released from arrest, and directed to return to his duty.

By order of H.E. the C. in C.

G. CONGREVE, Colonel, qrmr. gen. H.M.'s forces, in charge of adjt. gen.'s office, H.M.'s forces in India.

STRANDING AND BURNING OF THE SHIP "FAITH RAIMON," NEAR ADEN.—Early in the morning of the 21st of April, the signal station on the island of Seerah telegraphed a ship in distress. The station on Shumshum having immediately repeated the signal, Captain Stephens, the senior naval officer, lost no time in ordering the Lady Canning to start forthwith to render every practicable assistance, suggesting to Lieut. Peavor at the same time, in a private note, that, if there was no chance of saving the vessel, he might burn it in order to prevent its falling into the hands of the Arabs. Lieut. Peavor steamed out of the harbour in an incredibly short time, and found the vessel about eight miles to the north-east of Aden, stranded about half a mile from the shore, in from one and a half to two fathoms water. There was a heavy swell running at the time, and the Lady Canning could not be brought within two miles of the ship; nevertheless, by dint of great exertions on the part of the officers and crew, every soul on board was rescued and brought in safety to the Lady Canning. The ship turned out to be the Fatih Raimon, from Bombay, with a valuable cargo of silk and Surat cotton, and about two hundred pilgrims, bound for Jeddah. Among the latter was a Nawab from Hindostan (whose name has not reached us), who is reported to be a loser by this accident of upwards of Rs. 45,000. After all the lives had been saved, Lieut. Peavor directed Mr. Armstrong, a midshipman, to report upon the condition of the vessel, and he giving it as his opinion that she could not be got off, and would inevitably go to pieces, Lieut. Peavor directed that she should be set on fire, and the illumination caused by the conflagration looked like a bright phenomenon at night from the camp at Aden, and also from the harbour. The burning completed, the Lady Canning returned at once to Aden with the crew and passengers who had been saved.—Bombay Gazette.

PRIVATE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNOR.—Though we have had often to deplore the wretched condition to which the educational department is reduced, it has ever been our pleasing duty to record the most praiseworthy zeal and ability displayed by one, and the only one, of its officers in the staff of inspection and supervision. This officer is Mr. T. C. Hope, of the Civil Service. The activity and enthusiasm of this gentleman when contrasted with the dead mass of indolence and inefficiency that surrounded him, have been truly remarkable. In fact, he was the only member of our lazy and expensive machinery of supervision who has done justice to his pay, and has eminently distinguished himself for zeal and ability—the only man who understood his work, and endeavoured to accomplish it in right earnest. The admirable series of Goojeratee school-books he has prepared, adapted to the habits, views, and feelings of the people of Goojerat, is but one of the many gratifying proofs of his industry and intelligence. It is, therefore, with no little regret that we notice the withdrawal of this only efficient officer from the unfortunate educational department. He has been taken away from a most useful sphere of exertion. Work, of course, is his element, and unlike others, he cannot live a moment without it; he will exert himself with his characteristic ardour, and render himself eminently useful wherever he is placed. But we cannot sufficiently deplore his loss to the department of public instruction. We doubt, moreover, whether the energy and talents of such an enthusiastic young officer as Mr. Hope, will find sufficient scope for exertion in the office of private secretary to the Governor. However, it is most gratifying to note that his new appointment is a recognition of the worth of this deserving public servant.—East Gofar.

MR. CHISHOLM ANSTAY was sworn in on Monday, May 21st, before Sir Joseph Arnould, as a barrister of the Supreme Court.

THE STORM AT KURRACHEE.—Saturday last was one of the hottest days we have had this season, but there was something peculiar in the atmosphere, which foretold the weather-wise that a change was at hand. Nautical men predicted rain, whilst old Sindians brought their experience to guide them in their vaticinations, and they surmised that we were doomed to another month's grilling hot weather. All fears and doubts were most astonishingly put to an end about half past one o'clock on Sunday morning. During the early part of the night the air was close and stifling in the extreme, but about midnight it became gradually cooler, and at the hour we have mentioned a storm burst forth, unsurpassed in its fury by anything we have witnessed during our residence in Sind. The whole western horizon was hung with huge banks of black clouds, the wind blew at first in fitful gusts, the lightning in broad sheets of livid flame illuminated the empyrean, and the thunder pealed forth in long continued and loud rolls of unearthly sounds, whilst the rain poured down in torrents as if the fountains of the deep had been let loose to deluge the earth. At two o'clock the storm was at its height, and from the little observation we could make under the circumstances, it appeared to us as if Kurrachee had been drawn within the vortex of a cyclone. The wind chopped and changed, blowing in succession from every point of the compass. It gradually subsided until about three o'clock, when it was nearly as calm as our usual weather. Towards morning the elements seemed to have exhausted their power, after having caused, we fear, an immense loss of property, if not of life. We hear that in the harbour the ship Her Majesty grounded, but managed to get off again at flood tide, without sustaining any material damage. The Elmor drifted from her anchorage yesterday, and was obliged to call in the aid of a pilot. Three of the barges belonging to the O. I. S. N. Company broke adrift, and one of them sunk outside the harbour; the others were brought in again by their respective crews. Most of the boats in the harbour were driven ashore, or grounded. A large pattimar with about Rs. 6,000 worth of rice, besides other produce, was swamped, and a greater portion of her cargo lost. A number of native craft have received serious injury both in vessels and cargo, the estimated cost of which cannot be less than Rs. 10,000. The whole of the temporary sheds belonging to the Commissariat of Keamaree are blown down. The dwellers in tents and mud huts both in camp and town have been washed out of their temporary tenements. We have been unable as yet to obtain further particulars of the ravages of this cyclone, but as reports come in from the surrounding coast we shall publish them. The weather during Sunday was cold and cloudy, whilst it commenced raining early on Monday morning, and has continued with little intermission all day up to the hour of going to press. Our monsoon may thus be said to have begun in earnest, and fully a month before its usual time.—Kossid, May 15.

THE "DISTINGUISHED OFFICER."

THE leading journal lately devoted an entire column to the especial abuse of the late Company's officers, and asserted, on the authority of a letter from a "Distinguished Officer," that in time of war they preferred "posts of security, ease, and emolument to those of danger, hardship, and honour." Even when the mutiny broke out, instead of hastening to rejoin their regiments, those who held civil or staff appointments remained at their posts far from the scene of strife, and left the perils and hardships of warfare to their less fortunate comrades. As might have been expected, these cruel and unjustifiable aspersions called forth many indignant explanations and positive contradictions from the officers who had been thus maligned, and the Times was compelled to admit that, if they did not volunteer for active service, it was simply because they were prohibited by the regulations from doing so. It is obvious that great inconvenience would be caused to the Government if every officer in civil or staff employment were at once to throw up those duties, and hurry back to their regiments. Oftentimes it may happen that upon the presence of the magistrate will depend the maintenance of order and tranquillity throughout his district, while his departure would be the signal for disturbances and outrages of the worst description. In any case, the question is decided by the regulations of the service, to which all officers are bound to yield implicit obedience. The Government reserves to itself the discretion of retaining at their posts such officers as cannot be spared from civil duty, and of placing at the disposal of the Commander-in-Chief those whose services in a magisterial capacity can be dispensed with. That the system of withdrawing a large number of officers from their regiments was a defective one few persons will venture to deny, though it appears that it is now to be applied to the Queen's troops likewise; but assuredly the officers themselves were not to blame for seeking to obtain the prizes that were offered to stimulate their exertions. Least of all could they have anticipated that the "Distinguished Officer," whose letter was put forth as the groundwork of the attack made upon them by the unscrupulous Times, should have been one who owed so much of his own brilliant successes to their valour and military science. He was, in fact, no other than Major General Sir Hugh Rose, the present Commander in Chief of her Majesty's forces in India, who was under such great obligations to the officers and men of the late Company's European and native regiments on the Bombay establishment. In a confidential letter to H.R.H. the General Commanding in Chief, laid on the table of the House of Commons on Tuesday the 12th, but previously communicated to the Times, in order to prejudice the public mind against the existence of two separate services, Sir Hugh contrasts the conduct of officers in the royal army with that of officers in the Company's army. The former, he says, would be "cut at the clubs" if they did not tear themselves from those who are nearest and dearest to them, and go with their colours "when they are marched to war." This is not to be gainsayed, but it is a foul calumny to insinuate that Indian officers are not actuated by equally high principles, and even by a higher motive than the fear of being "cut at the club." Sir Hugh himself acknowledges that it is the Government which "causes officers to remain in the enjoyment of lucrative civil employment, whilst their regiments are fighting in the field," and yet a few lines further on he accuses them of having "preferred, with only one exception, their civil employments to their military duties, and remained away from their regiments during the whole of the late arduous struggle." He then again exonerates them from blame, while he deploras "a system which not only allows but induces officers of the army to prefer posts of security, ease, and emolument to those of danger, hardship, and honour." Not content with having thus repeatedly contradicted himself, he concludes by giving some instances of officers who did not volunteer for active service when their regiment was in the field, and speaks of "this attachment to emoluments and civil appointments" as deadening "the sense of devotion to duty, the fea sacré of the French army, which all Governments, admirals, and generals do their utmost to excite and keep alive."

"I came out to India," he says, "with several regimental officers who, I thought, were hurrying back to their regiments because they had taken the field against the insurgents. To my great surprise I learned afterwards that they were returning to their civil appointments. One, a senior captain of a light cavalry regiment, which he ought to have joined for the twofold reason that it was in the field, and that the conduct of the men had excited doubts of their fidelity, this officer was returning to his post, as district paymaster, 800 miles away from his regiment. Of all the numerous officers of the four regiments of the late Company's service which took the field under me, who held staff and civil employment, not one joined their corps."

This statement would have been more complete had Sir Hugh taken the trouble to inform H.R.H. how many of these officers belonged to regiments that had not mutinied, and still more so, if he had mentioned how their presence at their respective posts could have been dispensed with. Any way, it was not optional with them to join their regiments, or to return to their civil duties; the latter, however, by no means necessarily implying either ease or security. But Sir Hugh, though a successful commander, has taken to the active duties of his profession at an advanced period of life, his past experience being more of courts than camps, and as a courtier he was not likely to lose an opportunity of expressing opinions which he knew would be highly acceptable to the higher powers at home. For the publication of these opinions in the Times he is not himself answerable, and perhaps he will hardly approve of their being communicated to the press before being presented to Parliament.

REORGANISATION OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

At length, after a tedious and most prejudicial delay, the bare outlines of the Ministerial scheme for reorganising the Indian Army have been laid before the public. From the first it was evident that the Court, the Government, and the Horse Guards were bent upon the amalgamation of the two services, and consequently no one was surprised when Sir Charles Wood gave expression to this foregone conclusion. No doubt it would have been more gratifying to the Secretary of State could he have adduced the evidence of the highest Indian authorities in support of his programme, but in the absence of such testimony he was content to avail himself of the partial opinions of Queen's officers and courtiers. In one instance, indeed, he even condescended to make use of a garbled extract to endorse a statement otherwise untenable. He was endeavouring to prove that it was an admitted fact that the discipline of the local European corps was inferior to that of the Royal regiments, and quoted Sir John Lawrence to that effect. Sir John is allowed to say, "While I admit that the tone and interior economy of a Royal regiment may, on the average, be somewhat superior to that of a local regiment;" but the concluding clause of the sentence, which modified and almost repudiated that partial admission, is most unfairly omitted. Sir John actually went on to say, "The difference is not so marked as may be supposed. The discipline of both is capable of great improvement. I myself believe that not only are the local officers in nowise inferior to their brethren of the Royal service, but that, on the whole, more men of great mark and ability will be found in the local service among an equal number of officers." Even Sir James Outram, who "deemed it (his) duty to record a solemn protest" against the amalgamation of the two armies, is made to appear as a witness somewhat in favour of that measure. But it is idle to draw attention to the animus by which the Secretary of State was so obviously actuated throughout his entire speech—it is more to the purpose to examine the salient points of his scheme, and to analyse the various papers on which it professes to be based.

Sir Charles Wood began by admitting that no longer ago than last August he was disposed to recommend that the local force should constitute two-fifths of the whole European army in India, although this proposition was liable to the serious objection that the local force would be thus liable to vary in strength at different times. Lord Canning proposed that 80,000 European soldiers should be maintained in India, of whom two-thirds should be permanently stationed in that country, which Sir Charles was kind enough to inform the House would amount to 53,000 some odd hundreds, as if the Viceroy meant anything more than an approximation in round numbers to that proportion. But while the question was yet under consideration letters were received imputing the mutiny of the European troops to "an organised combination among their older comrades," an imputation which Sir John Lawrence asserts to have been utterly unfounded. It was likewise discovered that the difference of expense between the Queen's troops and local regiments was far less than had been anticipated. If the existing local force, consisting of rather less than 20,000 men of all arms, were converted into Queen's troops, the increased cost for that number would be about £114,000 a year, disbursed in India, but irrespective of other charges alluded to in Mr. Hammack's report, which we shall notice hereafter. These 20,000 men, it may be remarked, however, represent the European army which the Times described the other day as no longer in existence; with a strange fatality they had followed the fate of the Sepoys, and had disbanded themselves. Be this as it may, Sir Charles Wood is of opinion that it is very undesirable "to raise in the same country and from the same class two bodies of men upon the same principles, but ruled by different authorities, and guided by different forms of military discipline." But surely this is begging the entire question. In the first place we have the example of the Marines, who are raised from the same class of men as the line, but are placed under different authorities, and under a different form of discipline, without the slightest inconvenience to either service. And, secondly, there is the experience of the two European services in India, which have been animated by an honourable feeling of emulation, but certainly not of "antagonism," as affirmed by Lord Elphinstone. Sir Charles then proceeds to compare the opinions of the senior officers with those of their juniors, and by some strange mode of reasoning seems to have arrived at the conclusion that, as they differ, the latter must be the more correct, and therefore the more worthy of adoption. It is unnecessary to follow the right honourable baronet through the garbled extracts he quoted in support of the scheme he was about to develop, as we shall have occasion hereafter to analyse the minutes to which he alluded. Naturally enough, he insisted that the Home Government must be the most competent tribunal to decide where the forces of the empire should be stationed. As an abstract question there can be no doubt on that point, but unfortunately history teaches us that this is precisely one of those questions regarding which a Ministry is most apt to err. Colonies and important posts are continually denuded of troops to an alarming extent. So long as our maritime supremacy is unimpaired, this temporary weakness is comparatively of little consequence in the Mediterranean or the West Indies, but it is far otherwise in the case of a distant and semi-hostile appanage of the Crown, such as Hindostan. Lord Dalhousie more than once complained of the inefficiency of the European forces at his disposal, and his remonstrances were answered by the withdrawal of several regiments for Crimean service. "But," says Sir Charles, "I have ascertained that the force in India in 1857 was less than the force in 1854 by 1,500 men only." Was there ever a more disingenuous statement made by a member of the cabinet rising in his place in Parliament? Why, there should have been 5,000 more, instead of a single man less. In that interval of time Oude was annexed and a war carried on in Persia. In other words, with a considerable force detached on foreign service, and an additional population of five millions of warlike and disaffected subjects to overawe and control, the European army was diminished to the extent of two whole regiments. And yet we are asked to trust implicitly to the discretion of the Home Government! We agree, however, with Sir Charles that a mere difference of expense must not be regarded as a matter of paramount importance. Without any question, the most efficient army will likewise be the cheapest one; but it is again a petitio principii to assume that the Queen's troops were in any way more efficient than the late company's Europeans.

We have no objection, however, to urge against the proposal to place the native army, horse and foot, on the irregular system, as being both cheaper and more effective than the other. The officers for these regiments are to form an unattached staff corps, but the question suggests itself, "Whence are they to be obtained?" After a time, officers of the line may be expected to qualify themselves for these appointments, just as officers of the Company's service have hitherto done, and will prove equally efficient, whether as magistrates, diplomats, agents, or commissariat officers. It is true that doctrinaires of the modern school complain that the best men were thus withdrawn from regimental duty, but it seems that such will not be the result with the royal troops, whose officers are invariably selected by reason of their intellectual superiority, and profound and varied attainments. In the mean time the existing Indian officers are acknowledged to have a prior claim, and it is only as vacancies occur that officers of the line will be called upon to present themselves. Nothing is said, indeed, touching such officers as may, unfortunately, prove incompetent to fulfil extra-professional duties, and as the irregular system, which requires only four officers for each regiment, is about to be introduced, it is clear that they will not be required for regimental duties. At this moment there are considerably upwards of a thousand officers either absent on furlough or doing duty temporarily with her Majesty's regiments, or the few regular native corps still extant. But if, as it is proposed, a large proportion of the present levies are to be disbanded, and the regular corps of the three Presidencies placed on the irregular system, the number of officers to be provided for will be increased to a very serious and puzzling extent.

Promotion in the European corps now to be added to the Royal troops is to proceed by seniority up to the rank of a field officer, but majors and lieutenant-colonels will be appointed partly by selection and partly by seniority; every officer having the power of exchanging into any other regiment in any other quarter of the globe.

Such is the meagre outline of the scheme proposed by Sir Charles Wood, but which leaves so much in obscurity that it is impossible to pass on it a very definite judgment until something more is known of the details. It is worthy, however, of remark that the Secretary of State for India sets at naught the opinions of the Council appointed for the express purpose of guiding him aright amid the intricacies and embarrassments of Indian affairs. The Council are strongly opposed to the amalgamation of the two armies; and such men as Sir John Lawrence, Colonel Durand, and Captain Eastwick—to say nothing of Sir James Outram and Sir H. B. Frere—have recorded their dissent in the most forcible and perspicuous language. Could the question have been decided by weight of argument, no one would now venture to utter a single word in favour of amalgamation; but other "disturbing causes" have been at work, and the result may be seen in the elaborate, but neither ingenuous nor convincing speech delivered by Sir Charles Wood in the House of Commons on Tuesday, the 12th of June—a day to be marked in the annals of British India with the blackest charcoal. The die is now cast, and, if Parliament sanction the Ministerial programme, the first European war in which England becomes involved will witness the loss of our Indian Empire through the withdrawal of the troops on whose presence its stability is wholly dependent, and this notwithstanding the "discretion" of the Home Government, of which we have heard so much but seen so little.

THE COUNCIL OF INDIA ON THE INDIAN ARMY.

The Report of the Political and Military Committee of the Council of India, dated 30th June, 1859, is altogether opposed to the ministerial scheme for the absorption of the local European army. The Committee insist that everything connected with our Indian Empire is of an exceptional and unparalleled character, "to which the ordinary practice of European States is absolutely inapplicable." In the first place England is a naval power, whose people and Government have always been jealous of a large standing army; and secondly, it has been laid down by the British Government as a principle admitting of no variation, that India shall "meet the charges, civil and military, of the Anglo-Indian administration from its own resources." It is thus necessary to limit the amount of force to be employed in that country by the proportion of revenue available for its maintenance. "The question, therefore, is not what is the best devisable military occupation of the country, but what is the best that can be afforded." The inseparable connection which exists between military questions and expenditure has been so explicitly recognised by Act 21 & 22 Vict. c. 106 "for the better government of India," that the Committee are unanimously of opinion that any arrangement which would tend to withdraw the armies of India from the direct control of the Governor-general in Council would be "a practical violation of the spirit and of the letter of the Act in which Parliament has, as in all former Acts, jealously guarded the application of the revenues of India." But if the whole European force in India be transferred to the control of her Majesty's Commander-in-Chief in England, the Viceroy and the Secretary of State would each be placed in a subordinate position on every question however remotely connected with discipline or organization. Their functions, in fact, would be reduced in such matters to those of treasurer and cashier to the Horse Guards. Owing, however, to the peculiar tenure by which we hold our Asiatic empire, it is essential that the Governor-general should be invested with almost absolute power. His position is virtually that of Captain-general, and everything may depend "upon the manner in which he wields the forces at his disposal, and on those forces regarding him as the judge of their conduct, the rewarder of their merit and fidelity; in a word, as the representative of her Majesty." Critical times may yet be in store for us, and it is indispensable that in the hour of trial the Viceroy's hands should not be weakened by a division of power. Collisions have before now taken place between the Governor-general and the Commander-in-Chief, and the chance of such a regrettable incident would be increased, if the latter looked mainly to the Horse Guards.

Moreover, the amalgamation proposed by the Royal Commissioners, and adopted by her Majesty's ministers, is in direct contravention of Clause 56 of the Act, which gives assurance to the Indian armies "that they are to remain under existing conditions of service, and to be entitled to like pay, pensions, allowances, and privileges, and the like advantages as regards promotion and otherwise, as if they had continued in the service of the said company." The Madras and Bombay armies remain intact, while that of Bengal affords anything but a tabula rasa, so that even prospective arrangements must be reconciled with the engagements already binding on the Government. And what reason is there to fear that the Crown, by doing simple justice to its Indian armies, will sow "the seed of serious and noxious professional jealousies between the line and the local forces?" Emulation there may be, but no prejudicial feelings of jealousy need exist. The Committee further regard the late disaffection of the local European troops as entirely exceptional, and not likely ever to recur; but should it so happen that the European soldiery in India should ever imagine it to be their interest to oppose the Government, it would be found an advantage that they could not "count upon the sympathy and support of their whole body." That organisation which offers the best security against combination is consequently the most desirable.

The Committee then allude to the exaggerated influence attributed to "discipline" by the Royal Commissioners, as if it had power to change national and hereditary character and dispositions.

"To judge," say they, "from some of the evidence and remarks appended to the Report of the Royal Commissioners, it might be inferred that discipline was far more effective than education, religion, habits of thought, and social influences, and that it could prevail over all these in some miraculous manner. This is fallacious. The effect of discipline has a certain range, beyond which it ceases to be operative; and it is precisely when you reach this boundary that an officer, if a superior man, and under favourable circumstances, will carry his troops with him. No amount of personal influence will, at all times, avail to control Asiatics where their religious fanaticism, sympathies, and passions are inflamed and they rush madly into the vortex of revolts."

The Committee demand that the local European troops having proved equal to any troops in the world, should be largely increased "on the score of economy, of efficiency, and of encouragement to merit." This local force they regard as the permanent garrison of India, and recommend that it should constitute two-thirds of the entire European infantry and three-fourths of the entire European cavalry maintained in that country: each infantry regiment numbering 800 bayonets, each cavalry regiment 500 sabres. They are also convinced that a native army is positively indispensable, though it should be kept at "the minimum compatible with the maintenance of order and public security over a vast area." This minimum, however, they leave for the present undecided, but fix the European forces at about 70,000, to which must be added from 10,000 to 15,000 men at the depots, or in transit. They admit that the extension of the local army must be the work of time, and that line regiments can be only gradually withdrawn as local corps are organized to take their place. The Madras cavalry they would immediately convert into three regiments of European and five of irregular cavalry; and the Bombay cavalry in an analogous manner. The artillery, they are of opinion, should be exclusively a local force, and entirely European, with the exception of a few batteries for frontier purposes and unhealthy localities; the Enfield rifle they would also intrust to Europeans alone. For the present they estimate the artillery force for the three Presidencies at 20,000 men, and urge the early withdrawal of the four companies of Royal Engineers now in India.

With regard to exchanges between officers of the line and of the local European force, the Committee are at a loss to perceive how any such arrangements can be effected unless Government are prepared to incur responsibility for annuities to a capitalized value of three and a half millions sterling, and to guarantee all the liabilities of the funds, past, present, and future.

The extension of the military police system in supersession of the civil police is deprecated as likely to be a source of future danger. The village police as well as the civil police may be susceptible of improvement, but both should be preserved. A native force, consisting of 35,000 infantry and 45,000 military police levies, is estimated as an ample peace establishment for the Bengal Presidency, and one that "affords a margin for safe expansion of the native element in time of war." The proposal to combine European and native soldiery in the same regiment is unhesitatingly condemned, as is also the suggestion to raise regiments in tropical countries for service in India. "The Committee prefer that every exertion should be made, by the care taken that our native troops be officered by well-educated gentlemen, to render our native armies, under the presidency of the European officers, schools of order and discipline, tending to the weakening of prejudice and the advancement of civilization." As it is in contemplation to augment the power of commanding officers of native regiments, the necessity arises of fixing a higher scale of qualifications for young officers. The advisability of cadets acquiring the rudimentary part of their professional education from a European regiment previous to being attached to native corps is also fully recognised.

After touching upon some other points of comparatively minor interest and importance, the Committee recommend that her Majesty's Viceroy in India should henceforth bear the title of Captain-general of the Forces in India, and that the generals in command of the armies of the three presidencies should be simply designated Commanders of Forces, without being entitled to a seat in Council, which is apt to militate against the active supervision which can alone maintain an efficient state of discipline. "Under the Captain-general there should be a Minister of War, by whom all the administrative details of the armies in India should be carried on. The duties now performed by the Commander-in-chief should be divided between the Minister of War and Commanders of Forces for each province." Officers withdrawn from their regiments for civil employment should be seconded, in the manner recommended by Lord Canning, which if not all that could be desired is at least more economical than any other expedient yet discovered. This Report is signed by J. P. Willoughby, John Lawrence, R. J. H. Vivian, H. M. Durand, and Wm. J. Eastwick.

MADRAS MILITARY FUND.

An article having recently appeared in the columns of a contemporary, calculated to give a very erroneous impression as to the actual position of the Madras Military Fund, we have been favoured by Messrs. Grindlay and Co. with the real facts of the case, which certainly do not justify the slightest apprehension as to the solvency of that excellent institution. The following extract from a letter addressed to us by that eminent firm can hardly fail to carry conviction to the minds of the most timid and suspicious:—

"The deficit alleged by the late Mr. Griffith Davies to have existed in 1842 and 1843 was provided for by an additional levy of 10 per cent. upon all subscriptions and donations, and although the necessity of resorting to such a measure was much doubted at the time by highly competent authorities, one of whom, Colonel De Havilland, a well known actuary, may be specially mentioned; the additional levy, at first limited to five years, has been continued ever since. When Mr. Davies was no longer able to perform the duties of actuary, the late Mr. Jones, of the Universal Insurance Office, was employed, and the opinion at which that gentleman arrived in reference to the state of the fund was, that there was no necessity to continue the additional 10 per cent. After the death of Mr. Jones, Mr. Ansell, of the Atlas Office, was consulted, and applying the same formula as Mr. Davies in valuing the assets and liabilities of the Fund at different periods of ten years, Mr. Ansell reported that the deficit alluded to no longer existed, and expressed his conviction that upon more minute examination it would be proved that either the benefits might be increased, or the payments lessened. Mr. Ansell's time being too much occupied to permit him to give the required attention to the interests of the Fund, he resigned the appointment of actuary, and Colonel J. T. Smith, late of the Madras Engineers, was appointed in his place, Messrs. Brown and Hardy, the eminent Actuaries, being associated with him. Upon this branch of the subject it only remains for us to add, that a few weeks past these gentlemen forwarded to the Directors an official recommendation that the 10 per cent. addition, if not wholly abrogated, should at least be temporarily discontinued. The authority in succession of all the actuaries who have been engaged upon the Fund being thus found to concur as to its stability, furnishes the best refutation of the assertion that serious doubts exist as to the position of the Madras Military Fund.

"With reference to the aids granted to insane unmarried subscribers, and the wives and families of insane married subscribers, we would observe that, at present no considerable addition has been made to the liabilities of the Institution, and in order that this may not occur, it is specially provided by the regulations that all these grants be limited to five years from the 19th of August, 1858, the actuary to be furnished with all necessary data and statistics six months previous to the expiration of the period named, with a view to his forming an opinion as to the effect the measure has upon the funds of the institution, in time to enable the Directors to discontinue the grant, should the report be adverse to the interests of the Fund at the end of the allotted time."

"In this provision we have an effectual guarantee against excessive grants, and a complete answer to the prophesy that 'in the course of a few years, embarrassment must result from this additional and unlooked for expenditure.'

"We have been agents for the Madras Military Fund for fifteen years, during which period the Directors in India and the Home Committee here have been extremely desirous of a thorough investigation into the state of the Fund, and although they have not fully succeeded in their efforts, enough has been done to test the resources of the Institution, and to show that it is capable of fulfilling all its engagements to the letter. Moreover, an annual audit of the accounts by disinterested parties was long since established, and it must be a source of great gratification to the Directors at Madras, that whatever opinion may be held in any quarter upon the abstract merits of 'irresponsible managers,' they are in a position to prove to all concerned, that a very flourishing state of things does exist in the Fund."

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE MINISTERIAL SCHEME.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—A more important question as regards the safety of our Indian empire cannot be conceived than that brought before the House of Commons on Tuesday last, the 13th instant, by the Right Hon. Sir Charles Wood. The motion is to rescind so much of the Act of the 23rd Victoria, chap. 27, which empowers the Secretary of State for India in Council to raise men for her Majesty's local European forces in India. The right hon. baronet has argued this point as if it were a simple question to remodel an army of three hundred thousand men of different nations, and governed under separate rules, but which army has, up to this time, in spite of this apparent incongruity, brought under British authority within one hundred years a continent larger than that of Europe west of the Russian dominions, and more populous by about twenty millions of inhabitants. The motion of the right hon. baronet involves the question of a total reorganisation of this vast military body, though he has endeavoured to narrow it, so as to affect only that portion of the European forces hitherto localised in India. His view, and that of the ministry, is to take from under the immediate authority of the Indian administration, whether in England or in India, that portion of the European force hitherto governed by rules emanating from the legislative powers acting on the part of the Crown in this country. The right hon. baronet confesses that opinions are nearly equally divided on the subject of amalgamating the European forces in India, and placing the whole under the Horse Guards, or allowing one portion to be permanently located in India, while the troops of the line should be sent out from time to time, as heretofore, to take part in the military operations in that quarter of the world. The two chief reasons for amalgamating these bodies are, first, that European troops being long absent in India or, the colonies lose their discipline and interior economy, and the relative authority and obedience between the officers and the men which prevail in her Majesty's army in England are shaken. It is notorious that the internal economy of a regiment depends entirely on the character of the commanding officer, as well as on the superior officer of a division or Commander in Chief, and as every regiment in India is inspected by a superior officer once in six months, any deficiency of discipline ought at once to be corrected. "Of the gallantry, bravery, and endurance of the Indian army (the right hon. baronet admits) no one has ever expressed a doubt." The necessity for the amalgamation is founded upon other grounds, namely, on the danger of a separate local body of Europeans rising against the Government, as it is attempted to be shown was the case in the late discontent of the company of European soldiers, when nearly one-half of their number accepted the alternative of their discharge unless willing to serve as Queen's soldiers without bounty. Now, much misapprehension on this subject has gone abroad, which it is but fair to the parties themselves to clear up. The European soldiers of the Company's army were enlisted for ten years to serve the Company, for which they received bounty, as is usual on entering the service of the Crown. They were enlisted for general service, that is to say, in any branch and in any corps, while the Queen's soldiers are enlisted for particular regiments, and cannot be drafted into others without their consent, for which it is usual to give their bounty. A premium was invariably granted when the Queen's soldiers volunteered into the Company's service. On the transfer of the Company's army to the Crown the Company's soldiers applied for the same bounty as the Queen's troops received on their transfer to the Company's service. Could anything be more reasonable? The application was made at first respectfully through their officers as soon as the Queen's proclamation was promulgated in India in Nov. 1858. The men were told that the question could not be decided in India, and under the conviction that this most reasonable prayer would be acceded to, they did their duty gallantly under their noble Commander-in-chief and their officers in the last campaign which commenced in Jan. 1859. No sooner was it at an end than it was announced by the Governor-general that their claim had been rejected in England. All the fair and reasonable expectations of the local army were blasted, and they then demanded either their bounty or the discharge to which (quoting Lord Palmerston's opinion on the debate on the transfer of the Indian Government they stated) they were entitled. The judicious manner in which this serious discontent was dealt with by Lord Clyde at once brought the question to an issue. Less than one-half of the Company's Europeans, the greater part of whom were recruits of not more than a year's standing, accepted the condition held out to them by Lord Palmerston. We heard of no violence, except in one instance, in Bengal, and it was immediately put down without trouble or bloodshed. The unwise proceeding of the Government, both at home and abroad, involved a vast unnecessary expense; and in order to replace the ten thousand men who obtained their discharge a sum of little less than a million sterling will be expended before the same number of Europeans are replaced. In the mean time India is deprived of their services. The right hon. baronet stated that "Lord Clyde was of opinion that the power of combination possessed by a large local body of troops in India was most dangerous." Not more so than anywhere else, and least of all among the Europeans in India, where they are an isolated body, without support; and his lordship went on to state, "The extent to which it was carried in that old body, the Bengal artillery exceeded that of the sepoys." How that could be it is difficult to imagine. In a letter to H.R.H. the Commander-in-chief he observes, "I beg leave again to draw your attention to the fact of the passive participation of the non-commissioned officers, and so-called good men, who were so near the commission of the worst crime. Even in the old regiments the men have not confidence in their officers. In my mind I must accuse the old soldiers of the Bengal artillery of having been the prime movers in all this bad business." If the men had any just claim to the same bounty on entering into the service of the Queen as those of the Queen's on being transferred from one service to another, it cannot be matter of wonder that the non-commissioned and old soldiers who had the same claims should have sympathised with their comrades. Nor can it be subject of surprise that the men had no confidence in their officers, who deemed it their duty to put down rising discontent, though in support of an unjust cause; and it was natural that when the alternative of a discharge was offered to them they availed themselves of it. But how were they discharged? They were embarked on board ships ill found with necessaries and provisions, like so many convicts. Though their pay ceased from the day of embarkation it was withheld from them till they reached England. They were carried on board by an officer of each branch of the service to which they belonged, in the proportion of 1 to 100 or 150, and such was the discipline to which they had been accustomed that they readily acceded to the desire of their officers to nominate non-commissioned officers among them during the voyage. Their conduct was in all respects unexceptionable, as reported by their officers on their landing, while in the very few instances of misconduct they were subjected to punishment without a murmur from the other men. The discontent in the Company's European troops on the occasion referred to arose out of a rational conviction of injustice towards them, and I have no hesitation in saying that, had it equally affected the corps in her Majesty's service in India, the same circumstances would have occurred. Soldiers and sailors in all countries—and more especially Englishmen—will not endure injustice without an effort to avert it, and we might just as well have distrusted our navy after the mutiny at the Nore, as now distrust any body of European local troops placed under the authority of the Governor-general and Commander-in-Chief in India. Sir W. Mansfield calls it the "Handwriting on the Wall." It is so. It is a warning not to be unjust either to European or Native troops, under whatever title they may serve. The right hon. baronet says, "I would ask whether it is desirable to raise in the same country and from the same class two bodies of men upon the same principles" but ruled by different authorities, and guided by different forms of military discipline? The answer to which is simply that the very fact occurs in the British army, where the troops of the line and those of the ordnance department have been for nearly two centuries derived from the same class, two bodies of men have been raised, acting together, but ruled by different authorities, and guided by different forms of military discipline. That is to say the grades among the officers are different, the rules for promotion are different, their mode of filling up casualties are as different as the practice now existing between the local European troops and her Majesty's troops of the line in India.

The right hon. baronet has stated that "It has never been contended that the whole of the Indian army should be local," but it had better be so than disorganise, as the whole Indian army is likely to be, under the scheme of which the right hon. baronet has foreshadowed the outline. There would be no more inconsistency in the Queen's army in India being placed under a secretary for India and a council, to protect its interests, than in H.M.'s navy being placed under a First Lord and a Board of Admiralty—excepting only that in time of peace in Europe India has always afforded an opportunity for training the army of England to perform its duty in the field, that is not required for the navy, which is always on active service.

The proposed amalgamation must necessarily lead to considerable alterations in the condition of the officers of the Indian army, and probably to a totally new reorganization of the Native troops. This latter branch of the subject is so large, and the opinions of the officers and statesmen who have served with these troops, or who have written on the subject, are so various, that it must form the subject of another letter. Enough, however, has been said in the motion of the Right Hon. Sir Charles Wood on this point, to leave little room to doubt the principle on which the new organization is to be proposed.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 8.

THE CIVILIANS KILLED IN THE LATE INDIAN MUTINY.

MR. VANSITTART asked the Secretary of State for India whether the names of those civilians on the Bengal establishment who were killed in action, murdered, or died from wounds and exposure during the late mutiny, between the 11th May and the 19th November, 1857, had at any time been brought under the notice of the Government; and whether he intended to do honour to their memory by the erection of a monument? Her Majesty had been graciously pleased to confer the highest honours upon many persons who had distinguished themselves, either in a military, naval, or civil capacity during the late mutiny in India; but no allusion had been made to the civilians on the Bengal establishment who were sacrificed during the late mutiny between the 11th of May and the 19th of November, 1857, except on one occasion. Mr. Mangles—a name which was well known to the House—when chairman of the East India Company, addressed an assembly of the pupils at Haileybury College in touching terms upon the subject, and used the following language:—"Let me also say that I intend to propose to my colleagues to erect a tablet in your chapel to the memory of those of the civil servants in India, educated at Haileybury, who have fallen in this atrocious mutiny, and I trust it will go down to the latest posterity as a memorial of their deeds, and of the gratitude, not only of the East India Company, but of the country, for their services." Since then her Majesty's Government had introduced a measure into parliament which completely changed the constitution of the Indian Government. He supposed that this important subject had escaped their notice in consequence. He therefore ventured to bring the subject under their notice, in the hope that it would meet with their earliest consideration; and that due honour would be at length done to a number of gallant men who deserved the lasting gratitude of their country. He should now proceed to read a list of civilians on the Bengal establishment who were killed in action, murdered, or died from wounds and exposure during the late mutiny between the 11th of May and the 19th November, 1857:—Mr. T. R. Colvin, governor of North-west Provinces; Mr. W. C. Watson, Agra; Mr. H. E. Cockerell, Banda; Messrs. D. Robertson and G. D. Raikes, Bareilly; Messrs. R. B. Thornhill, C. G. Hillersdon, J. R. Mackillop, and R. N. Lewis, Cawnpore; Messrs. S. Fraser, T. R. Hutchinson, H. H. Greathed, and A. Galloway, Delhi; Mr. R. T. Tucker, Futtehpoore; Mr. R. H. Pomeroy, Ghazepore; Mr. W. Clifford, Goorgaon; Mr. W. R. Moore, Gopeegunge; Mr. J. Wedderburn, Hissar; Messrs. J. K. Loyd and D. Grant, Humeerpore; Mr. B. R. Cuppage, Juanpore; Mr. A. Johnstone, Meerut; Messrs. G. F. Christian, M. C. Ommaney, A. H. G. Block, C. W. Cunliffe, A. Jenkins, H. B. Thornhill, J. B. Thornhill, J. G. Thomason, G. T. Benson, H. Gonne, and Sir Mountstuart Jackson, Oude, and most of them at Lucknow; Messrs. M. Ricketts, C. J. Jenkins, and A. C. Smith, Shahjehanpore.

THE ARMY OF INDIA.

MR. KENNARD had seen in one of the public journals a statement that it was intended that the officers of the native regiments which had mutinied should be allowed to retain their staff appointments, by which the whole or nearly the whole of them had been provided for. If those officers who had lost their troops were to be rewarded with staff appointments, he (Mr. Kennard) should ask what ought to be the reward of those who had retained their troops during the time of the mutiny? Of the whole seventy-four regiments of the Bengal army only four remained faithful—the 21st, 31st, 66th, and 73rd. The 66th was a Ghoorka regiment, composed almost entirely of Nepaulese, and containing but very few Hindostanees. The 21st and 73rd had never been disbanded, but had not been, he believed, employed on active service; but the Ghoorka and the 31st regiment had been so employed. The Governor-General had, in a general order in council, dated the 8th September, referred to them. On several occasions the 31st regiment performed essential service in the destruction of large numbers of rebels. He had not heard of any reward being proposed or any compliment being paid to the officers of those regiments. The 31st had been made a light infantry regiment; but, with that exception, he had not heard of any other permanent recognition of their services. He begged to ask the Secretary of State for India whether it was the intention of her Majesty's Government to reward the services of those officers of the Bengal native army whose regiments remained faithful to the British Government during the late mutiny.

Sir C. Wood, in answer to the question of the hon. member for Windsor (Mr. Vansittart), said it was true that the chairman of the court of directors had announced the intention of erecting a tablet in the chapel of Haileybury to the memory of the civil servants who were killed during the mutiny. Nothing could be more appropriate than such a monument in the chapel of the seminary of the civil service; but as Haileybury had ceased to be kept up a doubt occurred as to the intention being carried out. When other sites were under consideration it seemed difficult to confine the monument to the civil servants only. The question had assumed much larger dimensions since the time when the original announcement was made. Nothing definite had been done. As to the question of the hon. member for Newport (Mr. Kennard), he thought it had been put under some misapprehension of the statement in the newspapers. The Government, as far as it was in their power, rewarded those officers who were recommended by the Commander-in-Chief, and those rewards were not based on the fact that the regiment had mutinied or had not.

DISARMING THE NATIVES OF INDIA.

MR. H. BAILLIE, in moving for an address for copies of all correspondence with the several Governments of India, regarding the disarming of the natives, together with any minutes or opinions recorded by members of the late Court of Directors previously to the transfer of the Indian Government to her Majesty, and subsequently of the Council of India, having reference to the same subject, remarked that there was no mode of punishment, no disgrace, no humiliation, so great in the eyes of a proud and warlike people as being deprived of their arms. When the people of Oude and elsewhere had taken up arms against us they were conquered in fair fight, and as a matter of course were obliged to submit to the penalty, and that was not the disarming he complained of. What he complained of was, that the disarming should be carried on indiscriminately, and in those territories where the people had shown no hostility, where they had not rebelled, but where, in spite of strong temptation to a different course, they had remained tranquil. To disarm in such a case was not only unnecessary, it was tyrannical and oppressive. Nevertheless, the Government of India had adopted this course, and with a severity altogether unjustifiable. He held in his hand an extract from a letter from an Indian officer of rank and position. It was dated in 1859. The writer stated, "My opinion now is that we are hated cordially; and the mode in which the disarming act is carried out is in a great measure the cause of it. The arms were collected by the use of torture. The natives were tied up, and flogged, and tortured to make them confess where their arms were concealed; and sometimes the flogging produced nothing. The men employed were chiefly youngsters, inexperienced, and likely to commit all sorts of folly." Well, this did not appear to be a very satisfactory mode of inaugurating her Majesty's reign in India, nor of convincing the people of the great advantages they were likely to derive from subjection to British dominion. Some years ago a statement was made in the House of Commons that torture was employed in India by the Government. The statement was received with incredulity, and indignantly denied by those who had administered the affairs of India. But the House of Commons thought that inquiries should be made. Inquiries were made accordingly, and it turned out that torture was not only carried on, but that it was so common that it was used as the ordinary mode of collecting their revenue. Villages, too, had been burned down and rased to the ground in Goojerat, for no other reason than that the people were supposed to have concealed their arms. And this was in the territory of an independent prince, an ally of the British Crown. The Indian Government had obtained the permission of that prince to the disarmament of his subjects; but it was on that account the more to be regretted that the measure had been carried out under circumstances of great severity. He trusted that there would be no objection to the production of the papers, for which he then begged leave, in conclusion, to move.

Colonel SYKES seconded the motion. He had always disapproved of that measure of disarmament. The bearing of arms was a mark of honour among the natives of India, and the Government which deprived them of that honour excited their deepest hostility and resentment.

Sir C. WOOD said he had no objection to the production of those papers. He should observe, however, that that disarmament had been adopted as a measure of safety, and not as a punishment. An attempt had been made to excite an insurrection in Goojerat, but it had not been successful, from the very fact that the people had previously been deprived of their arms.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 12.

REORGANIZATION OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

Sir C. WOOD moved for leave to bring in a Bill to repeal so much of the Act 22nd and 23rd of Victoria, cap. 27, as enabled the Secretary of State for India to raise in this country men for her Majesty's local European forces in India, observing that he had adopted this as the simplest mode of testing the opinion of the House on the principle, without entering into minute details. He explained the nature of the force in question. The East India Company, he observed, had maintained three armies, one at each Presidency, part of which consisted of Europeans enlisted in this country for local service in India, the proportion of which to the Royal troops, paid by the Company, was latterly as two to one. After the Sepoy mutiny was over discontent arose in the local troops, and many of them were discharged and sent home. The question, and the only question, was whether a separate European force should be still maintained for the special service of India, or whether the whole of the European force employed in India should form part of the Queen's army, disposable for general service. Upon no question which he had been called upon to consider, he observed, had he entertained more serious and longer doubts; he had at length come to the conclusion that it was not expedient to have a local force in India, which, in present circumstances, would require not the continuance of an existing force, but the raising of a new large local force. He proceeded to state the reasons and arguments which had led to that conclusion, and the pleas which it was incumbent upon those to make out who advocated the maintenance of two separate forces, raised from the same class, yet placed in different circumstances, and subject to distinct authorities. He read the opinions of persons in high positions, some having been once in favour of a local army, who had changed their views in consequence of the misconduct of the late local force,—an occurrence which he thought ought to operate as a warning, the danger of combination being less in a moveable force than in one located in India. He discussed the objections to the proposal, one of which was financial—namely, the greater expense of Queen's troops; but, he remarked, besides that the most efficient force was the cheapest, the excess of cost was not so great as to weigh in the question. There was only one consideration, indeed, which was a serious one, requiring to be well weighed, and it had led him for some time to entertain doubts of the expediency of amalgamating the armies,—that was, the argument that it would be difficult to obtain a supply of officers for Indian service. He enumerated some of the attractions that would be opened to the Indian service by a scheme of amalgamation, and came to the conclusion that the line would supply an adequate number of officers. In conclusion, he urged that both for Indian and Imperial reasons it was essential that our military power, upon which our chief reliance must be placed, should be maintained in a state of discipline and efficiency, and that object could be best attained by one uniform force.

On the motion of Lord STANLEY, the debate was adjourned till Thursday, June 21st.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—JUNE 18.

EUROPEAN TROOPS IN INDIA.

The Marquis of CLANRICARDE moved for a return of the number of local European regiments in each of the presidencies of British India, and the total amount of that force on the 1st of Jan., 1830, 1835, 1840, 1845, 1850, and 1856; also for a return of the number of regiments and the total amount of forces of the Queen's army in the same presidencies at the same periods.

The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH said it was extremely proper that the information now asked for should be supplied; and, at the same time, he would suggest for the consideration of the Government a matter upon which silence had hitherto been observed, and which, though of great importance, must, he presumed, have escaped attention. One of the reasons assigned for the amalgamation of her Majesty's army and the local army was that it would be most desirable that all the regiments serving in India should from time to time come to this country. Now, it was impossible for Parliament, within any period to which they might reasonably look forward, to give effect to that object. He apprehended that Parliament would be bound by its own solemn pledge recently given, within the last two years, and that it would not impose what hitherto it never had imposed—compulsory service upon any body of soldiers whatever. The position in which the affair stood was this:—The Company's army was transferred to the Crown, subject to the same conditions as those on which it was held by the Company—that is to say, it was liable to serve within the same territorial limits only as if it had continued in the service of the Company. It was impossible, therefore, for Parliament to give to the Crown any power to send from India to England any portion of that force unless the men should choose, on being discharged from the service, to re-enlist as if they had entered into one of the Queen's regiments. Now, it would be rather dangerous to let the bird loose from the cage in the hope of its flying back into the window. That experiment had lately been tried, and had failed. Last year they had lost 16,000 men, and this year it was possible they might lose 15,000 more. It was not until the expiration of the men's service, which continued for ten years, and of the officers' service, which continued for life, that it would be possible for the Government, under any circumstances, to direct the transfer of any local force now in India to this country.

The motion for returns was agreed to, after a few words from Earl GRANVILLE and Viscount HARDING.

EAST INDIA COMPANY.

A quarterly general meeting of the proprietors of East India Stock was held on the 11th June, at the India-house, Leadenhall-street, Colonel SYKES, chairman of the Court of Directors, presiding.

The CHAIRMAN announced that the warrants for the dividends payable on the 6th of July next would be ready for delivery on that day.

The Secretary read the following statement:—

THE PROPOSED GOVERNMENT BILL.

The CHAIRMAN informed the court that the proposed Bill to transfer the capital stock of the company to the Government had not yet been prepared. After a fruitless correspondence with the Secretary of State for India, he addressed himself personally to Sir Charles Wood on the subject, telling him that he had no more right to interfere with the payments of the dividends of the Company than he had with any railway stock in this country. As soon as the Bill should be furnished to the Court of Directors they would, in accordance with the resolution passed at the last meeting, open a communication with the Bank of England, but until the Court were in possession of the proposal of the Government they deemed it to be premature to attempt making any arrangements with the Bank.

Mr. CRAWSHAY, as the mover of the resolution referred to by the chairman, said that he certainly understood that the directors would have communicated with the Bank of England without waiting for any further communication from the Government. By doing so all blame of delay would have rested solely upon the Secretary of State for India. He therefore moved that the directors be respectfully requested not to wait any longer for any communication respecting the proposed Bill before applying to the Bank of England on the subject of an arrangement for the future payment of the dividends of the company, according to the resolution passed at the last general court.

Mr. JONES seconded the motion.

Dr. BEATTIE thought it possible that if the Directors were to take immediate action the proposed Bill might be found to be unnecessary.

Mr. DENT said the intention of the Government was not merely to take upon itself the payment of the Company's dividends, but also all the multifarious transactions of the Home Indian Government; no arrangement, therefore, which the company could make with the Bank of England could possibly render the Bill unnecessary. The Bank, it was known, was prepared to accede to the Government proposition; it would be premature, therefore, for the Company to apply to the Bank for an arrangement, as it was not certain that the Company would have any funds to deal with. He hoped, under the circumstances, the hon. proprietor would withdraw his motion.

Mr. CRAWSHAY believed a very serious error of judgment would be committed if the Court were to wait for the Bill. His object was to throw the whole responsibility on the Secretary of State. He could not, therefore, consent to withdraw his motion.

The CHAIRMAN said the Court of Directors did not think it would be suitable with their dignity to endeavour to make an arrangement with the Bank of England when it was not certain that the Secretary of State for India would give them the funds by means of which they could carry out any such arrangement. The Directors, however, were entirely in the hands of the proprietors on this question.

After some further discussion the motion was agreed to.

THE AFFGHAN WAR.

Mr. CHAWSHAY then rose to move,—

"That the thanks of this Court be given to Mr. Hadfield, Sir Henry Willoughby, Mr. Dunlop, Mr. Black, Mr. Kinnaird, Mr. Ewart, and the other members of the House of Commons to whose exertions it is due that the important evidence contained in the papers relating to the Affghan war which were laid before Parliament last session has been published, after a period of twenty years, during which every effort to procure its production had failed."

Dr. BEATTIE seconded the motion.

After a few words from Mr. COOK and Dr. SAYER,

The CHAIRMAN said no doubt these gentlemen were entitled to the thanks of the Court. The Affghan war was an iniquitous war, and the Court of Directors had always set their faces against it. It was partly done in India, and partly in England; partly by Lord Auckland, and partly by the Board of Control. It was entirely for an European purpose—to prevent the necessity of sending a fleet to the Baltic; and in order to do that a heavy charge was imposed upon the revenues of India.

The motion was unanimously agreed to.

MR. WILSON'S FINANCIAL SCHEME.

Mr. JONES then brought forward the following motion, of which he had given notice:—

"That Mr. Wilson's scheme for the paper currency of India is false in commercial policy, discreditable in operation, and dangerous to the dignity of the Crown."

The hon. proprietor addressed the Court at considerable length on the evils of a paper currency, and was proceeding to point out the circumstances which would make such a financial system peculiarly injurious in its application to India, when

Mr. CRAWSHAY rose to move, "That the discussion be adjourned to a future day."

Mr. JONES, on being informed that he would remain in possession of the Court, assented to the motion, and the question was accordingly adjourned.

Mr. CRAWSHAY called attention to the changes that were about to be made at the India-house, and expressed a hope that proper measures would be taken to secure the magnificent Oriental library which the East India Company had been the means of forming. Such works as it contained ought to be kept by themselves under the care of some eminent Sanscrit scholar. He deprecated the idea of transferring the library to the British Museum.

The CHAIRMAN said that Sir Charles Wood had pledged his word that the library should be kept intact, but he did not say where.

Mr. S. BOULDERSON gave notice of a motion that a protest shall be entered against the sale of the India-house; or, if sold, that the amount realized shall be appropriated as a guarantee for the payment of India Stock.

Adjourned.

THE ROYAL INDIAN MILITARY COLLEGE AT ADDISCOMBE.

On the 8th inst. the half-yearly public examination of the gentlemen cadets destined to serve in her Majesty's forces in India was held at the Military College of Addiscombe, near Croydon, the Right Hon. Sir Charles Wood, M.P., Secretary of State for India, presiding.

For the second time, after an interval of several years, the ceremony was honoured with the presence of his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, the General Commanding-in-Chief. The Council of India was represented by Sir F. Currie, Vice-President; Mr. Eastwick, Major-General Sir Robert Vivian, K.C.B., Sir John Lawrence, G.C.B., Colonel Sir Proby Cautley, K.C.B., Mr. Arbuthnot, Colonel Baker, military secretary to the Secretary of State for India in Council; Major-General Rumley and Colonel Addison, members of the Council of Education, were present; as was also Sir Cursetjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, just arrived from India, the son of the first baronet, Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, of Bombay, whose munificence in aid of philanthropic and benevolent objects is almost fabulous, for it is understood that he spent no less than £300,000 in that way in the course of his life.

No general invitations were issued on this occasion, the attendance being limited to the Staff of the College, including Lieutenant-General Sir Frederick Smith, K.H., M.P., the Public Examiner, Major-General Sir Frederick Abbott, G.B., the Lieut.-Governor, the Rev. J. Cape, and the other professors, Colonel Sandham, Royal Engineering Establishment, Chatham (under whom the engineer cadets subsequently go through a course of engineering, civil and military); Lieut.-General Sir G. Pollock, G.C.B.; and the friends of the gentlemen cadets examined.

Fifty-nine cadets were brought forward for examination. Of this number sixteen were reported by the public examiner fully qualified for the engineers, viz.:—Allan Joseph Champneys Cunningham, Henry Wilberforce Clarke, William Percival Tomkins, James Dundas, Henry Trotter, Henry Cotterill Smith, Arthur Frank Hamilton, Malcolm Arbuthnot Alves, Charles Strahan, James Hallifax Western, George Macdonald Cruickshank, Justin Charles Ross, Francis Frederick Cotton, William Gordon Cumming, William Broadfoot, George Frederick Leicester Marshall.

Seventeen were reported qualified for the Artillery, viz.:—John Arthur Armstrong, Frederick Alexander Wilson, Francis James Caldecott, Alan Coulstoun Gardner, Arthur Conolly, Frank Lodge, Henry Shakespear Higginson, Edward Harris Steel, Stewart James Fraser Mackenzie, Vincent Rivaz, Henry Cariston Seton, Edward Joseph De Lantour, Samuel George Drury Turner, Charles Edward Salkeld, James Edward Alexander, Robert Bland Hewson, and William Allan Blane.

And twenty-six for the Infantry, viz.:—Montague Jocelyn King Harman, Henry Eliot Yorke, Archibald Iver Maclaverty, Alfred Tritton Wintle, Alexander Dingwall Anderson, Francis Peere, William Freeman, Emanuel Montefiore, Matthew Richard West, George Roland Gambier, Douglas Weston Lawrell, George Swinley, Hugh Alexander Douglas, Augustus John Lavie, Frederick Robertson Twynnam, Charles Fleming Gleig, Sumner Merle Binny, Joseph George Thomson Carruthers, Aislabie Carruthers Budd, Beville Granville Vyvyan, Henry Beal, John Ronald Campbell, Edwin Wilson Gresham Williams, Alfred Wheler Bird, Philip Justice, and John Becke.

The report of the Public Examiner and Inspector of Studies having been read the prizes were distributed by Sir Charles Wood as follows:

FIRST CLASS.

Allan J. C. Cunningham, Pollock Medal, Mathematics and geology.

Henry W. Clarke, 2nd good conduct, 1st mathematics, 2nd military surveying, and 2nd Hindustani.

W. Percival Tomkins, 1st good conduct, first fortification, 1st military drawing.

James Dundas, 3rd good conduct, military surveying and Latin.

Henry Trotter, French and Latin.

Henry C. Smith, 1st military surveying, 2nd civil drawing, 1st Hindustani.

Charles Strahan, 2nd fortification.

James H. Western, 2nd mathematics.

George M. Cruickshank, French.

William Broadfoot, military drawing and civil drawing.

George F. L. Marshall, fortification.

John A. Armstrong, 1st civil drawing and 2nd military drawing.

Henry E. Yorke, 4th good conduct.

Arthur Conolly, Hindustani.

Sumner M. Binny, photography.

SECOND CLASS.

George H. Jackson, mathematics and military surveying.

Thomas H. Holdich, fortification.

John A. Temple, military drawing, civil drawing, and Latin.

John M. Trotter, Hindustani.

Ernest G. Cattermole, French.

Sir C. Wood then addressed the cadets. He said—I have great pleasure in attending this examination, and in hearing and seeing the ability with which those who have been examined have acquitted themselves in going through the different tasks which Sir Frederick Smith has imposed upon them. I am still more glad to hear, from the report which has been read, that there has been no examination here in which more ability has been generally shown than by the cadets who have completed their instruction in this term. But I am still more pleased—if I may say so—to be enabled to confirm a report which Major-General Sir Frederick Abbott has made to us, the Council of India, as to the general good conduct of the whole of the cadets now being trained in this institution. This is the first term in which any persons attending this college have been introduced by another mode than that which was heretofore obtained; and, though I do not think it is possible that among English gentlemen any differences or jealousy will exist, yet it is satisfactory to learn that nothing can exceed the good feeling and harmony which have prevailed among the whole cadets connected with the college during the past term. I hope that is an earnest for the future that, however gentlemen may be brought together here, their conduct will be distinguished by the same good feeling and propriety which has hitherto distinguished it. I shall say but little about your qualifications; I only wish to address a few observations to those of you who are about going out to India, because I do not know that there ever was a time in Indian history in which so much depended on the good conduct of individuals, as well in the civil as in the military service of the country, as the present. It is impossible to deny that recent events have, to a certain extent, shaken the confidence between the natives and the Europeans, and that there is some danger of estrangement between the races, than which nothing could more tend to imperil the tenure of our Indian empire. Since I last addressed you I have had opportunities of becoming much better acquainted with Indian matters than I was a year ago. I have learnt how much everything depends on the conduct of European officers in India. The misconduct of individuals may lead to deplorable calamities, and kindle a flame which could only be quenched in blood, while a contrary demeanour may avert most serious evils. I have no doubt that your soldierlike qualities will enable you to bear well your part, if circumstances should call for the exercise of military power; but I look infinitely more for the consolidation of our empire to the influence which you may exercise over the native population of India by your good conduct. That you will be just and upright, as Englishmen, I doubt not; but I will impress upon you that it is still more important that you should endeavour to conciliate the good will and to acquire the confidence of the natives of India. Circumstances, unparalleled in history, have placed us, as the governors of that great country, in such a position that we cannot hope to continue our hold of it unless we govern it prudently. I trust, therefore, that in whatever situation you may be placed you will so do your duty as to prove that you are not only a portion of the country governing India, but that you are the friends of the people of India—that they may feel that you are there for their benefit, and that they would lose if circumstances should remove you from among them. That you will do your duty as soldiers I doubt not; but, beyond that, remember that you are Christians and gentlemen, and by doing your duty in those respects you will do much not only to consolidate our power in India, but to earn the gratitude alike of the native population and of the people at home.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge said—Gentlemen cadets, I am permitted, or, rather, I have been requested, to make a few observations to you. You have just been addressed by the Secretary of State for India, under whom and whose council you are immediately placed. Of course, the Indian service and the line service are so intimately connected that that which is of advantage to the one must be a benefit to the other, and therefore anything that would tend to the advantage of our army in India must possess an interest in myself in the position I occupy as commander-in-chief of her Majesty's army. The Secretary of State has addressed you immediately in reference to your conduct hereafter when you proceed to India. Allow me to add a few words with respect to your military conduct. Now, you must remember that you may probably be called on some day or other to perform very important services in our great Indian empire, and in order to prepare yourselves fully for those services let me tell you that you must first make yourselves good and efficient soldiers. With respect to becoming good civilians, though there are many eminent men who have not been engaged in the military service, still I think they will agree with me that they never found that the military knowledge and experience which a man acquired in early life has been any great disadvantage to him when he has found himself afterwards in any high civil position. On the contrary, I think it is generally admitted that a young man who starts well as a soldier, if he has ability and talent, will not fail at a later period of life, when perhaps he becomes more of a civilian than a soldier. But, remember, to become a good soldier, you must in the first instance learn discipline, for discipline is at the root of everything. If you understand that, you will know how to obey and how to command—you will understand men and how to deal with them; and those who know how to deal with men are those who generally acquire the greatest eminence, either in military or in civil life. In the next place, let me tell you that to become good soldiers you must not discard small matters of detail; for an army is made up of details, and if you neglect to attend to details you will never become efficient soldiers. Look at what we know of great men of former days—I might almost say of our own day; look at men like Wellington and Napoleon. What did they do? They attended to the most minute details of the armies under their command, and we know the result. They became the greatest men of their age, and the most eminent generals the world ever saw. Gentlemen, never despise details. You are going to a climate which is enervating, and you will perhaps find it irksome to attend to these little matters, which you may perhaps neglect more rather from the inconvenience of attending to them than from any desire to evade them; but pray bear in mind when you go there that if you do not attend to minute details you will never become good soldiers. Once become good soldiers, and there is a great and splendid career before you. I am convinced that if you have opportunities many of you will shine in after life; but do not forget that it is to the knowledge and practice of discipline and to military service and experience that you must first aspire. I am sure you will receive at the hands of the authorities of this institution all that instruction which will enable you to pursue a useful and an important career. If you succeed I am sure no one, except, perhaps, those more immediately interested in your welfare, will rejoice more than myself whenever your fortunes may lead you. I have been much gratified by being afforded the opportunity of attending this ceremony, with the Secretary of State for India; and, although I have been once at Addiscombe, it was many years ago, and I may almost call myself a stranger here. What I have seen to-day proves to me beyond doubt that your education has been strictly and conscientiously attended to in this institution, and I am convinced that you will find the advantage of that education every day of your future lives.

His Royal Highness, accompanied by Sir Charles Wood, the members present of the Council of India, and the rest of the distinguished visitors, then inspected the sand models constructed by the cadets, of which there were four of great interest, namely:—

1st. Malakhoff Redoubt, forming part of the defences of Sebastopol; scale, 1 inch to 4 feet. Described by Sub-officers Trotter and Cunningham.

2nd. A Russian Rifle pit; scale, 3 inches to 1 foot. Described by Sub-officer Lodge.

3rd. A Ravelin, on a plan proposed by the late

Lieutenant Cook, R.N.; scale, 1 inch to 4 feet. Described by Sub-officer F. Hamilton.

4th. A Sunken Battery; scale 1½ inches to 1 foot. Described by Sub-officer Strahan.

The exhibition of landscape drawings by the gentlemen cadets fully maintained its character, showing considerable skill in the present advanced state of watercolour painting. The first prize was awarded to Mr. John A. Armstrong, for a drawing wrought out with much freedom and a just appreciation of colour. Mr. Henry C. Smith obtained the second prize by a production almost equal to that by Mr. Armstrong, and showing a masterly touch. The third prize, or rather the prize for the third term, was given to Mr. William Broadfoot, whose drawings the last public day at Addiscombe attracted attention. The fourth prize was honourably gained by Mr. John A. Temple, for a beautifully executed drawing in water colours. The several specimens of photography did credit to Mr. Sumner Binney, to whom the prize of this branch of study was awarded. The plates were exceedingly sharp and clear.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY.—The half-yearly meeting of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Company was held on the 6th of June, Mr. B. M. Willcox, M.P. in the chair, when the report was adopted unanimously, and a dividend declared at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax. The principal points alluded to in the operations of the past year comprise the services the Company have rendered to the Government in carrying out the expedition to China, the value of which assistance has been acknowledged by the Government-officers on the station. The application of the super-heating principle to the Ceylon has caused a considerable saving in coal, a question of great importance, the annual consumption of the Company being now 300,000 tons against 200,000 two years ago, and the cost per ton having advanced from 40s. in 1858-9 to 51s. 7d. in 1859-60. To enable the Company to divide 7 per cent. per annum, it is stated that the earnings must equal 30s. per mile on the total mileage, of which the subsidy, except on the Australian service, hitherto worked at a loss, will only make up 4s. 6d. A list of the fleet shows that the Company possess sixty-two vessels, inclusive of one steamer building, and eight transport, store, and coal sailing ships, of an aggregate capacity of 82,911 tons, with 17,631-horse power.

FINANCES OF INDIA.—The finance and revenue accounts of India give the following estimate of the revenue for the year ending April 30, 1860:—

Land revenue, including tributes from native States		£20,947,283
Customs	.. .. .	3,691,603
Salt	.. .. .	2,846,549
Opium	.. .. .	6,071,022
Post-office, stamps, and all other sources	.. .. .	4,240,175
		£37,796,632

From this must be deducted the charges of collection, cost of salt and opium, allowances payable in accordance with treaties, and allowances to village officers and enamdaris, amounting in all to £0,938,607, leaving as net revenue £30,858,025. But the expenditure is stated at £39,952,232, making a deficit of £9,094,207. The interest on the debt (including dividends payable in England) is £4,529,070; the civil, political, and judicial establishments, and police, absorb £8,547,810; roads and other public works, £4,341,818; and the military expenditure exceeds £20,000,000. If we exclude from both accounts interest on debt, the expenditure of India was almost precisely the same as the expenditure of the United Kingdom in the year 1859, although the military expenditure of India was much less than that of this kingdom. Still, the present account contrasts very favourably with that of the previous year, when the military charges of India were heavier; the income is larger by £1,700,000, and the expenditure is less by nearly £3,000,000.

BOOKS.

The Illustrated Horse Doctor. By Edward Mayhew, M.R.C.V.S. London: Wm. H. Allen and Co.

No service in the world has ever turned out a greater number of bold riders and good judges of horseflesh than that of the late East India Company, whether civil or military. But it is one thing to ride a horse, and quite another to understand its constitution and mode of treatment in sickness. This knowledge, however, is now within the reach of every one who cares to acquire it. Mr. Mayhew describes with admirable perspicuity the diagnosis of all the complaints to which the horse is liable, and prescribes in clear unmistakable language the most efficacious means of checking the progress of disease, of mitigating pain, and of working out a perfect cure. His illustrations, also, are entitled to the highest praise, and contribute largely to the beauty as well as to the practical value of the work.

Temporary Offices, No. 53, King William-street, City, London.

This Company is formed for the purpose of making advances upon dock warrants and discounting trade bills of exchange. In a great commercial city like London the facilities afforded by this Company to parties requiring temporary assistance on convertible mercantile securities (such as dock and wharf warrants) cannot fail to be appreciated by a very numerous class of merchant traders, who, for the want of timely aid to meet their engagements in times of commercial difficulty or sudden monetary crisis, are frequently obliged to make great sacrifices by forced sales; and sometimes even forced sales cannot be effected; then recourse is generally had to the usurer, at ruinous rates of interest, and who advances only for short periods, with the view of ultimately obtaining them for the sum advanced, if not redeemed at the stipulated period. To accomplish that object, any assistance the proprietor of the goods may require to effect sales, pending such advances, is invariably withheld, and thus he is deprived both of the means of sale and redemption.

This Company, therefore, proposes to open an advance and discount account with parties, upon the deposit, as collateral security, of dock and wharf warrants, and other convertible securities, representing any kind of merchandise, at the current discount rates, with a small commission for the trouble attending the sampling and inspection of the goods; and affording the owners every facility to sample and effect sales, whereby they may be enabled to redeem any portion, or the whole; and in case the parties shall not be able either to sell or redeem the warrants, in that case the Company will dispose of the goods by public auction; and any surplus, after deducting the amount advanced, with the expenses, and the usual commission for selling, will be placed to the credit of the owners.

It must be obvious that a Company based upon such principles possesses advantages of perfect security, inasmuch as the advances, although liberal, will be regulated according to the nature and market value of the goods. It need hardly be observed that with capital so invested, on convertible securities, no loss can accrue to the Company.

The Company, taking into consideration the magnitude of our commercial transactions, and the extensive exports to and importations from all parts of the world, amounting, according to the Parliamentary returns, to the enormous sum of £304,366,611, may fairly anticipate a great extent of business; but, as this undertaking is the first of its kind, the Company deem it prudent not to venture upon calculations based upon untried foundations. Considering, however, the interest charged upon the advances for certain periods, the rebate of interest when goods are sold by the owners before the advances become due, the commission for selling and inspection of the goods, also the discount profits, they feel sanguine of a large revenue, and of being enabled to pay the shareholders a liberal dividend.

Deposits will be received at call, or upon such notice as may be agreed upon, bearing interest at the current Bank rate.

Each application for shares must be accompanied by the payment of 10s. per share to the Company's bankers. Should no allotment be made, the money so paid will be returned free of any deductions; or if the allotment made be less than the number applied for, the amount so paid will be applied towards the payment of the deposit on such number of shares as are allotted.

By applicants residing at a distance, who cannot conveniently make the deposit at the Company's bankers, the entire form, accompanied by a cheque for the amount, may be sent by post to the office, addressed to the Manager, when a receipt will be forwarded.

The future calls will not exceed £1 per share, at intervals of three months.

Prospectuses and forms of application may be had at the Company's offices, or by post; and of J. G. Bone, Esq., stock-broker, 5, Bank-chambers, Lothbury, London.

TEETH.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.
Newly-invented and Patented Application of Chemically Prepared

INDIA RUBBER

IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, AND PALATES.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY, SURGEON-DENTIST, 9, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE, is the sole Inventor of the above new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared India-rubber, in lieu of the ordinary gold or bone frame.

9, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

From the "Court Journal."

EXTRAORDINARY INVENTION IN DENTAL SURGERY.—To Mr. Ephraim Mosely, of 9, Grosvenor-street, London, may be attributed one of the most remarkable and useful discoveries of the day, that of a substance for the construction of artificial teeth, gums, and palates, so thoroughly adhesive as to fix securely, without the use of those troublesome adjuncts, spiral springs. It is, in fact, the most perfect substitute for the natural teeth that can possibly be desired, and may be said truly to attain the ne plus ultra of art. The substance, for which a patent has been obtained, is purified India-rubber, which can be moulded to every irregularity of the gums and teeth in the most perfect manner, forming, as it were, an artificial periosteum to the teeth, keeping them from becoming painful on the absorption of the gum, and enabling the patient to use any force in masticating or striking the teeth together, without the percussion or rattling that attends the action in general cases.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH, SET in the new CHEMICALLY PREPARED INDIA-RUBBER, forming a beautifully fitting plate to the gums, or over stumps, without producing the slightest pain, and on this plan it is impossible to detect them as artificial when the workmanship is of superior order. Mr. BRADSHAW can, with the greatest confidence, undertake any case, no matter how difficult, with certain success, being a thoroughly practical workman, supplying for many years the first dentists of the day with their most particular work in Artificial Teeth. Doing all his own work himself, he is enabled to supply his patients at an exceedingly moderate price. Single Tooth, from 2s. 6d. to 10s. 6d.; a Complete Upper or Lower Set, from £2 to £5. Mr. Bradshaw, Dentist, 20, Great Portland-street, Oxford-circus.

NO ICE REQUIRED to produce common Ice, Dessert Ices, to Ice Wines, &c., in SIMPSON'S NEW PATENT FREEZING VASE.—This Apparatus is, without exception, the most efficacious, simple, and portable ever produced. By using the Patented Freezing Powder, Dessert Ices and Common Ice can be frozen by the most inexperienced, in a few minutes, on the table, or in an invalid's apartment. Residents and travellers in hot climates will find it invaluable, as it produces that luxury—Ice!—at command, and only occupies the space of an ordinary hat-case.

Prices: one pint, Four Guineas; three pints, Five Guineas. Freezing Powder, 3s. per cwt. Freezing Pots, Ice Moulds, &c., &c.

SODA-WATER, &c.—Use the "Seltzogene" (solely of one piece of glass), the only portable apparatus that has the patronage of the medical profession, who recommend it for making pure Soda-water and Aerated Beverages. Metallic impregnation is avoided, there is no leakage, and it is not affected by hot climates.

Prices: two pints, 23s.; three pints, 30s.; five pints, 42s. Powders (forty charges in box), 8s., 10s., and 16s. each. References and descriptive catalogues sent free.

GEO. SIMPSON'S Patent Depot, 315c, Oxford-street, London.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT. WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

is allowed, by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen, to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. JOHN WHITE, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

A Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. Postage, 1s. A Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 8d. An Umbilical Truss, 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders to be made payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE-CAPS, &c., for VARICOSE VEINS, and all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, SPRAINS, &c.

They are porous, light in texture and inexpensive, and are drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each. Postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, Manufacturer, 228, Piccadilly, London.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS, the most Effectual

Remedy for LIVER COMPLAINTS and DISORDERS of the STOMACH.—At this season of the year, when these complaints are so prevalent, there is no better remedy than Holloway's Pills, whether as a preventative or cure. When taken in moderate doses, and strict attention paid to diet, the worst cases will be relieved. The strengthening properties of these Pills restore the impaired tone of the stomach and cleanse the liver. Nothing so good has been discovered for the cure of persons suffering from a long residence in hot climates, and they surpass every other medicine for general family use. They have the happiest effect on the stomach and secretions, promoting digestion, and gently stimulating the torpid bowels.

PULVERMACHER'S GALVANIC ANTI-RHEUMATIC CHAIN-BANDS FOR SELF-APPLICATION.

Unequalled and certain as are the effects of the Chain-Bands in all kinds of Rheumatic Pains, still more remarkable and speedy is the relief they afford in Neuralgia, Tic Doloréux, Head and Toothache, &c. Even the most inveterate cases of Paralysis, Epilepsy, Deafness, Gout, Sciatica, Lumbago, Indigestion, Nervous Debility, &c., disappear in a comparatively short time. Prospectuses, recording a vast number of private cures and extracts from numbers of scientific works, sent free. Chain-Bands, 5s., 10s., 15s., 22s., according to power.

J. L. PULVERMACHER and Co., 73, Oxford-street, adjoining the Princess's Theatre, London, and all Chemists.

THE MAGNESIAN EFFERVESCENT is

the most agreeable and effective remedy in all cases of Gout, Rheumatism, Acidity, Heartburn, Indigestion, and Biliary Affection, Nausea, Fever, Thirst, and Sea-sickness. It is highly recommended by the profession, and will be found especially valuable to those going to India or travelling in warm climates; as a mild and efficacious saline aperient it stands unequalled, and will be found peculiarly adapted for delicate females and children. To be obtained through all respectable chemists, and wholesale from Messrs. BARCLAY, Farringdon-street (put up in stoppered bottles at 4s. 6d. for India), and smaller size at 1s. 11d. and 2s. 9d.

Prepared only by EDWARD FRICHARD, Chemist, 10, Vigo-street, Regent-street, W.

LENTUM, A NEW COMPOSITION

for Artificial TEETH and GUMS, recommended to Invalids and all who suffer from Indigestion. Its flexibility and lightness give the greatest power in mastication, avoiding all pain or pressure on the gums, without springs, wires, or any unsightly gold. It supports all loose and tender teeth, and does not require the extraction of stumps. Prepared only by

Mr. ALFRED JONES, SURGEON-DENTIST to Her late Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, Her late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the late Louis Philippe, and the ex-Royal Family of France.

64, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE. At Home from Eleven till Five.

KEATING'S PERSIAN INSECT POWDER.

UNRIVALLED IN EXTERMINATING MOSQUITOES, Fleas, Bugs, Flies, Beetles, Cockroaches, and every description of Insect infesting Animals and Poultry. Protects Clothes, &c., from Moths. ONLY INJURIOUS TO INSECT LIFE. See that the name of THOMAS KEATING, 79, St. Paul's Churchyard, is on every Packet.

Sold by all Agents of KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency. Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 13th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

The Mails for China are despatched at the same rate of postage as those to India; but must be pre-paid.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE chief incident brought to our knowledge by the arrival of the Calcutta Mail of the 19th May is the loss of the P. and O. Company's steamer Malabar in the harbour of Galle. Her hawser having parted in a severe gale, the vessel bumped upon the rocks and knocked a large hole in her bottom. Steam being quickly got up she was driven on to the sand as high as possible, and it is not expected that she will ever be got off again. Their Excellencies Baron Gros and Lord Elgin, the French and British plenipotentiaries to the Court of Peking, were among the passengers, all of whom were rescued, together with the crew. The mail bags were also partially saved, but everything else has been lost, even to the ambassadors' credentials. The cargo was of great value, including £390,000 in specie, in the recovery of which divers were promptly employed.

The occupation of the island of Chusan by the allied forces may be regarded as the signal for drawing up the curtain on the fourth war with China. No answer had yet been received to the final ultimatum submitted to the Emperor, but its rejection may be counted upon as almost a certainty.

Lord Canning was looked for in Calcutta on the 20th May, where his presence was much needed. The third reading of the Licence and Income-tax Bill was postponed to the 26th of that month, and it is said that some important modifications will be introduced at the suggestion of the Select Committee to which it was referred. One of these, it is reported, will be the abandonment of the one per cent. Income-tax, intended to be set aside for public works and municipal improvements; and another, the remission of the double tax upon European officers serving in India. There is likewise a question of raising the minimum of liability to taxation from Rs. 200 to Rs. 300 per annum, and of exempting native commissioned officers of the rank of jemadar, whose pay does not exceed Rs. 300 a year.

The Commission appointed to inquire into the differences existing between the Indigo Planters and the Ryots have commenced their sittings, under the presidency of Mr. Seton Karr, whose colleagues are—Mr. Temple, B.C.S.; Mr. W. F. Fergusson, a merchant chosen by the Central Committee of the Indigo Planters' Association; the Rev. Mr. Sale, a Baptist missionary; and Baboo Chunder Mohun Chatterjee, a nephew of the late Dwarkanauth Tagore, on the part of the British Indian Association. According to the Hurkaru, the only result of their inquiries "will be to prove the worthlessness of our courts, and the extreme laxity of administration prevailing in the Mofussil."

Considerable excitement had been caused in the Calcutta Bazaar by an ill-worded notification, which the native dealers interpreted as a

"Mr. Wilson"—says the Englishman—"by the help of his official friends, who should have known better, has had a lesson in the difference between the Indian money dealers and his old friends of the English Stock Exchange. Certain Treasury bills falling due in June, a notification was issued announcing that holders of those bills on presentation could be paid either in cash, or in Stocks. Government had declared the 5 1/2 per cent. and all other loans closed, and Mr. Wilson had since taken occasion to declare that Government would open no further loans. The notification was most indefinitely worded, and the bazaar dealers at once took fright. They ignored the offer of cash for those who chose to take it, and, looking upon the whole as a trap to lure them into an acceptance of Stock in lieu of their convertible paper, they demanded whence was to come this additional £750,000 of paper? and at once charged the Government with intended breach of faith in bringing that amount, practically in that case a new loan, upon the market. For two days there was a great hubbub in the bazaar, and all sorts of evil anticipations, which an explanatory notification set right. The result has been to give Mr. Wilson a very useful illustration of the men he has to do with, and the bills will, probably, for the most part, be converted into stock after all by the Bank of Bengal—the bazaar holders almost to a man will demand cash."

OUTWARD BOMBAY MAIL.

The Delta, from Southampton on the 12th, arrived at Malta at 7 A.M. on the 21st, and sailed for Alexandria at 6 P.M. on the same day.

The Nubia, with the Calcutta and China mail of the 20th (26 h) May, broke her main shaft on her way down the Red Sea towards Aden. The Norna took the mails, &c., on to Calcutta.

BENGAL.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

The third reading of the Income-tax and Licence Bills was, on Mr. Wilson's motion, postponed last Saturday (May 5th), for three weeks. It was found that when the provisions of the former came to be discussed in the Select Committee, so many details had to be considered, that the final preparation of the measure could not be accomplished within the time at first expected. Since then an impression has gained ground that the postponement has been made owing to some factious opposition on the part of the members of the Committee. We believe that such is not the case. We know, indeed, that since the first drafting of the Bill many important changes have been proposed in the machinery for the assessment of the Income-tax. That upon the judicious framing of this portion of the Bill the success of the tax will mainly depend; that the members of Committee are laudably anxious to make the machinery and mode of assessment as easy, as light, as smooth as possible; that in order to effect this multifarious details must be considered. That such consideration requires time we can readily believe, however much we may regret the necessity of delay. And, after all, if the Bills shall really be presented in their final shape to the Council after the lapse of three weeks, they will have been passed through the Council at a creditable rate of speed. As to the members of the Committee, there has been nothing in their public conduct to occasion the belief that they have been or will be wanting in their duty in a financial crisis. They have by their proceedings in the Legislative Council evinced their willingness to lend all the support in their power to the Government. The questions put by Messrs. Harington and Sconce were for the purpose of eliciting information, with which they expressed themselves perfectly satisfied. As to officials outside the Council, we believe the same spirit of unanimity and resolution distinguishes them as has been shown by the whole European community of India. Public opinion has made itself felt in modifying the provisions of the Income-tax Bill merely. The clauses to which we objected in our first exposition of it were amended in the second reading; and we do not grudge, though we may regret, the delay which the simplification of the Bill we urged upon the Council renders necessary. But if any native agitators expect that the Bill will not be passed in all its entirety they will find themselves deluded. Lord Canning has many faults, and we have not been slow to expose them. But the fault of throwing over or languidly supporting a measure he has once adopted as his own cannot be laid to his charge. Mr. Wilson is backed by all the authority of the Government of India.

To see the inevitable necessity of the case and learn to appreciate the motives of Government, the natives only require the details of the Income-tax as they are now being amended in Committee to be made plain to them. They do generally admit that the Government is obliged to raise additional money, and that it is the duty of subjects to pay accordingly. This has been declared over and over again by the native journals. The only doubt is about the form and mode of raising the money. The natives have been taught by Sir Charles Trevelyan and by designing scoundrels of their own faith to imagine the new taxes to be some dreadful thing. The machinery of the tax has been much modified, so that it may work smoothly; the details of the Bill have been simplified to accommodate it to their habits. If the people say that they ought to be allowed to tax themselves in their own way, then we answer that this very thing has been arranged for. Every town, village, or tract, may with the Collector's permission, help itself through its own Panchayet. After all, it is the townsfolk and the gentry who will be caught within the net. The army, the poor, the great mass of the agriculturists will be untouched. We note all the straws which have been thrown up to show how the political wind blows, such as the circulation of pitchers at Jhansee, the little affair at Peshawur, the rumours of Delhi, the tone of the Bengalee press. Still, we believe that the example of the Punjab and Oude, which between them are paying more than thirty lakhs of new taxes without a murmur, will be followed by the rest of India, and that the wisest and best of the native gentry will imbibe the spirit of the Rajah of Burdwan, who has openly declared his willingness and readiness to contribute to the necessities of the State. But we must get rid of mutinous, hot-headed governors, and at once take steps to tell the natives exactly why and to what extent they are to be taxed.—Friend of India.

MR. RUSSELL AND HIS "DIARY."

Mr. Russell in his Diary has been guilty of an act of the most flagrant injustice to all the members of both sexes of sundry large families. The names we will not mention here, but would refer the reader to the work itself, pages 62, 63. He has described those families as being the aristocracy of India, and then proceeds to say they come of a race "doomed from their birth to misery and contempt!"

It is a fact that the members of these large families have always been well provided for in this country, in consequence of the interest they had in the old India-house; it is a fact that the Civil Service swarmed, and does swarm with them, and that there is scarcely a regiment of Bengal cavalry or infantry, in this or in the sister Presidencies, in which those familiar names do not appear. Some of the members of these families have been amongst the most distinguished public servants. (It would be invidious, under the circumstances, to point to them.) Others—a few, a very few comparatively—have not been in very enviable repute, either as to their public or private characters, respectively. That, however, in no way affects the question—whether Mr. Russell was justified in branding them with the offensive words above quoted. None of those to whom the historian has alluded deserve them, and out of the scores and scores of them whom we know, we cannot name one who has allied himself to an Asiatic. Many of them, indeed, have married into the best and most aristocratic families in England, and at this moment several of the most beautiful and accomplished women who attend the Queen's drawing rooms, and are peeresses, are included in Mr. Russell's category. The interest of the members of this vast family is not confined to India. There is scarcely an important public office in England in which one or more is not to be found. Some are commissioners, others recorders, others Directors of the East India Company, others are clerks in the Government departments, the Home, the Foreign, the Colonial, the War Office—while shoals of them are to be found in the army and the navy. Of course, in England these numbers count as nothing, and certainly not when compared with the Greys, the Elliots, the Ponsonbys, &c., &c. But it is different in India, where, from the secretaries of the Government, from governors, lieutenants, down to junior civilians, there is, as it were, a link of connection by blood relationship. Not long ago the late Chief Justice of her Majesty's Supreme Court of Calcutta married a daughter of a branch of this vast family, whom he has taken home, and will introduce to his numerous aristocratic relations, who will, ere this, have read the false statement of Mr. Russell that she comes of "a race doomed, &c., &c."

Mr. Russell must have been aware that he was misleading the British public when he made known to them that the great bulk of those who monopolized official appointments in India came from "a race doomed from their birth to misery and contempt." He could not, nor could any man of his intelligence, have been one month in this country without being informed of the precise meaning of the expression used by him; and, therefore, we are led to conclude that the historian, having received some slight from one or more of "India's aristocracy," who did not pay him, perhaps, that court which, as the great William Russell, he expected—he determined upon some revenge, and took it, by writing the paragraph to which we have made allusion. A correspondent, not long ago, in a letter which we published, said, "Everybody almost affects not to have seen Russell's book, but they do read it (in private) and wince under it." Of course they wince under it. Who would not wince under such a statement made in a work which has been in such demand in England, and will run through so many editions, and be regarded as an authority? Here, where the falsity of Mr. Russell's remark is known to every one, they have nothing to care about—beyond the unpleasant feeling that all their enemies know how they have been branded at home. But it is otherwise as regards Europe, where this unmerited stigma as they must regard it, has been cast upon them, and where the difficulty of proving such a delicate negative would be immense and painful. Had the circulation of the "Diary" been confined to India, those represented as of "a race, &c.," would have laughed at the writer and his assertion concerning them. In India, the circulation will not exceed 500 copies. In England alone it will not fall under 150,000—to say nothing of America and the colonies. And what renders Mr. Russell's conduct in this matter the more disgraceful is, that he knows the Times will abstain from publishing any letters denying the accuracy of his statements. Mr. Henry Lushington, who is one of the "Lushingtons" alluded to, may reply to Mr. Russell in Blackwood, to which journal he so often contributes; but what is a paper in Blackwood—no matter how ably written—if taken as a contradiction to a paragraph in a book written by "The Special Correspondent of the Times!" It is like opposing a Minie rifle to an Armstrong gun.—Mofussilite.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE MAHARAJAH OF BURDWAN has addressed the following letter to Mr. Wilson on the subject of the proposed income-tax:—Raujbarree Burdwan, May 3, 1860. To the Right Hon. James Wilson, member of the Supreme Council in India. Sir,—I trust that you will pardon the liberty I am taking in addressing you on the subject of the system of taxation which you are now proposing, and in which I am deeply interested as the proprietor of the most extensive zemindarees in Bengal. The social ties by which I am surrounded, and the vast property in which I and those dearest to me are interested, make me keenly sensible of the obligations which India owes to the Government for crushing the late mutinies. This sense of my obligations teaches me that it becomes an act of duty in me as a subject of my gracious Sovereign, not only to cheerfully acquiesce, but also to tender my humble support in aiding your new system to relieve our unavoidable financial difficulties. Permit me, sir, most respectfully to assure you that the immediate cause for this expression of my opinion is the attempt which has been made to oppose your admirable system of taxation; this opposition being founded upon the false assumption that it is a breach of the perpetual settlement. No doubt that at the time the settlement was made, it was considered as sufficient for the exigencies of those days, but I cannot find anything in the terms of these settlements to convince me that the Zemindars of India have ever been exempted from contributing to assist the Government when they incur unavoidable expenses in preserving property, life, the honour and all that is dear to them of those very Zemindars. Sir, I, as the greatest Zemindar of Bengal, disclaim all such exemptions. I am willing to submit most cheerfully to your wise system of taxation, which places this unavoidable impost equally on all classes. If you think that this declaration of mine, which is the result of mature consideration, will be any guide to my countrymen,—if you think that the example thus set by the great proprietor of Zemindaries in Bengal can induce his countrymen to believe that it is true policy to surrender a portion for the security of the whole, I place in your hands my adherence to that admirable system by which in my belief your memory will be endeared to India.—I have, &c., MAHTAB CHAND BAHADOOR,

Maharajah of Burdwan.

SOUTH CACHAR, April 17. — I have caught a Pterodactyl! I have him! There is no mistake about it, a winged lizard, a tiny type of the extinct dragon-like monster "noctivagous and insectivorous" that did police duty in the atmosphere of the ancient world. I have him shut up in a bottle for the inspection of the incredulous. He is clearly, as far as wings and body go, the intermediate link between a bird and a reptile, and if he were only larger he would make a respectable dragon. This is such a wonderful country that I expect to catch a little megatherium, or a small dinotherium, or a tiny plesiosaurus, types in all but size of their colossal progenitors. I should not be surprised if I saw a dodo in a beel, or came suddenly upon a unicorn fighting a tiger on the crown of a tela. I have, however, discovered an insect unknown to the antediluvian world, to the present world, or even to the people of Cachar. It is an insect so beautiful that no language can adequately describe it, and so frail that it is impossible to preserve it. I found not one, but thousands on the leaves and trunks of the upas tree (he is here also), and as no planter had ever seen them before, and no native had ever noticed them before anywhere, they must be of recent creation, or formed by some electro-chemical process, with which I am not at present acquainted. I will confine myself to endeavouring to describe it. It is an insect of the grasshopper kind, only because it has long hind legs, and leaps a distance of about a yard or a yard and a-half; but it is not elongated like the grasshopper. It is of an oval shape, with a body about the size of a small beetle. It is as white as unsunned snow, and has a tail like that of the peacock, which it erects and depresses at pleasure. This tail is snow-white and feathery, and, when erect, the tips droop over and overshadow the creature's body in graceful folds, like a tuft of ostrich feathers on the head of a ball-room belle. The size of the tail is quite as large, as compared to the insect, as the tail of the peacock is to the bird. Nothing can be conceived more beautiful than the snowy whiteness and wavy folds of the distended tail of this most remarkable insect, and the creature travels along the trunk of the upas with all the pride and haughty demeanour of a strutting peacock in pairing time. Seen through a microscope its beauties are enhanced, and the eye is very remarkable, the pupil being quite dark, set in a ball, yellow and bright as sapphire. But it is as fragile as the gossamer's web. The tail and snowy covering of the body melt in the fingers like snow flakes, or the mealy wings of the moth. In vain I have endeavoured to secure them in boxes and bottles, where they walked in of their own accord. They died and crumbled to nothing but the skeleton, which would give no idea of the insect. The truth of my report must, therefore, rest on the testimony of several tea-planters, who saw them with me. I have named the insect the peacock-hopper, by which he is now known in Cachar. I have mentioned the upas tree, which is found here, but I am very sorry to say it has none of those terrible properties that made the upas the choice subject of romancers and the terror and delight of youthful readers. It is a large lofty tree, with a clean straight trunk, which exudes a gum of an acrid quality. It covers the skin with a tetter, and in some instances with bad sores when dropped upon it. The planters say that its timber is good, but they cannot get the natives to cut it. Last Sunday I was surprised by a large concourse of people pouring in from all quarters to a hill side near the tea factory where I am staying.

On inquiry I found it was bazaar day. I went to see it. An immense crowd of Cacharees, Bengalees, Kookees, and Muneeporees, who had the day previously received the wages of their labour from the factory, were bargaining and buying from a host of bustee-wallas, villagers both male and female, who had brought provisions and other products of their industry for sale. It was a most animated busy scene, and I had the curiosity to take a note of the articles for sale. Rice, raw and prepared in large quantities, dal of different kinds, pigs, goats, fowls, ducks, fish, large and small, fresh and dried, goor, or native sugar, oil, ghee, curds, milk, eggs, tobacco, salt, betelnuts, pân, melons, tamarinds, cucumbers, pineapples, bananas, plantains, papayas, pumpkins, brinjals, yams, Kookee potatoes, onions, garlic, chillies, sweetmeats, spices, pottery of different kinds, cloths and mats. There were also conveniently at hand a few money changers, who for a premium of two pice gave copper for a rupee. This bazaar was established by a tea planter, and the site, where hundreds of industrious labourers supply themselves with their weekly wants, and all the villagers around get coin for their produce, was a short time ago a forest waste tenanted by wild beasts. Such are the benefits derived by the native population from the settlement of the much maligned adventurers among them. The rains have hitherto been most favourable to tea planters; manufacturing is progressing satisfactorily, while the fresh flushes of leaf are coming out rapidly and abundantly.—April 22nd.—During the mutinies you must have heard a good deal of the Kookees, who assisted so materially in destroying the mutineers of the 34th Regiment N. L. The rebels of that regiment, distinguished as much for their brutality as their folly, left Chittagong, passed through Tipperah, and entered the valley of Sylhet, with the intention of crossing the Burhampooter, and reaching the North-west Provinces. But in Sylhet they were encountered by the Sylhet Light Infantry, commanded by Major Byng, who was killed at the commencement of the action. The command devolved on Captain Sherer, now the officiating superintendent and magistrate of Cachar, who totally defeated them, and drove them back to the jungles of Cachar. Here they were attacked by all the inhabitants, European tea planters, Cacharees and Kookees. Everywhere they were hunted down like wild beasts, and slain, and the whole were "accounted for," with the exception of four or five, who must have died in the jungles, as no rebel was ever known to have emerged from the district in any direction. In this warfare the Kookees, from their knowledge of the jungles, greatly distinguished themselves, and "accounted for" a good many of the rebels. Having a curiosity to see something of this people, I paid a visit to a Kookee Rajah, who had specially distinguished himself, and had sent in a good many of the rebels' noses to the Superintendent of Cachar. The Kookee Poonjee, or village which he governs, is situated near the banks of the Chutla Beel, and is worthy of a particular description. The Rajah's house, or rather citadel, is in the centre of the village, and occupies a considerable space of ground. It is exactly like a Roman camp when that military people, abandoning the old form of the square, adopted, in imitation of the Greeks, the circular form. The round wall is made of strong stakes of wood about ten feet high, and it has four gates defended by enormous heavy planks of wood, suspended from a cross beam, which are swung aside to admit of entry, and closed when attacked by an enemy. There is the principal gate or porta pratoria, fronting the Loochye hills, the Loochies being enemies of the Kookees; opposite this is the porta decumana, and on each side are the porta dextra and sinistra, a perfect Roman camp, which Scott's Antiquary would have delighted in, and, had he seen it, he no doubt would have written a learned treatise to prove that the Romans, at some period of their history, must have visited these regions, and taught the inhabitants the art of castrametation, which treatise he would have given to the world had he found any one ready to defray the expense of publication. Be this as it may, the Kookees have a perfect Roman camp, and, on an alarm being given, the whole of the inhabitants of the village, men, women, and children, abandon their houses and rush into the encampment. I entered the porta pratoria, and, after passing several houses belonging to the immediate retainers of the Rajah, I arrived at the house or palace of the chief. This was a long, low building, made of wood and bamboo, raised two feet from the ground. It was divided into large compartments. First there was an open hall where the Rajah holds audiences, and receives retainers and others. Next was a very large hall walled in with bamboo, which was covered with shields, spears, daos, or knives, wild buffalo horns, wild pigs' skulls, and other trophies of his shooting expeditions. Behind this hall were a number of small apartments for the Rajah's family. The Rajah received me very politely, and spoke very good Hindoostanee. He is a young strong man, with a very pleasing countenance. Among his trophies he pointed out several muskets and pouches that had belonged to the rebel 34th. Of these he seemed very proud, and he showed them to me with a very knowing look, and a grin of great satisfaction, as much as to say, "I polished off the owners of these instruments." And, indeed, among other exploits, he lay in ambush for a number of rebels, and caught them in the act of passing a river on a large raft. He waited until they were more than half way across, and then sent a volley into them. He killed the whole of them, and sent their noses to the Superintendent of Silchar to obtain the reward that was at that time given for each rebel's head. I have heard from the tea planters, who were in action, too, against the rebels, and from the authorities, that it was most gratifying the ready and hearty manner in which they were assisted by Kookees and Cacharees. My thoughts involuntarily went back to that dark period of the mutinies in which we Europeans, in populous districts, alone had to fight the enemy. The natives in our districts either fought against us or held sullenly aloof awaiting the issue of the conflict. And it is through these districts that the Viceroy of India makes his triumphal march, and scatters honours and rewards broadcast amongst the loyal chiefs. But the subject is as sad as the spectacle is humiliating, and I will brush them away from my thoughts. I have excellent news. The elephant flies have disappeared as completely as those swarms of flies were removed, at the entreaty of Moses, "from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people; and there remained not one." In your paper the other day there was a description of the African tsetse fly with its gauze wings, bristle-like feelers, and sharp proboscis. It struck me at once that the elephant fly answered this description, but I have not been able to obtain one to verify it. As the rains set in they were all gone, either to another country, gone into hiding or gone dead. The two first I guess, the last I hope. I believe if these horrible insects infested the country the whole year Cachar would be uninhabitable for either men or animals. For the first time in my life I have heard horses scream. One would as soon expect a horse to scream as to hear a fish shriek (which some humane individual said would put a stop to the cruel practice of angling if fishes indulged in that painful cry), but it is not the less a fact, and horses have again and again been heard to scream when attacked in their stables, and they have been unable, either with teeth or tail, to drive away these pests, that stick to the skin like leeches, and cause pain like the burning of heated needles.—Correspondent of the Englishman.

THE "GREAT TASMANIA."—In the additional news received by telegram yesterday, May 6, we find that "a committee has recently been appointed to inquire into the present system of the supply of stores by the War-office. The Indian Government have recommended a number of important changes." If this be correct as it stands, we should say that recent disclosures in that line prove the Indian Government to be eminently qualified to recommend a few changes in the system under which we have just been told that we have an accumulation here of stores worth seven millions sterling, and which brings out such magnificent results as the wholesale poisonings and starvation of the troops on the Great Tasmania. We were much puzzled by the report of the inquest at Liverpool, in which the firm of Messrs. Harton and Co., of Calcutta, was asserted to have supplied the provisions, and yet Lord Canning's letter was produced, which asserted the impossibility of procuring fresh stores. And for that reason we avoided all allusion to the contractors until better informed. The trial of Heron and Co. v. Harton and Co., in the Supreme Court, throws much light on this subject. In the course of the trial, Mr. Gordon, a member of the firm of Harton and Co., deposed incidentally that they had supplied the provisions for the Great Tasmania, but that the Government had obliged them to take the whole of the stores from the commissariat here, the Government undertaking the entire responsibility for them, and that the firm paid Government Rs. 73,000 for those stores. At last, then, we have gained a step toward fixing the responsibility of that transaction. The Governor-general's letter declares the knowledge of the Government that the stores were unfit for use: they then employ a contracting firm to supply provisions for the departing troops, and compel them to take these same avowedly bad stores. The Commissariat have accumulated stores which in England would be destroyed as unfit; but, to reduce the enormous balance accumulating against the department, this precious juggle is resorted to, and there are Rs. 73,000 to the credit of the Commissariat—the price of the blood of those fifty-two discharged men whom the Government first mulcted of their bounty, and then managed out of their lives. Verily some important changes may be borne with in such a system. But this explanation about the character of the stores, though very well as far as it goes, does not make it clear how the “unexceptionable English biscuit of splendid quality,” which was thoroughly examined by the committee of officers with such entire satisfaction on board the Great Tasmania, was changed within a week or two into old, mouldy, weevily, uneatable, and indigestible biscuit, sworn by two witnesses to be baked in Calcutta, and believed by Dr. Fernandez, one of the committee, to be composed principally of rice. Messrs. Harton and Co. have shown us that they got it out of the commissariat stores. Who shall show us how it got in there? Will any one give us the approximate value of an official survey by ensigns, lieutenants, &c., whose duties certainly do not tend to make them good judges of everything from a hawk to a handsaw, when reports such as those furnished us on Thursday last by the Government result in weevils and Liverpool inquests? Every step taken in the inquiry, which must now be followed out to some practical conclusion, shows more and more clearly that somebody in Calcutta has a heavy account with the public, heavier yet with Heaven and his or their conscience, concerning the deaths on board the Great Tasmania.—Englishman.

PETITION OF THE LANDHOLDERS OF DACCA.—The respectable inhabitants of Dacca, composed of Armenians, Mussulmans, and Hindoos, have addressed a petition to the members of the Legislative Council, praying that the permanent settlement may not be interfered with in the new taxation which is to be levied upon the incomes of all classes in this country. The petitioners declare that the permanent settlement, more than anything else, secured the loyalty and attachment of the natives of Bengal—in proof of which they adduce the conduct of the Bengalees during the recent rebellion. While the inhabitants of the North-west Provinces were in a state of rebellion, those in Bengal were perfectly quiet. They quote an extract of the Governor-general's letter to the Court of Directors, under date March 6, 1793, which they consider settles the point that the Zemindars should, under no circumstances, be subject to additional taxation, and they conclude their petition with a request that before the landholders are called upon to pay the tax in violation of that solemn pledge, Government will resort to the other legitimate means of increasing its revenue suggested by Lord Cornwallis.

PURNA, May 7.—A petition has just been received from Mr. S. F. Dooracole. It appears that he was on his way to an out factory, and seeing some men collected on the Ganges bank, he rode forward to see who they were. He was received with a shower of spears and clods, and, though well dusted with the latter, fortunately his horse alone suffered from the former. Our two specials, Messrs. Davies and Man, have arrived. The latter, though young, is evidently the right man in the right place.

THE MILD HINDOO.—A curious case of domestic torture appears in the columns of the Hurkaru. One Baboo Sreenauth Doss and two of his servants were charged with the above offence by a native female servant of the Baboo's, named Rookhnee. A saree belonging to the wife of the Baboo was missing. Rookhnee was charged with the theft of the article, but she denied having taken it. In order to extort a confession the poor woman was put through a course of torture. She was first bound with a rope by Hurro Chunder, and while the master beat her with a shoe the other servant, Bacha Ram, struck her with his fists. A grind-stone was then placed on her chest and her hands burnt with a pair of heated tongs. After this chillies were put in a pan which was placed over a fire, and it was applied to her nose. Rookhnee was first rendered stark naked, but a small piece of cloth was afterwards put about her loins. The torture lasted from 7 A.M. till 7 P.M. The Chowkedar, to whose custody the woman was consigned by the Baboo, when informed of the ill-treatment she had sustained from her master, took no notice of the matter. The case was postponed till the 14th, when the two defendants in custody were released on bail, and a warrant of arrest was issued against Sree Nauth Doss, to appear on that day. On Rookhnee being re-sworn on the 14th, she was not disposed to make any reply to questions put to her by the magistrate. All that she said was, that she did not wish to press the matter; that she was ten years in her master's service, and wished to return to him: that she had been threatened, and that it was all over. The case has been postponed.

NOAKOLLY, May 7.—Since writing to you last we have had plenty of rain, and from the state of the weather we are led to expect plenty more still, but all we hope is, we may not be so unfortunate as to be visited this year with a gale similar to the one we had in May, 1858. I am glad you noticed the working of Mr. Currie's Act X of 1859, or as it is officially designated, “Rents Bill.” The sooner it is amended the better, the sooner repealed still better. Well may you say, and well may all join you in saying, “that an Act more destructive of property, and more communistic in its tendencies, was never passed by Englishmen in any part of the world where they have had rule.” I hear that the commissioners of revenue have been called upon to report as to how this Act has worked. By-the-by, the people out here entertain a queer idea of Mr. Wilson's Paper Currency; they seem to think copper and silver coins will soon vanish out of sight, and directly the paper currency will be found for some reason or another not to answer, that a leather currency will be introduced, plain leather coins for rupees, and japan and enamelled leather ones for gold mohurs and bank notes! They seem also to think that Government will eventually monopolise the growth of rice as it has done the manufacture of salt, and then the fat rich Baboos of the present day will be made to drive the plough. Have you ever heard of any deed so diabolical, so shocking as murder in cold blood for the purpose of drinking human blood and eating human liver? A case of this description is pending before our magistrate, and I shall avail myself of the earliest opportunity of putting you in possession of the details of it. A rich native landholder is the perpetrator of this most horrible of horrible crimes—of this murder most foul. (On this the Hurkaru makes the following remark:—“We knew a case of drinking human blood and eating human liver that took place about ten years ago. A zemindar suffering from an incurable disease thought to regain health in this way. Enormous bribery caused the case to be dismissed.”)

REPORT ON THE EXTERNAL COMMERCE OF BENGAL.—The report on the external commerce of Bengal for the official year 1858-59, just published, gives us convincing proofs of the growing prosperity of the country. The total of the exports and imports has increased in three years about 25 per cent., or from over twenty-eight millions to more than thirty-five and a-half millions sterling, the increase on last year's total amounting to Rs. 4,45,58,069. The duties (net) of customs collected during the same period are stated at Rs. 1,56,04,256. The exports alone amount to more than eighteen millions sterling, or more than double of the exports from every part of British India in the year 1834-35. The net imports, exclusive of bullion and coin, are of the value of Rs. 10,58,53,131, an increase over the previous year of Rs. 2,93,75,438. To come to details, on a reference to the items of the returns we find that the trade in piece goods has become of marked importance, their value amounting to Rs. 4,80,53,924, or Rs. 1,74,10,431 in excess of the previous year's importations. On almost every other article, too, imported there has been a large increase. On apparel an increase of Rs. 9,50,330, on cabinet-ware Rs. 55,081, on coals Rs. 3,38,220, on coffee Rs. 29,06,167, on fruits and nuts Rs. 10,816, on jewellery Rs. 2,49,574, on machinery Rs. 16,21,280, malt liquor Rs. 6,24,404, copper Rs. 5,96,452, quicksilver, Rs. 1,36,384, paints and colours Rs. 1,98,286, spices Rs. 1,97,128, spirits Rs. 6,03,808, timber and planks Rs. 5,51,319, wines Rs. 16,40,648, woollens Rs. 3,00,340, sundries Rs. 23,57,575. On the following articles, amongst others, there has been a decrease, viz: beads, books, cigars, ice, manufactured metals, salt, and umbrellas. The exports of 1858-59 as compared with the preceding year exhibit an increase of no less than Rs. 13,81,367, that is however irrespective of treasure. In the general amount of the exported staple produce of the country there is a decided increase; the only articles which have greatly declined are grain, hides, and opium, (Benares) but the chief of these is grain, the exports of which from Calcutta alone to the United Kingdom have fallen off to the extent of Rs. 30,28,663. The new tariff will cause an improvement in some of these returns. There is also a decrease in the value of treasure imported and exported during the year on account of private trade, amounting to Rs. 1,93,05,842, and Rs. 23,67,223 respectively. The Government consignments show a decrease under the head of imports of Rs. 30,00,688, and an increase under that of exports of Rs. 27,50,141. Tables of shipping and tonnage are also given, which will be found very convenient for reference. The summary given at the commencement of the report is carefully drawn up, but we think might have been a little fuller, as the officials have had an entire year to compile it. Very few persons will take the trouble of looking over long tabular statements, but even these can be made interesting in the hands of men who have paid any attention to statistics. The reports, for instance, which are drawn up by the Census Commissioners at home are read by every body. Indian officials ought to be compelled to take the same trouble.—Hurkaru.

LOKENATPORE.—I may now mention that in consequence of Mr. Herschell's extraordinary conduct, to call it nothing worse, the whole country is in a blaze again. On or about the 17th April, Mr. Maclean, the assistant magistrate of Damahoodah, gave an order on the police, that the ryots were not to be allowed to sow paddy in indigo lands. This put a stop to their doing so, and there seemed every chance that they would come to their senses, and sow indigo as usual. However, when Mr. Herschell heard of Mr. Maclean's order, he at once sent a purwanah direct on the police, cancelling it, and desired them to give the ryots notice that they might sow their lands with what crops they liked. The consequence of this is, the ryots have sown nearly the whole of the indigo lands with paddy, and have broken up indigo plant which they had sown before Mr. Herschell's order was proclaimed by the police. They have also sown our Neezabad lands with paddy. At the time Mr. Herschell gave this order we had a fine fall of rain in most parts of the Lokenathpore concern, and I believe our ryots would have sown indigo as usual, but directly they heard the order they commenced sowing paddy again, consequently this concern is completely ruined, and the misled ryots will be ruined also, by our being forced to bring cases against them under the new Act. To whom are we to look for compensation, to the Government or Mr. Herschell?—Hurkaru.

DELHI PRIZE MONEY.—The grand total of the Delhi prize-money is Rs. 35,57,917. The principle on which it will be disposed of will probably be that laid down in the General Order of Nov. 27, 1857—viz., that "property taken by the troops which is neither claimed on behalf of the State nor claimed and identified by persons who may establish their loyalty, is to be considered to be a good prize."

THE MINTS.—The silver received at the three Presidency Mints in March last was as follows:—

	Government.	Merchants.
Calcutta ...	Rs. 4,020	Rs. 35,32,607
Madras ...	5,134	5,17,201
Bombay ...	8,161	49,82,610

The total amount coined was:—

Calcutta ...	Rs. 35,61,213
Madras ...	5,17,201
Bombay ...	11,00,000

Rs. 51,78,414

MR. HERSCHEL'S REPORT on the state of the Indigo districts gives the results of the summary Act up to 23rd April last. The following were imprisoned in the civil and criminal jail:—for breach of contract, 173; for destruction of indigo, 49; for intimidation, 57. Total, 279. At least 200 men are expected for breach of contract. In Jessore, where the magistrates do their work without issuing perwannahs, there is hardly a case of imprisonment.

GORUCKPORE, May 1.—We have not done with the rebels yet. Six hundred of them (horsemen fully equipped) are on our northern boundary. The news has just come in and has put us all on tip-toe again. It is supposed that they are from Central India, and that they are bound for Bengal in aid of your governor's pets. At any rate they are taking an easterly direction. Had the news come in a day or two sooner there is no saying what ugly mistakes might not have been made. We were awake from our broken slumbers the other morning, about one or half-past one o'clock, by a succession of loud heavy reports like those of distant cannon. At first it was impossible to feel quite sure that they were not those of cannon. However, in the end, it turned out that the Nazir was celebrating a marriage upon which the whole city seemed to have gone mad, and a great number of "bomb gholas" were reporting, as they ought to do, of course, the honour of the chief ruler of the district—for who is greater than the Nazir? However, had we only known of the bhogies being so near at hand there might have been a rush to the rescue that would not have been at all pleasant even to the Nazir. Cholera is gradually abating.—May 11.—The movements of the rebels excite considerable thought and various feelings. They are reported to have a European prisoner in their camp. The other night they came down upon one of Mr. Bridgman's villages, carrying off the head man. They are next reported as having entered Tirhoot. Bettia is said to have been visited. To day the report in the bazaar is that the Sikh camp was surprised last night. All this is doing its work in the city, where there are plenty of the disaffected. Common sense would lead one to suppose that people generally had had enough of the mutiny, but still there are many here who would hail with joy the return of confusion. Certain wise men have been calculating the probable value of the white soldier deprived of his bread and butter and tea, and the blockheads pretend to fancy that paddy was far superior as a hardy enduring article. They see our men quiet and inoffensive in the street and bazaar, and comparing him with those bullies, the Sikhs, they consider them far more the soldier. They will do well not to hasten the day of reckoning. There has been considerable talk about a Sanatorium at Bhutwal, and it is thought there is some hope that Nepal will be sensible. The shortest way I fancy would be to lay hold of the place and keep it as a "material guarantee" that Nepal should harbour no rebels.—Hurkaru.

EXCITEMENT IN LUCKNOW.—Below is an extract of a letter from Lucknow, dated the 6th May. Poor Mr. Wilson, it seems, is to bear the blame of everything that goes wrong now. His Income-tax Bill is not passed yet, so that the excitement reported as occasioned by new taxes imposed is not to be attributed to him, but to the scheme of taxation contrived by the gentlemen in Oude, who "know the natives" so well, and who were congratulated the other day by the Governor-general on the event that the province had been made to yield eleven lakhs of rupees without a murmur on the part of the people. Whether this is so or not, and whether these felicitations were not rather premature, may be judged of by the following:—"You will be rather surprised to hear that a disturbance is very likely to break out again in Lucknow. The natives have already shown signs of discontent by having meetings among themselves, trying to persuade all who are interested in their cause to join them, for they say that if they don't oppose the measure which is being introduced now among them (Mr. Wilson's Income-tax), they will not be able to do so by-and-bye, as it will then be too late. There are strong guards of police posted all over the town to show the natives that we are quite prepared for anything they might choose to do. A native regiment was disbanded the other day by the troops in garrison. Guns are planted all over the town, one here and another there. The authorities have ordered that the Baillie Guard should be ready within a few days, and that three months' provisions be taken into it, and twelve months' provisions into the Motee Mehal, so you see another siege is expected. The ladies who were in the last siege tremble again at the idea of another one. It will be very bad for them, poor things; they had to undergo a great deal the last time; for their sakes I would not like such a thing to occur. If any mutiny does break out it will not be the native soldiers only that will rise, but the whole country, as the Income-tax has been levied on everybody, both great and small, rich and poor. We shall have to thank our worthy minister of finance, Mr. Wilson, for this mutiny, and nobody else, as it is he who is causing all this row.—May 12.—We are all on the qui-vive up here, expecting another row, although nothing may take place after all. It is much better to be awake than asleep, for if they see us ready for them they will take care and keep in the back ground. Guards of European and native soldiers patrol the city during the night. If the natives do kick up a row at any time we are quite prepared for them. . . . There is one fellow who is so frightened that he takes his pocket revolver with him to office."—Hurkaru.

COMMITTEE OF INVESTIGATION.—Messrs. C. H. Lushington, R. Temple and the Honourable E. Drummond, have been appointed a committee to consider how the principles of the English system of estimates, budget, accounts and audit may be adapted to the existing circumstances of departments in India. Among the matters for consideration will be the manner in which the specific sums sanctioned in the budget should be placed at the credit of the various expending departments; the mode in which such expenditure should be accounted for to the local accountants; the mode in which the local accountants should account to the audit department in Calcutta; the manner in which the audit should be constituted, and the detailed rules by which it should be guided in the execution of its functions. The consideration of the committee is to extend to all Presidencies and to all departments except that taken up by the Military Finance Commissioners. Attention is to be especially given to all civil departments, to the postal, telegraph, and marine departments. As the Calcutta audit department is henceforth to be the only audit for each department, the future duties and designation of the civil auditors are to be considered. Thus the work of the centralisation of Indian finance proceeds.

JOWALA PERSAD, the Nana's second in command, was hanged at the Cawnpore Massacre Ghat at sunrise on the 3rd May. It was from the fisherman's temple at the Ghat that, nearly three years ago, he superintended the slaughter. Prophecy of his fate, like Wishart's in the case of Cardinal Beaton, would not have been difficult even then. He made no disclosures. In our (Friend of India) interview with him, shortly after his imprisonment, his only answer to our questions was a snarl that we disturbed him while eating his prison fare. He had a fine forehead, and glorious eyes. The North-West Gazette describes the scene:—"Photographers were there taking views of the scene, but no one would claim the body, till an eccentric 'medico,' with a view to preserve for the benefit of future generations the skeleton of so villainous a monster, undertook to remove the body. Having unfortunately left it exposed on a tree in his premises, the dogs and jackals, regardless of our 'medico's' scientific researches, and with a self-interest unworthy of them, devoured not only flesh, but bone."

DELHI REGALIA.—The crystal throne belonging to the King of Delhi was sent off to Calcutta on the 14th April. The marble throne is to be re-erected in the old position in the Dewan-i-Khas.

THE OCTROI RECEIPTS in Lahore for the six-months ending 30th April were Rs. 84,746. The average monthly receipts are Rs. 13,500 or 14,000, and the cost of collection Rs. 250. One-third of the net income goes towards the local funds, the remainder to Government.

THE LAHORE RIFLES.—The Lahore Chronicle, in referring to the rumour which was prevalent not long ago at the station, that the formation of a rifle company was under the consideration of Government, has been since informed, to his utter chagrin and disgust, that the project has been abandoned. The reason assigned is that such a measure for the protection of the town is calculated to impress the natives with a notion that we distrusted them! Imbecility can go no further.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, May 19).—Indigo.—From Dacca, Myseningsh, and Furruckpore accounts of the growing crop are first-rate. In Jessore and Pubna the spring sowings have been got in most favourably, and both these and the October plant are growing well. Saltpetre.—In small demand and value lower, although sales have been made at irregular prices. 4 per cent. refraction has been sold at Co.'s Rs. 10 to 10-4 per maund; 5 per cent. at Co.'s Rs. 9-14 to 10 per do. There is room for further decline. Rice.—Small quantities of fine table sorts were taken by two houses here, probably for the Melbourne market, at 3-7 to 3-12. Stocks light. In Monghy and Ballam sorts also little doing, and prices are 2-2 to 2-8. Rau Silk.—In small inquiry buyers having withdrawn. Silk Piece Goods.—Corahs have at last attracted attention; about 20,000 pieces have been sold at Co.'s Rs. 109 to 139 per corg, showing a decline only of 5 to 7-8 per corg. Shell Lac.—Some small sales have been effected, at Co.'s Rs. 1 to 1-5 per maund reduction, but fine qualities maintain former prices. Oil Seeds.—Linsced in fair demand, but principally for America. Quotations: Co.'s Rs. 2-10 to 2-14 for low to fair small grain, and Co.'s Rs. 2-14 to 2-4 for mixed to best picked Putna. Rape-seed scarce and in demand for local consumption at Co.'s Rs. 3 to 3-3 per md. Poppy and Teel also scarce.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, May 19).—Stationery still reigns over the market, and transactions in every kind of import articles are extremely limited. Piece Goods are in little or no demand, and prices are falling off gradually. The consumption appears on the decrease, and there is every probability that this state of the market will continue for a time. Yarass also became very dull lately, and a fall of prices has been already established. Metals extremely dull. We are without transactions.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DR. BLACKWELL.—The order of the Secretary of State with regard to Dr. Blackwell, civil surgeon of Vizagapatam, has been carried out in a manner which will, no doubt, be considered highly satisfactory by that functionary and his council. It may be recollected that Dr. Blackwell was the chief adviser of the Rajah of Vizagapatam in the charges which that native nobleman brought against Mr. Reade, the agent of the governor of Madras in Vizagapatam; that Mr. Reade was found guilty of all these charges; and that the Secretary of State only found him guilty of those which he had himself admitted, namely, borrowing horses and so forth. Mr. Reade was sentenced by Sir C. Wood to be suspended from active employment for two years; and it was at the same time intimated that the interests of the public service required that Dr. Blackwell should either be removed to another district, or that his services should be placed at the disposal of the Commander-in-Chief. The Madras Government has chosen the first named of these alternatives. Dr. Blackwell has been appointed Zillah Surgeon of Chicacole—which is in the next district to that of Vizagapatam—where he will be only forty miles, or a four hours' ride from his friend the Rajah. This is as pleasant an instance of adhering to the letter and neglecting the spirit of one's instructions as we remember to have met with; but whether Sir C. Wood will be disposed to regard the way in which his request has been carried out from a cheerful point of view is another question.—Athenæum.

CAPTAIN JOHNSTON, the Consulting Engineer for Railways, on the 23rd of April forwarded to Government a report of his inspection of the Madras South-West Railway, from the river Cauvery to the Western Terminus at Beypore. Government, on the 1st of May, expressed their satisfaction generally at the progress that had been made on the line, and stated that they relied "on the Consulting Engineer urging on the works to the utmost and to a speedy completion." They add:—"Captain Johnston, it is observed, thinks that the opening of the line to Salem cannot be expected till near the end of July next. He also states that if sufficient labour can be procured on districts 15 and 16, there is every prospect of the works on the entire line from Tripatore to Beypore, 268 miles, being completed by the end of the year. The length of rail laid over this distance is about 100 miles in all, and though sufficient sleepers have been obtained for the whole line, he thinks it probable that the permanent way will not be ready till March or April next."

INTERCHANGE OF ROYAL COURTESIES.—From Travancore we (Athenæum) learn that on the 2nd May there was a durbar, at which a sword belt, the gift of her Majesty, was presented to his Highness the Rajah by the Resident, Mr. Maltby. The gift was accompanied by a letter from the Secretary of State for India, in which, after acknowledging the receipt of a letter from his Highness, written when the Queen assumed the direct government of this country, and thanking him for the assurance of fidelity therein expressed,—he intimated that her Majesty had forwarded the belt in return for the ivory state chair presented by the Rajah. It is described by a correspondent as being "beautifully ornamented with a wreath of flowers and leaves, embroidered in gold thread upon red silk ground; the centre of the buckle, which latter is entirely of gold neatly wrought, and set with large rubies, being a case containing a very richly enamelled gold watch. Both its lids are of a blue colour, one having inscribed upon it the cyphers of her Majesty, 'V. R.' and the other, those of his Highness 'M. V.'" These letters are closely studded with small brilliants, which upon the rich blue surface of the lids appear with effect the most exquisite. The intrinsic value I estimate not to exceed £500. The belt is encased in a box of Morocco leather neatly ornamented, and bearing on the lids' centre the letters "V. R." in gold, below an inscription of the British Crown."

HYDRABAD.—We have had an event of much interest here, rendered more so by its incidence. I have informed you that the four men exiled for their hostility to the English Government, seditious practices in all, and overt acts of insurrection and rebellion in one, Mirda Chand, who by his official duties stood nearest to the Nizam, were permitted by the Resident to return to the capital at the instance of his Highness the Nizam, but under stipulation that they should not be allowed admission to the presence, privately or publicly. The Nizam in spite of the judicious advice of the only man, the minister, who alone seems to understand the personal interests of his Highness and of the State, was pertinacious to recall them, and as much so to restore them to his court and his favour. This made no small sensation, for it was seen that his Highness was acting in this matter without the Resident and his minister, and that it was a contention for power with the former and appeared likely to prevail. The Mussulman party considered itself triumphant, and was proportionately supercilious. "They were his Highness's servants and subjects; this was his country, who could prevent his showing favour to them?" If there had been nothing besides this insolence it ought to have been repressed, but there is always fear of the next step, and the Resident very properly addressed an official note to the minister, to the effect that it was not a well-advised measure in the Nizam to appear by his acts to be clandestinely the friend of our enemies. This was sharp. The Nizam for some days seemed to disregard it, and to such comments as could be made upon the ill advisedness of the measure you receive nothing from the supercilious Mahomedan but the contemptuous doorroost. Suddenly, on the evening of the 17th April, the minister received a peremptory order forthwith to expel two of the leading rebels. His Highness (it was the Ramzan) had been fasting, and gave force to his injunction by adding that he would not break his fast till they had quitted his capital. The order was without delay carried into effect, and the Resident was directed to attend the court the next day. As all these proceedings had been taken without any notice to the minister, it was seen that there was some large design affecting him on hand, and that his Highness, under encouragement from a party, was going to make a deep plunge apparently, coute qui coute. His Highness, the intended visit of the Resident being the first after his attempted assassination in March last year, took unusual precautions to guard his safety. The Resident, it would seem, was aware of the proposal his Highness intended to make; and seeing him backward to bring the subject upon the tapis, determined upon giving him the opportunity to do so. This could not have been from any motive to agitate a disagreeable question, but to put his Highness right upon many matters which were misrepresented to him, and to prevent for the future his unnecessary, frivolous, and mistaken jarrings with his minister. He begged to know if his Highness had any orders for him; his Highness evaded the question by a civil speech about the Governor-general's health, and his desire that the friendship between the two States might subsist for ever. The Nizam did not make his motion; the Resident addressed him shortly in commendation of the minister, and it is to be hoped that the question is put to rest. I do not, however, expect it to be finally so, and it would seem to me to be as well if the Nizam were put in possession of the views of our Government before he made any movement which should bring upon him disappointment and mortification. The reason assigned for the sudden expulsion of the two men is the Nizam's desire to propitiate the Resident, and to dispose him to accede to his proposal. There was very little said at the audience, and that little is so variously described that I do not undertake to relate it. The least authentic version seems the most likely. The minister has expressed himself satisfied with the conduct and expositions of the Resident, whatever they were. I am enabled to say upon good authority that the Resident observed to the Nizam that he was misinformed, that he proposed measures to his Highness, and reported to his Government, under the influence of the minister, that such was not the case; he reported matters within his own knowledge to his Government, and that whatever the minister presented to his Highness proceeded directly from his minister. This is all in all that was wanted, but then the Nizam's judgment will direct him, and much pains will be taken to bias that. Another incident of no small interest is, that the Resident is satisfied with the correctness of the evidence adduced against Mahomed Mookheem, the manager of the Sheemdool Coomrah's Jageers, to the effect that his conduct has been oppressive and cruel, and that he has given asylum to Rohillas. This matter will be finally disposed of on instructions being received from the Supreme Government. Mohamed Mookheem's misconduct will have a more extensive scope in its bearings and results than appears at first sight. Ghoolab Khan, the Rohilla Jemadar who headed the plunderers of Nolungee, was beaten at the head of five hundred men near Nirmul by the Zilladar of that district, twenty Rohillas killed, himself wounded and taken prisoner; his coadjutor, Hajee Ali, an Arab Jemadar, was wounded, but escaped.—Englishman.

Dr. Rooke.—Amongst the passengers by the mail which left Bombay for England on the 13th May, we observe the name of Dr. Rooke, Director-General of the Medical Department. Ordinarily, we should no more have thought it necessary to notice this gentleman's departure, than to chronicle the exodus of any other high officer of the State. But the circumstances in which Dr. Rooke has been placed during the eventful period of his tenure of office are unexampled in the career of any of his predecessors. Suddenly called in the year 1857, to control the Medical Establishment in the place of the late Medical Board, he had scarcely seized the reins of authority than he found his department involved in the convulsions of the mutinies. With an establishment notoriously insufficient to meet the medical requirements of the quietest times, he was called upon to provide for the wants of a new army, and this not collected together in masses upon which medical resources might be concentrated, but split up into innumerable detachments, each of which demanded almost the organisation of a brigade. Unlike other establishments, there were here no extrinsic sources of supply. Trained medical officers and subordinates were not forthcoming on demand, nor was there any hope of procuring them until the emergency had passed away. Such difficulties must have appeared almost insurmountable. It was clear that they could only be met by husbanding existing resources, and by throwing upon one man duties which had formerly been performed by several. To do this effectually—and it was done effectually—required administrative ability and a power of conciliation not often met with. The proof that Dr. Rooke possessed these qualities in a high degree, is sufficiently evidenced in the results. Throughout the whole of the campaign, extending over a period of nearly three years, notwithstanding the deficiency of the means at his disposal, no military enterprise was delayed from the want of medical organisation; no word of censure was heard against the medical department. The electric telegraph had hardly flashed the announcement of the contemplated formation of a column than it reconveyed orders for the complete equipment of its medical establishment. It is undoubtedly true that this could not have been effected without the most zealous and hearty co-operation on the part of the able officers who were placed under the Director-general, and the greatest self-denial and zeal on the part of the medical subordinates; but these would have been of little avail without the head to plan and direct their proceedings. The success of Dr. Rooke's administration, however, is universally acknowledged; it is dwelt upon with pride and satisfaction by every medical officer of his department. It is spoken of with gratitude by the officers and soldiers whose lives, under Providence, it has been the means of preserving; and it has been acknowledged by the State he has so ably served, in a general order, couched in language so feeble and inexpressive as to have excited the derision of those by whom it has been read, whenever (which was not often) such feelings were not displaced by those of indignant dissatisfaction. Qualities of mind, which have brought about such results, cannot but be viewed with respect and admiration. But there is something in Dr. Rooke's character which has excited warmer feelings in those who have enjoyed the privilege of personal intercourse with him. Always considerate, and in the highest sense of the word gentlemanly, no man ever left his presence without feeling assured that he had received the most attentive hearing, and that whatever decision might be arrived at would be formed in a spirit of the utmost impartiality. In the bestowal of his patronage it would be impossible to charge him with having leant too much to his friends; indeed, he has been accused of not caring, in the matter of appointments, whether they were obtained by his friends or his enemies. We hear with much satisfaction that there is every prospect of Dr. Rooke's return to India should his health be re-established, and we are confident that we only express the almost universal feeling of the service of which he is the head, when we say that his return is as heartily desired as his departure is now deeply regretted.—Bombay Gazette.

INDUS STEAM FLOTILLA.—On Saturday morning last the Indus Steam Flotilla Company's beautiful steamer Stanley, which was recently launched at Keammarree, made her first trial trip, which proved highly successful. She started from her moorings about eight o'clock and steamed round to Ghizree in gallant style, a distance of 11 miles. No attempt was made to try her engines at their full power, as there was a very strong breeze blowing, and a nasty chopping sea, with a rough swell on the bar. There were only 10lb. pressure on one boiler and 15lb on the other, although each can safely bear 25lb. to the square inch. She was therefore only working at half power; and notwithstanding the ugly weather she had to contend with, her engines managed to make 17 revolutions a minute, which was certainly, under the circumstances, excellent work. Captain Wilkins deserves great praise for the seamanlike style in which he brought the Stanley round to Ghizree, and we have much pleasure in congratulating the flotilla staff and the shareholders of the company on the successful issue of this first trial. In a few days more we hope to hear of the Stanley steaming on the Indus, when we trust that her voyage up the river will be as satisfactory as her passage over to Ghizree. A few days prior to the above, the trial of the Indus Flotilla Company's new steam tug A took place, and proved in every way most satisfactory. All the officers of the service were on board to witness the trial and offer such suggestions as might occur at the time, for alteration or improvement, so that nothing might be omitted which could possibly render these vessels efficient. The steamer was tried in every possible way; first alone, and subsequently her capabilities as a tug were tested. Two of the barges, each with thirty-five tons on board, were taken in tow, first astern and then alongside, when a speed of seven knots was effected against a 2½-knot tide and headwind; this was scarcely to be expected on a first trial, but we have been informed that they confidently hope to attain a higher rate than this. On the trial without barges, with 58lb steam, she made 34 revolutions; and a rate of ten knots was obtained, steering beautifully. The second tug will be launched, we understand, in a fortnight, and four more will be put together almost immediately. Notwithstanding the monsoon setting in the works are pushing on with great activity, and the mercantile community will be glad to learn that the vessels will be on the river by the end of the season. The tug, with three barges in tow, went round the other day to Ghizree. We believe the vessels will for some time be required by the company for the conveyance of railway iron to the Punjab, but it is the earnest desire of the entire community that they may be available for the public as speedily as possible, demands for tonnage are urgent, and merchants and mess agents are unable to meet the requirements of their constituents.—Sind Kossid, May 8.

THE KURRACHEE PRESS COMPANY.—We are glad to learn that a Joint Stock Association, designated the Kurrachee Press Company, has lately been established here by two European mercantile firms, who have recently commenced business. They have acquired a considerable piece of land, on which, for some time past, a suitable building has been in course of erection. This building will be completed by the middle of next month; it is a durable structure, in every way adapted for the purpose for which it has been constructed, and is calculated to contain six presses. Two of the Colaba Company's screws were purchased at Bombay some months ago; these have been put into complete working order, and are either on their way up, or awaiting transmission by a favourable opportunity. The presses will each screw from 50 to 60 bales daily, and it is expected that they will be in full operation about the middle of August. It is obvious that the great advantage to be derived from a company of the kind lies in the immense trade in cotton and wool that it will necessarily draw to this port. It is well known that large quantities of wool, amounting last year to 70,000 docras, are sent by native boats from Kurrachee to Bombay, owing to there being no means at hand here of pressing the bales, and thus rendering them easy of shipment direct to England. Such a drawback, one long felt as a grievous incubus on the trade of the province, will now happily be removed, and the measure about being carried into effect will, most assuredly, divert a large portion of the cotton and wool trade from Bombay, and conduce to give Kurrachee a certain status as a commercial emporium. A number of the wealthy Bhatia merchants of Bombay, connected with the wool trade, are making preparations for the purpose of establishing agencies here, with the view to making shipments direct from this port to the United Kingdom, and these will be followed by the leading men engaged largely in the import trade in piece goods and metals, who have determined on opening a traffic between this and England before the termination of the rainy season. Here, then, two of the most material drawbacks which seriously hampered the trade of Kurrachee will shortly be counted among the things that were, and a new commercial era is about dawning on us. We are indebted, to a great extent, to the energy and perseverance of two of the leading European mercantile firms in Kurrachee for these important innovations of the antiquated usages of the port. There will now be no necessity for the Affghan Patans, who have hitherto been in the habit of proceeding to Bombay by sea, or prosecuting a long land journey to Calcutta, adopting either of the two alternatives to discover a mart for their munjeet and wool, which will, during the ensuing season, be easily disposed of in this market, as their commodities arrive, and they will have the further advantage of being enabled to invest the proceeds of their goods in purchases, on the spot, of such articles as they require for consumption in their own country. The interests of the shipping which visit this port cannot but be materially benefited, as well by there being facilities at hand for screwing cotton and wool, instead of vessels being obliged to resort to Bombay, or any other quarter of the globe, to obtain return cargoes, as nearly three-fourths of them have been under the necessity of doing heretofore; freights will easily be procurable here, and it will not be long, perhaps, before the influx of tonnage in Kurrachee-harbour will be on a scale commensurate with its growing trade. We may here mention that the business of the Kurrachee Press Company will be conducted on exactly similar principles to those followed out by the Colaba Company at Bombay; every one will be at liberty to avail himself of the use of the presses, on his giving twenty-four hours' notice, and specifying the number of bales he requires to be screwed. A stated rate of charges will, of course, be made.—Our Paper (Kurrachee).

FATAL SWIMMING MATCH.—A melancholy affair occurred a few weeks ago at Surat, by which two promising young men met with a watery grave. It appears that the unfortunate young men, named Briggs and Harris, entered into a wager to swim across the Surat river, but evidently both had miscalculated their powers, as they were observed, when about midway, to be labouring from much exhaustion, particularly Briggs. This circumstance induced a young railway engineer to swim off to their assistance; but ere he could reach Briggs, who was the foremost, and at that time appeared to be more exhausted than the other, he observed Harris sinking, to whose rescue he immediately struck out; but he was grappled with in so wild a manner by the drowning man, that he was compelled to abandon him in order to save himself. These exertions had so completely exhausted the generous engineer, whose name is at present not known, that he was obliged to strike out for the shore once more, leaving the two unfortunate young men to their fate, both of whom shortly afterwards sank, sad victims of their own rash wager.

PROPOSED SCHOOL OF INDUSTRY AT SURAT.—The steady progress of education in this Presidency is one of the few consoling signs, in the midst of much that is disheartening, that the future of India need not be so gloomy as prophets of evil are wont to declare. In Bombay so marked an advance has been made, that recently a movement was commenced by the most enlightened and courageous Parsee gentleman amongst us in favour of female education by native ladies; and we earnestly trust that the boldness of Mr. Manockjee Cursetjee, in trampling down the most cherished prejudices of his countrymen, may be rewarded with success that will raise up to him a host of imitators. But it is not only within the limits of the Presidency town that education thrives. At Surat we are pleased to learn that it is now in contemplation to establish a school of industry on the model of the school in Bombay. All orphan boys and the children of the poor will be admitted into this school between the ages of 5 and 12, without regard to caste, colour, or creed, and will be discharged at the conclusion of their sixteenth year with certificates of character and qualifications. It too often happens that boys who are left at an early age without natural guardians acquire idle and vicious habits, learning to gamble, to steal, and to indulge in the worst forms of debauchery even in their tender youth. It is from this class, indeed, that our criminals are recruited, and our jails filled; and one of the wisest and most humane movements of modern philanthropy at home has been to found reformatory schools in order to reclaim boys before they become hardened thieves and ruffians, instead of inflicting on them punishments which help to train them in a knowledge of every species of iniquity. For a similar purpose has this school been projected at Surat. Meer Jaffer Ali, with his accustomed liberality, has announced his intention of laying out a very large sum for the purpose of placing the institution on a proper footing. His Highness may, indeed, be considered the founder of the school, which will be managed by a committee of five, with the Meer as President. There is a very large class of poor Mahomedans, to whom the institution will be invaluable, and we wish the spirited founder all success in his generous undertaking, which cannot fail to diminish crime, and to provide many poor boys who would otherwise have led a vicious and dissolute life with the means of gaining an honest and independent livelihood.—Bombay Gazette.

THE PUNJAB RIVERS.—A work of great public utility is about to be undertaken. The Supreme Government has addressed the Government of Bombay relative to the great need at present experienced of a survey of the Punjab rivers. A minute survey is not recommended, since it will ere long be rendered useless by the annual changes in the rivers. There is, therefore, to be a simple general survey, for which purpose one of the most experienced masters of the Indus flotilla will be selected, who is to be instructed, after a careful examination, to describe in general terms the capabilities of all the Punjab rivers for steam navigation, either with such vessels as are now on the Indus, or any others which might be considered better adapted. His report, in short, is to be such an one as will serve as a guide to Government in extending the operations of the flotilla into the upper rivers.

CRIMINAL STATISTICS.—There are at present (May 22) 171 criminals confined in the House of Correction, and 119 in the County Jail. In the former, 88 are undergoing their punishment by sentences of the Supreme Court, 3 by the Court of Petty Sessions, 51 by the Magistrate of Police, 18 by awards of Military Courts Martial, 9 by Naval ditto, 1 by a European General Court Martial, and 1 sent from the Tannah Jail. In the County Jail, 1 European and 85 natives are undergoing hard labour, 1 European and 8 natives without labour, 3 Europeans and 2 natives are for transportation or penal servitude, and 19 natives remain untried, making in all a total of 290 prisoners at present confined in the jails at Bombay.

ALCHEMY.—It is reported that a rich Bhatteea merchant of our island has been duped of some twenty-two thousand rupees in the course of three days, by a rogue who professed to be able to transmit the baser metals into gold. The unfortunate dupe was taken to the dhurmsalla at Walkeshwar, where he was assured of finding a hidden treasure. The respectable position of the party, it is said, keeps him back from prosecuting the "Alchemist."

THE 8TH HUSSARS, who have had so much knocking about in Central India ever since they came to the country, will, it is said, be relieved by the 6th Inniskillings, and take up their quarters for some time to come at Kirkee.

COLONEL SIR C. S. STUART, K.C.B., of the 3rd European Regiment, is appointed Brigadier Commandant of the Bombay garrison, during the absence of Brigadier Shortt, on leave to Europe. Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel E. A. Guerin, of the 2nd Bombay European Regiment Light Infantry, has been appointed to act temporarily as Brigadier.

DEPUTY CORONER.—The acting coroner of Bombay, Mr. Cleveland, has appointed Mr. H. Prentis, solicitor, his deputy, during the absence of Dr. Reid, the coroner, on leave to Mahabaleshwar.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, May 7th.—The London mail of the 26th March has not yet arrived.

Nothing further has transpired in regard to the exact terms of the reply to the British ultimatum made by the Chinese Government, nor have we yet heard of any reply to the second communication from the Plenipotentiary which was despatched on the 14th April.

The island of Chusan was occupied by an allied force on the 21st of last month. This has been rendered necessary by the want of sufficient accommodation elsewhere for all the expeditionary force; and is regarded as a demonstration, not an act of war. No resistance was offered by the Chinese authorities. They were informed by the Commanders that the Allies had an overwhelming force, and that the Chinese would be treated amicably if no resistance were made. This proposal was at once acceded to; and the 67th and 99th regiments, with 400 Marines and details of Artillery and Engineers, were soon after landed, and quartered in the Yamun of the principal military Mandarin and in the fort and temples of Chinghae. There were few Chinese soldiers in the place, as a body of 500 had shortly before been despatched to the mainland to aid in putting down the rebels.

Before the occupation was completed, Sir Hope Grant, accompanied by his staff, left Chusan. He is now in Hong Kong, and so also is General Michell. Sir Robert Napier is with the troops on the Kowloon peninsula. We understand that the portion of the expeditionary force which is here will commence to move northwards about the middle of this month. The nature of the operations to be undertaken will probably depend upon the course pursued by Lord Elgin, who has hitherto shown himself more disposed towards bold strokes of diplomacy than to the use of force.

From the north there are rumours that great preparations are being made on the Peiho for meeting the allied force; and that Sann-ko-lin-sin compels every family to furnish a man to learn the manual exercise and artillery drill. Cavalry also were said to be levied in great numbers. One defeat will in all probability throw the war party into such discredit that there will be no difficulty in then arranging terms, if the allies are sincerely desirous to do so.

The position of the rebels in the neighbourhood of the Yang-tsze is much the same as that described in our last advices. They are completely held in check by the imperialist force; and many arrests of them have been made in places which have fallen under imperialist power, and where they have been lying concealed. In districts which the rebels have occupied a great many villages have been burned down, and wanton massacres perpetrated. Funds have been opened for the relief of destitute people who have escaped from the localities which have been laid waste, and imperial favours are to be conferred on those who contribute to these funds.

From Canton we have the important intelligence that the rebel troubles seem over, for a time at least; and that for some days back there has been a very perceptible change for the better as regards trade. The result has been produced mainly through the instrumentality of Taou-chang-pei, who was formerly a rebel chief, but was bought over to the Imperialist side by Laou, the Governor-general of Kwan-tung, who was then in Kiangsi. Taou went up to Seinam to meet the rebels fifteen or twenty days ago, with power to buy them over, or otherwise check their progress. He went into the head-quarters of the rebels, and is now at Fat-shan arranging matters with one of the chiefs. It is important to notice that, in the event of the expedition going North, Laou, being rid of the rebels, will have a very large force at his command, should he be disposed to create a diversion in this quarter, either in Canton or elsewhere. The rebels themselves might easily be induced to join him, and their progress may have been encouraged with that end in view. A number of the fugitives have been employed in filling up the site at Shameen, a work which progresses rapidly, and may soon be expected to be completed.

From Ningpo we learn that an Englishman, called Daniel Fergusson, has been murdered at Chin-hai, by three Frenchmen who were engaged along with him in the convoy business, or in protecting native junks. The persons engaged in this business are far from being of the best character, and such quarrels among them are not surprising.

From Japan there is no news, except that the residents at Kanagawa still live in that state of alarm which their own improper conduct was calculated to produce. Reports have been published of some "catastrophe" having taken place, but for these there is no ground. The origin of the report is probably the attempt to assassinate the Regent, which was noticed in our last issue. —Overland China Mail.

THE INTERPRETERS FOR THE EXPEDITIONARY FORCE.—We understand that arrangements are now nearly completed for supplying the expeditionary force with a staff of efficient interpreters. Mr. M. C. Morrison, a descendant of the "dictionary," lately acting Consul at Amoy, and appointed Consul at the as yet unopened port of Tang-chau, has volunteered his services, and will be placed at the disposal of Admiral Hope. Mr. Mongan, Assistant Chinese Secretary, is to be interpreter to General Sir Hope Grant. The other interpreters to be attached to the British force are Mr. Swinhoe, interpreter at Amoy, whose place has been filled by Mr. Chaloner Alabaster, Mr. Hughes, at present interpreter at Ningpo, and two students interpreters from Shanghai, Messrs. Gibson and Davenport. Thus an interpreter has been provided for each of three generals and the two admirals. More interpreters, however, are wanted, and the commissariat has itself applied for no less than seven. The position is a very responsible one, though an allowance of scarcely ten shillings per day is all that the consular servants will receive beyond their ordinary pay. The best reward of these appointments will be in the opportunities for observation they will afford, and of society different from that usually to be found in China.

THE OCCUPATION OF CHUSAN.—The island of Chusan was occupied by the allied forces on the 21st April. The allied Admirals with the vessels of war first went into harbour of Tinghae and communicated with the Chinese authorities at that place. The impossibility of making any resistance was apparent, and the mandarins very quietly submitted. The transports then came in with the troops, and these being landed soon occupied the port. We understand that there was some intention of quartering troops on the neighbouring island of Pootoo, which is covered with beautiful gardens and Buddhist monasteries, and which is said to have no women upon it, the population being chiefly composed of Buddhist monks. The vessels which had arrived were, H.B.M.'s steamers Imperieuse, Pearl, Scout, Roebuck, Opossum, Slaney, Kestrel, Woodcock, Granada, Adventure, H.I.M. Du Chayla, Alarne, Mitraille, Dragonne, Saigon, with the troop and store-ships Tasmania, Cressy, Octavia, Mars, Walmer Castle, and Gamecock. The British troops there are the 67th and 99th regiments, with several hundred marines, engineers, &c. It was expected that Colonel Reeves would be the English brigadier. The occupation of these islands may be regarded rather as a demonstration than as a renewal of hostilities. It will be very extraordinary if hostilities do commence, when all the parties concerned are averse to them, when the people of England, the Government of England, the people of China, and the Government of China are all alike anxious for peace; and should war ensue, the plenipotentiaries and commanders concerned will find, as Mr. Bruce has already done, that the responsibility of it will fall on their shoulders, whatever the letter of their instructions may be.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, May 26.—Up to Sunday, the 20th, the weather continued intensely hot and dry, affecting vegetation most injuriously, and we fear that not a little of the native coffee, and even some in the lower plantation districts, will be lost in consequence. For the greater part of the last week, however, we have had at Colombo the true monsoon weather—thunder storms and heavy rain; and from all the accounts that have reached us the rains seem to have been general over the coffee districts. As a consequence, we suppose, of the intense heat which previously prevailed, hail fell at Colombo and on the mountains of Ouhah. At Colombo we have had neither high wind nor heavy sea, and the shipping remains unaffected. The case has been very different at Galle, where, during a gale on the 22nd, the Malabar steamer was blown from her moorings and wrecked. She was first driven on a rock, and so large a hole made in her bottom that all the steam available was used to beach her on the sands, in which she speedily became embedded. All the passengers for the Straits and China, including the British and French Plenipotentiaries, were on board, and a large proportion of them were able to save nothing. The Ambassadors lost even their papers. The mails, though damaged, were saved. By the aid of divers we trust the larger portion of the very valuable cargo will be saved. It includes nearly a million of specie, and 600 boxes of opium. The specie shipped at Southampton for Singapore and China amounted to nearly £300,000. We have no accounts of the shipments of silver at Marseilles, but we know that at least £100,000 was sent from India. All went down in the Malabar.

Our exports of coffee for the fortnight are not large. The four vessels included in the Chamber of Commerce report (three for London and one for New York) took away 17,021 cwts., of which 14,709 were plantation and 2,312 native. But the report does not include the Bon Accord, which cleared for London from Galle on the 19th, and which, according to the manifest which we have received from Messrs. Vanderspar and Co., took away 1,137 cwts. plantation coffee, and 1,074 native, 2,211 in all. Taking this quantity into account, our shipments to date would be only some 4,000 under those for the corresponding period of last season, notwithstanding the great falling off in native, viz., 26,000 cwts. The increase in plantation is about 22,000 cwts. There is, we believe, a good deal of coffee still to be shipped.

After all the excited and even embittered discussion that has taken place respecting the Planters' Association, we are glad to learn that at the meeting on the 24th, at Kandy, the best possible spirit was displayed. Captain Payne Galloway, eminent for his topographical services to the colony, in conjunction with General Fraser and Major Skinner, was elected chairman; and, just as we expected, Mr. A. Brown was compelled to hold on to the office of secretary. The feeling seems to be that not only is he the right man in the right place, but that no other man can at this moment be found to fill the place so well. The compliment to Mr. Brown's talent, activity, tact, invincible good humour, and powers of endurance, is high, but not higher than he deserves. Our hope is, that, notwithstanding the departure of so excellent a chairman as Mr. Tytler, the lamented defection of Mr. Simon Keir, and the lamentable cannonadings of the clever but eccentric Mr. A. Nicol, a long career of usefulness is open to the Planters' Association.

The Governor went to Galle to meet Lord Elgin and Baron Gros, and his Excellency's continued presence at the Southern Port will doubtless aid greatly the efforts made to save the cargo of the Malabar.

The railway scheme and the Immigration-tax continue equally unpopular. We wait for the decision of contractors and the company in the former case, and Capt. Graham waits for instructions in the latter. In consequence of the delay, we suspect that Capt. Galloway, and not Mr. Tytler, will represent the planters in council when the Railway question is ultimately decided.

Colonel Wilkinson, R.E., as senior officer, is now commandant of Colombo Garrison.

We regret to hear that the Talavera has put into Mauritius leaky.

Bartholomeuz, the defaulting clerk of the surveyor-general's office, has, after a protracted trial, been found guilty and sentenced to ten years' transportation.

P.S.—Our latest intelligence respecting the Malabar is contained in the following letter dated Galle, May 25th, 1860.

"Galle has, as may readily be conceived, been in a state of great excitement during the week.

"The Malabar remains docked in sand near the shore, and opposite the Cutcherry. The officers of the company are busily engaged in discharging cargo. Scarcely anything has been washed ashore; and the few things that have, are securely stowed away in rooms at the Cutcherry, which Mr. Forbes thoughtfully placed at the service of the company; so that, fortunately, there has been no opportunity of plunder. As the vessel is now firmly imbedded in the sand, and the bay continues, ever since the terrific gale of Tuesday when the disaster happened, comparatively calm, the clearance, it is hoped, will be effected more easily and expeditiously than was at first expected." Another correspondent states:—"The Malabar will never come off again—she is hard and fast. The divers have arrived and commence work to-day. They speak confidently of getting out the specie, of which there is about £300,000. The big wigs are anxious about their baggage, which is to be first tackled by the divers."—Ceylon Overland Observer.

CENTRAL ASIA.

March 13.—Intelligence was received by the Dost from the Hakim of Cabul that Mirza Atta Mahomed, the culprit who made an attempt to poison Sooltan Mahomed, had escaped from Cabul towards Noman, previous to the receipt of the orders for his execution. The Hakim of Cabul also suggested to the Dost to send some men in search of the prisoner, but the Dost remained silent. Some merchants, who had arrived in Cabul from Bokhara, report that the King of Bokhara held a conference with his sirdars and influential chiefs, and remarked to them that the Dost had contracted a very substantial friendship with the British; but that the treaty of alliance he was going to make with the Puthans was merely verbal and nominal. The King also observed that the British were averse to tying themselves to any positive condition of alliance with him, as it was of little consequence; and, moreover, they did not place any implicit confidence in his friendship, as they had already found him slippery. He therefore determined that it would be advisable for him to enter into alliance with some other nation. The traders also reported that the troops of the Dost were fast pouring into Turkistan, and that the vakeel of the King of Bokhara had come to Aga Musjid.—March 14.—A despatch was received from Mahomed Afzul Khan, from Turkistan, stating that Sirdars Abdool Reaz Khan and Sumsooden Khan had proceeded with some troops towards Moolk Khost, in the neighbourhood of Koondooz, where they were opposed by the tribe of Turkwundees. A scuffle ensued, in which the troops of the Dost were victorious, having taken some prisoners from the enemy, and sent them to Mahomed Afzul Khan; that afterwards the rebellious tribe surrendered and craved pardon, on which he (Mahomed Afzul Khan) released the prisoners and summoned the chiefs of the clan, conferring khilluts on some of the most influential persons, and assuring them of the peace and tranquillity they would enjoy if they rendered him their assistance. The chiefs consented to afford every aid in their power to restore quiet and peace in the district. That the King of Bokhara was encamped at a place called Koorkee, and that grain was now cheap since the Turkwundees were brought under subjection.—March 15.—It is rumoured in Cabul that Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan, Hakim of Herat, had left Herat with fifteen sowars towards Teheran, and on his arrival at Mashudda Mookuddas, the governor of that place received him kindly and feted him. Thence he started for Teheran. It is also rumoured that two Russian generals had arrived in Herat, and that much kindness was shown to them; from thence they marched to Onjunj.—March 16.—A silk merchant, named Abdool Islam, stated that the King of Bokhara is encamped in Koorkee, from whence he had written to the Russian generals at Aga Musjid that he was making arrangements to attack the Puthans, and that they should wend their way thitherwards and take possession of it; and that as soon as they became masters of these countries they would come to some settlement. The King of Bokhara arrested a Heratee merchant on suspicion of being a British emissary, and confiscated all his merchandise. The King of Bokhara, however, made inquiries regarding the merchant, and having satisfied himself that he was a Herat merchant, restored to him his merchandise and set him free.—March 17.—An Urzee was read from Mahomed Hussun Khan, stating that he had issued orders to the troops on furlough that they must be present at Cabul in the course of three or four days, as their services were urgently needed in Turkistan.—March 18.—Sirdars Peer Mahomed Khan, Oosman Khan, and others represented to the Dost that (Ramzan) the month of abstinence had arrived, and that it would be advisable for him to start for Cabul, the climate of which was very salubrious. The Dost replied that he would leave for Cabul after fifteen days.—March 19.—The Ameer wrote to Sirdar Ameen Khan at Kandahar, requesting him to furnish a detailed list of all troops who have deserted the regiments and of all deceased men, and to inform Nazir Naeem Khan and Mahomed Rufeek Khan that they should proceed at once to Cabul and be present there with an account of all the expenditure incurred on the gold mine at Kandahar. Also that an abstract of the pay of all deceased jagirdars and sepoy should be sent him.—March 20.—The Dost held a durbar this morning, and at its conclusion ordered the camel chowdry to have all the baggage, &c., ready for service. He also requested Sirdar Shair Ally Khan to distribute all the accoutrements, &c., he had brought from Peshawur to the troops. Shair Ally Khan replied that the accoutrements were under repair, and that as soon as they were ready he would have them given to the troops.

That jade rumour has it that the Ameer of Cabul has given our vakeel at his court his rukshuth, believing him to be neither ornamental nor useful. The discontinuance of the lakh of rupees per mensem, paid to him by Sir John Lawrence to drive the Persians from before Herat, has removed every vestige of beauty once traceable by the well-satisfied Dost in the visage of our "ambassador," who has since, in consequence, been looked upon as something very like a nuisance. The same venerable authority tells us that the Dost, happily oblivious of the laws of meum and tuum, having seized on Balkh, which belongs of right to the King of Bokhara, that potent signor has called in the assistance of Persia, not only to recover his own, but to possess himself of Candahar, which he intends to hold, in the language of more civilised diplomatists, as a "material guarantee" for the future good conduct of the "Leader of the Faithful." The latter has evidently put his foot into it. He is totally incapable of meeting Bokhara and Persia combined. Infelix puer, et impar congressus Achilli.

Letters from Cabul state that the Ameer is expected to return to that city immediately. It has been definitely ascertained that Russian envoys are at present at the Court of Bokhara, where they are treated with great consideration. These envoys are reported to have offered to place 25,000 men at the disposal of that chief, to assist him against the Ameer of Cabul. Great preparations have been and are still being made for war on Bokhara. It is further stated positively that the ruler of Herat contemplates a visit to the Shah of Persia, and with this view the necessary arrangements have already been set on foot. Rumours of the late disturbance at Peshawur had reached the Dost, but the old fox knew better than to attach any importance to them.

April 7.—A merchant arrived from Bokhara, and stated that the King of Bokhara had retreated to his own country at the request of a Russian ambassador, who informed him (the king) that they should first fortify Bokhara, and that then they would be able to accomplish all that they desired.—April 8.—Intelligence was received from Peshawur that the commissioner of the division had summoned all the principal and influential khans to his residence, and cautioned them that, on the arrival of the Viceroy and the Governor-general the commissioner had spoken favourably of them to the Viceroy, but that they had disregarded his kindness by resisting the operation of the new tax without comprehending its conditions; and that he was sorry to observe their ignorance, which only demanded mercy, but that had it been otherwise he would have punished them severely. The commissioner levied a fine of Rs. 5 on each mohulladar, Rs. 10,000 from the city punches, and Rs. 2,500 from the shopkeepers of Peshawur. The people are now quite content, and peace and tranquillity now prevail throughout the station.

A despatch was received from Turkistan, stating that the King of Bokhara, at the request of some Russian merchants, had stopped all trade in cloth to Hindostan, and issued orders that no merchandise should be allowed to cross the river Hamoo, except indigo which was imported from Hindostan.—Lahore Chronicle.

THE 3RD DRAGOON GUARDS, now at Mhow, with the exception of a squadron recently arrived at Kirkee, are expected at Kirkee, and go home after the rains.

1 2nd in command, ditto	...	500	0 0
1 adjutant, regimental pay and usual allowance of rupees	...	170	14 0
1 sergeant major	...	70	0 0

Reception of Native Chiefs.

Foreign Dep., Simla, Thursday, May 3.—H.E. the Right Hon. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. held a durbar this day for the reception of the chiefs of the Hill States between the Sutlej and Jumna.

The chiefs, with their nearest relations and principal ministers, and the civil and military officers of the station having assembled, the Viceroy and Gov. gen., accompanied by H.E. the C. in C., entered and took his seat under a royal salute.

Each chief and native gentleman present was introduced to the Viceroy and Gov. gen., and the usual offerings having been presented and accepted, suitable khillats were bestowed on all according to their rank.

H.E. thanked the chiefs for their loyal attachment to the British Government during the rebellion, and confirmed the several rewards which had been previously conferred on them for their services.

To the Raja of Bissahar H.E. expressed a hope that the Government would receive an improved account of the administration of affairs in that principality.

After the concluding ceremonies H.E. left his seat under a royal salute, and the assembly broke up.

By order of H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. of India,
CECIL BEADON,
Sec. to the Govt. of India with the Gov. gen.

Leave to Officers at Home.

No. 470.—The following paragraph of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 131 of March 29, 1860, is published for general information:—

In continuation of Military Letter, No. 78, dated Feb. 24, 1860, I have to inform you that officers who have returned home on duty with discharged troops, who have produced m.c.s. of their unfitness to return to duty, have been permitted to remain for the periods recommended and from the date of the certificate. These officers will be entitled to draw Indian pay and allowances, and to count time as service to the expiration of two months' privilege leave allowed to them. From that date they will be entitled to furlough pay, but a passage back will not be provided for them.

Services of Conductor Leonard.

No. 469.—The following paragraph of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 120, dated March 23, 1860, is published for general information:—

Letter dated Nov. 22, 1859, No. 229.—10.—In reward for the long and meritorious service of Cond. Leonard, of the Ordnance Department, and especially for his good conduct and usefulness as commissioned officer in the artillery of the Calcutta volunteer guard, and in consideration of the strong recommendation of your Government and that of H.E. the C. in C., H.M. has been pleased to confer on Mr. Leonard a commission as lieutenant on the veteran establishment from the date of your receipt of this despatch.

The despatch from the Secretary of State having been received on the 28th ult., the commission of lieutenant on the veteran establishment conferred on Conductor now Dep. asst. commissy. J. Leonard and the allowances to be drawn by him will have effect from that date.

Powers of Commanding Officers extended.

Head Quarters, Simla, April 18.—The C. in C. is pleased, under the power and authority vested in him by Act No. VI. of 1860, passed by the Legislative Council of India, to empower the commanding officer of every native regiment of the Bengal army, under H.E.'s command, to proceed under section 1,

* This allowance is only granted so long as a quartermaster sergeant is not appointed; in that case the sergeant major will draw only the usual pay of the grade.

clause 1, of that Act, according to the rules prescribed by clause 3 of the same section.

Commanding officers are thus empowered to dispose of all military offences without the intervention of minor courts martial; but it should be borne in mind that it is not intended by this new authority to preclude recourse, when desirable, to general courts martial.

When, therefore, commanding officers are of opinion that offences are of too serious a nature to be summarily disposed of under the new powers vested in them, it will be their duty, as heretofore, to make application to the general officer commanding the division for the assembly of a general court martial.

The C. in C. trusts that the extensive powers now conveyed to commanding officers will be temperately and judiciously exercised, to the advancement of the discipline and character of the native army.

The Clasp for Central India.

May 3.—H.E. the Gov. gen. is pleased to notify that the troops employed at and prior to the battle of Banda and siege of Kotah respectively, shall be held entitled to the clasp for "Central India," presented under the G. G. O. of May 20, 1859; but that those of other of the columns commanded by Sir G. Whillock and Sir A. G. Roberts, who were employed in the subsequent minor engagements, shall be considered to have a claim to the medal only.

Charges of Transport of Troops through Egypt.

H.E. the Gov. gen. is pleased to publish the following letter from the Secretary of State for India, No. 132, dated March 29, having reference to reductions in the scale of charges for the transport of H.M.'s troops and stores between Alexandria and Suez:—

India-office, London, March 29.
No. 132.—To H.E. the Right hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—A communication has been received from the Foreign-office, notifying reductions in the scale of charges heretofore made for the transport of H.M.'s troops and stores between Alexandria and Suez; a copy of a translation of an order from H.H. the Viceroy of Egypt to the Egyptian Foreign-office, detailing the reductions to be made, and the weight of baggage to be allowed each officer and soldier, is forwarded for the information of your govt.—I have, &c., (Signed) CHARLES WOOD.

Copy. Translation of an order from H.H. the Viceroy of Egypt to the Egyptian Foreign-office:—

Dated Regeb 12, 1276 (Feb. 5, 1860).—H.M.'s agent and consul-general having written to the Foreign-office desiring that a reduction be made in the charges for the transport of H.M.'s troops between Alexandria and Suez, according to the scale recently agreed to in the case of the P. and O. Company, I accede to this desire:—

Officers shall have first-class and soldiers second-class carriages.

The fare for first-class passengers shall be 314 Egyptian piastres (nearly £3. 5s.), and for second-class passengers 206 Egyptian piastres (nearly £2. 2s.).

Officers will be allowed eighty pounds' weight of luggage.

Soldiers will be allowed fifty pounds' weight of luggage.

The transport of stores, &c., will be charged according to the present reduced rates of the P. and O. Company.

If by express trains, all extra luggage, stores, &c., will be charged at the rate of £6 per ton, if by goods train, £4 per ton.

Further, the transit administration will take upon itself the responsibility of landing and shipping H.M.'s troops, stores, &c. This is a privilege granted to H.M.'s Government.

H.M.'s troops will provide for themselves any repasts they may require on their passage through Egypt.

The above regulations will apply to all of H.M.'s troops and stores passing through Egypt for the future.

This order is to be communicated to H.M.'s agent for his information, and to the transit, in order that the necessary steps may be taken for carrying out its instructions.

Remittances of Officers.

No. 481 of 1860.—Under the authority of the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, the following rules are to be observed in preparing rolls of remittances of officers and soldiers of the British Army serving in India; all previous orders on the subject are cancelled:—

Regimental paymasters and officers commanding batteries of royal artillery are required to forward, monthly, to the paymaster, Queen's troops, two copies of the detailed returns and rolls which they furnish direct to the War Office in England, according to War Office Forms Nos. 57, 327, and 327 A, except that the amount in rupees and sterling should be distinctly stated against each name. To secure uniformity of practice the Forms will be supplied, in the first instance, by the accountant general in the military department.

The paymaster, Queen's troops, will check the returns furnished by regimental paymasters and officers commanding batteries of royal artillery, in regard to the exchange of India into sterling money, and transmit one copy of them to the Accountant-general in the military department, with a list, as per Form A, as a covering communication, retaining the other for record in his office.

The Accountant-general in the military department, in lieu of the present consolidated roll showing details, will prepare an abstract of totals under certain heads, as per Form B, and forward it, together with the original rolls furnished to him through the paymaster, Queen's troops, to the secretary to Government in the military department, for transmission to England.

Regimental paymasters and officers commanding batteries of royal artillery are required to render their returns as soon after the close of the month as possible, to allow of their reaching the office of the Accountant-general in sufficient time for the preparation and despatch of the abstract by the second mail of the month.

Arms of Irregular Corps.

Military Dept., Simla, April 27.—With reference to G. O. No. 1,073, dated July 25, 1859, the Governor general is pleased to direct that irregular corps shall retain their present arms, except such as are of rifle patterns, which are to be withdrawn, under such instructions as the rt. hon. the C. in C. may issue, and sent into the nearest magazine, where they will be received at a valuation, and Victoria carabines will be issued on payment of their value.

H.E. has determined that the Victoria carbino shall be the established pattern for all irregular corps, and that no firearms shall be furnished to their men by commanding officers except from the Government arsenals.

The G. O. No. 1,073 of July 25, 1859, and the present G. O., are applicable to the three presidencies.

Absentee Regulations.

General Dept.—The Right Hon. the Gov. in Council is pleased to publish the following for general information:—

No. 2527.—From C. H. Lushington, Esq., Sec. to the Govt. of India, fin. dept. To the civil aud., Bombay.

Fin. Dept., Fort William, Council Chamber, March 24. Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 1774, dated the 27th ult., soliciting instructions on the point as to whether an absentee, under Section XIV. of the Covenanted Civil Absentee Rules, is entitled to draw his half salary for the period of his leave under that section, in the event of his exceeding the limit allowed—viz., six months.

2. You seem to think that as it is provided in Clause 2 of Section XIV. of the rules, no portion of the half salary allowed to be drawn will be claimable till the absentee shall have returned to his duty, and that, as the absentee, by overstaying his leave, forfeits his appointment, and is thus precluded from returning to his duty, he cannot be held entitled to any portion of the half salary allowed under the rules.

3. In reply, I am desired to inform you that the Hon. the President in Council is of opinion that it could not have been contemplated by Clause 2 of Section XIV. of the Covenanted Civil Absentee Rules, that the allowance of half salary should be forfeited in cases in which officers might have exceeded the limit of their leave under that section, nor does it require, his Honour in Council considers, a strained interpretation of the word duty to support that view. Return to duty has always been used as nearly equivalent to return to active service. Servants on leave at home were always permitted to return to their duty whether they had any appointment or not. If the officer were to leave the service altogether and not to return, the half salary would not be payable, and that, the President in Council thinks, is the true meaning of the limitation. His Honour in Council would accordingly lay it down, as a rule of interpretation, that an absent officer is entitled to draw his authorised allowances during absence on leave upon his bona fide return to the service, and when he is ready to take any appointment the Government to which he reports himself may give him. Any other interpretation would, his Honour in Council thinks, be contrary to the whole spirit of the regulations, and might operate very unequally by mere chance. I have the honour to be, &c.,

(Signed) C. HUGH LUSHINGTON,

The Victoria Cross.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned soldiers of H.M.'s army, whose claims to the same have been submitted for her Majesty's approval, on account of acts of bravery performed by them in India, as recorded against their several names, viz.:

9th Lancers.—Pensioned Sergeant H. Hartigan—For daring and distinguished gallantry in the following instances:—At the battle of Budle-ke-Serai, near Delhi, on the 8th of June, 1857, in going to the assistance of Sergeant H. Helstone, who was wounded, dismounted, and surrounded by the enemy, and, at the risk of his own life, carrying him to the rear. On the 10th of October, 1857, at Agra, in having run unarmed to the assistance of Sergeant Crews, who was attacked by four rebels. Hartigan caught a tulwar from one of them with his right hand, and with the other hit him on the mouth, disarmed him, and then defended himself against the other three, killing one and wounding two, when he was himself disabled from further service by severe and dangerous wounds.

1st Battalion, 5th Regiment.—Sergeant Robert Ewart—For conspicuous devotion at Alumbagh, on Sept. 24, 1857, in proceeding under a heavy and galling fire to save the life of Private E. Deveney, whose leg had been shot away, and eventually carrying him safe into camp, with the assistance of the late Lieut. Brown and some comrades.

1st Battalion, 5th Regiment.—Private Patrick M'Hale.—For conspicuous bravery at Lucknow on Oct. 2, 1857, when he was the first man at the capture of one of the guns at the Cawnpore Battery; and again, on Dec. 22, 1857, when, by a bold rush, he was the first to take possession of one of the enemy's guns, which had sent several rounds of grape through his company, which was skirmishing up to it. On every occasion of attack Private M'Hale has been the first to meet the foe, amongst whom he caused such consternation by the boldness of his rush as to leave little work for those who followed to his support. By his habitual coolness and daring and sustained bravery in action his name has become a household word for gallantry among his comrades.

The War with China.

(From last night's Gazette.)

At the Court at Buckingham Palace, the 7th day of March, 1860, present the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

Whereas, in the event of hostilities commencing between her Majesty and her august ally the Emperor of the French on the one hand, and the Emperor of China on the other hand, it is the intention and desire of her Majesty, and of his Majesty the Emperor of the French, to act during such hostilities in strict conformity with the declaration respecting maritime law, signed by the plenipotentiaries of Great Britain, Austria, France, Prussia, Russia, Sardinia, and Turkey, assembled in congress at Paris, and dated April 16, 1856; and whereas her Majesty is willing to extend the benefits of the said declaration of Paris to all Powers which may be neutral in the said hostilities:

Now her Majesty is pleased, by and with the advice of her Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, that so far as regards the ships of any neutral Power, the flag of any such Power shall cover the enemy's goods, with the exception of contraband of war; so that no goods of enemies found on board any ship belonging to the subjects of such neutral Power, or to those inhabiting within the dominions of any such Power, and duly entitled to use the flag of such Power, shall be subject to capture or condemnation by reason only of such goods being enemies' goods; all other liabilities to capture and condemnation, respectively, of enemies' goods and neutral ships being reserved and remaining in all respects as before the declaration of the said congress at Paris, of the 16th of April, 1856.

And it is hereby further ordered, that neutral goods, with the exception of contraband of war, shall not be liable to capture under the enemy's flag, by reason only of said goods being under the enemy's flag; all other liabilities to capture and condemnation of neutral goods being reserved, and remaining in all respects as before the declaration of the said Congress at Paris of the 16th April, 1856; provided always, and it is hereby ordered, that nothing herein contained shall be applicable to, or shall be construed, deemed, or taken, so as to operate or apply to, or in favour of any person, ship, or goods whatsoever, which may be captured for breaking, or attempting to break, or which may be lawfully adjudged to have broken or attempted to break, any blockade maintained by a force sufficient really to prevent access to the coast of the enemy; but that all such persons, ships, and goods may be duly taken cognisance of, proceeded upon, adjudicated, dealt with, and treated in all respects and to all purposes according to the course of Admiralty and the law of nations, as if this order had never been made, anything hereinbefore to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.

And it is further ordered that, notwithstanding the existence of hostilities between her Majesty and her august ally on the one hand, and the Emperor of China on the other hand, and during the continuance thereof, all and every the subjects of her Majesty and of her august ally the Emperor of the French, shall and may, during such hostilities, freely trade at and with all ports and places wheresoever situate in the dominions of China, and also with all persons whomsoever, as well subjects of the Emperor of China as others residing or trading within any part of the dominions of the said Emperor.

And it is further ordered and declared that if any Chinese ship or vessel shall be captured or taken by any of her Majesty's vessels or forces, having on board any merchandise or goods being the bona fide property of any subject or subjects of her Majesty or of her august ally, the Emperor of the French, such merchandise or goods shall not be subject or liable to be condemned as prize, but shall, on the proof of such property as aforesaid, be restored to the owner or owners thereof; provided always, and it is hereby ordered, that this order shall not apply, or be construed, deemed, or taken to operate to, or apply to or in favour of contraband of war, or to trading in supply of, or dealing with, any articles or things which it may be declared by her Majesty and her august ally shall be deemed and taken as contraband of war, or to any trading or attempt to trade with places subject to effective blockade by the ships or fleets of her Majesty and her august ally, or either of them; and it is further ordered, that her Majesty's officers and subjects, and especially her Majesty's courts and officers exercising any prize jurisdiction, do take notice hereof, and govern themselves accordingly. ## ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, June 27, 1860.

SIR CHARLES TREVELYAN'S
ESCAPADE.

THE stronger the light thrown upon the act of insubordination committed by the Governor of Madras, the more dangerous and inexcusable does it appear. Throughout his official career, indeed, Sir Charles Trevelyan has been unfavourably distinguished by his supercilious and contemptuous bearing towards those placed in authority over him. Actuated by an inordinate estimate of his own judgment and ability, he has never sufficiently deferred to the opinion of others, or learned that tolerance of another's convictions and patience of argument are essential characteristics of a truly great and comprehensive intellect. The result has been that his undeniable talents have more than once been deprived of a large portion of their value by his indiscretion and recklessness of consequences whenever his superiors acted in opposition to his own views and theories. His last offence is also the worst of which he has yet been guilty, and it was attended by "aggravating circumstances" that were generally unknown when the British public was first shocked "from its propriety" by his publication of confidential official papers. It now appears that his first act of disrespect—to use the mildest word—towards the Supreme Government, manifested itself in the despatch of an open telegram, referring to "the important and critical plan of finance contained in the Licence and Income-tax Bills," without using the most simple precaution to guard against the publicity of his expression of dissatisfaction with Mr. Wilson's scheme. For this injudicious and vexatious proceeding Sir Charles was deservedly reprimanded both by the Governor-general of India and by the Secretary of State. His infatuation, however, was incurable, and on the 26th of the same month he indited the seditious minute which led to his recall. Had he confined himself to recording his reasons for dissenting from Mr. Wilson's scheme, and communicating the same to the Legislative Council, he would have acted within the limits of his function, although he would still have laid himself open to censure for the sarcastic and disrespectful tone he thought proper to adopt. But not content with opposing these measures in an official manner, he went out of his way to get up an out-of-door agitation, and to throw further obstacles in the way of Government, as if it were not already sufficiently embarrassed. Acting on "his sole responsibility," as he himself defiantly stated, Sir Charles sent a copy of his own and his colleagues' Minutes to a Madras newspaper,

"with a view to secure for them the greatest possible publicity." And this was done, as Sir Charles Wood takes care to remind him, "after the receipt of a letter from the Government of India impressing upon (him) the importance of not making public the communication between the two Governments." His contumacy was aggravated by a breach of private confidence, for two of his colleagues, Mr. Morehead and Mr. Maltby, distinctly declare that they understood their Minutes to be strictly confidential, and intended only for the use of the Legislative Council and her Majesty's Secretary of State for India. The political consequences of Sir Charles Trevelyan's intemperate conduct will show themselves more clearly after the new taxes have been formally imposed. In the mean time, its effect in the Madras Presidency has been most prejudicial in exciting the natives to oppose the Government, and the evil is likely to spread rather than be diminished. Elsewhere we give the official correspondence on the subject of these Minutes; and we would call attention to the contrast between the conduct of the British Governor of Madras and that of the native Maharajah of Burdwan. The one does his utmost to impede the action of the Government at a most difficult crisis, while the other proclaims his readiness to make any amount of private sacrifices that may be required for the public advantage. Which is the better citizen and subject, the Englishman or the Hindoo?

EUROPEAN TROOPS IN INDIA.

WIELDING at will such a powerful majority in the House of Commons, Ministers will have no great difficulty in carrying out their scheme for the abolition of the local European army of India. The country at large is so utterly indifferent as to Indian matters, and at the same time so profoundly ignorant on such subjects, that no pressure from without can be brought to bear upon the Ministry to check them in the perilous path they have thought proper to select. Supported by the cool insolence and unscrupulous mis-statements of the leading journal, they are able at once to hoodwink the people and to set her Majesty's Opposition at defiance. The fate of the local European force may, therefore, be regarded as finally sealed, and its extinction may be looked upon as the exponent of a nation's gratitude for brilliant and distinguished services. Before this consummation, however, shall have been achieved it may not be altogether unprofitable briefly to recapitulate the principal arguments put forth on either side by the friends and opponents of amalgamation.

Those who love to indulge in vague generalities profess to be astounded by the anomaly of two armies differently organised belonging to the same service. But the greatest anomaly, as it has been well observed, is our tenure of the Indian empire. Besides, it little matters whether the double system be anomalous or otherwise, provided it be found to work well, and it is on that point that opinions so widely differ. According to certain distinguished Queen's officers, the discipline—that is, the tone and interior organisation—of local corps, is necessarily lax, and much inferior to that of royal regiments, whose fidelity and military spirit are renovated by their earlier return to England. The highest Indian authorities, however, deny both the premiss and the inferences deduced from it. The Company's European troops, they maintain, were quite as effective as their brethren of the line, and even if it were true that their discipline was not all that could be desired, the fault must rest with the Commanders-in-Chief, who must be held responsible for the efficiency of the armies entrusted to their surveillance, and who, with one recent exception, have all belonged to the royal army. As to actual loyalty, no one ever entertained the slightest suspicion on the same subject until their late disaffection, and that was caused entirely by the bad faith and subsequent blundering of the Government. And if the Company's European soldiers are really so ill disciplined, so mutinous, and so little to be relied upon, how came it that on their arrival in this country they were so eagerly sought after by the recruiting officers and sergeants of the Queen's service? Were it a fact that the Company's troops were suffering from a laxity of discipline, it must not be forgotten that several regiments consisted almost entirely of raw recruits, sent out in hot haste without any previous training. These men, at least, had not become "unloyal" from their lengthened residence in the East, and if disloyalty be the natural result of long absence from home, why are inducements held out to soldiers of regiments returning to England to volunteer to remain in India? If "physical degradation," as Sir J. R. Martin asserts, be the consequence of length of residence in India, it is somewhat surprising that men who have been ten, twelve, and even fifteen years in that country should be not only permitted, but tempted by a bounty to prolong their service in a climate assumed to be so enervating. Men grow desperate, we are told, by their hopeless exile, as if enlistment were still for an unlimited period; while others complain that, from the period being limited, the best, because the most experienced, soldiers are lost to the service. It cannot, however, require any wonderful exercise of ingenuity to devise a scheme of exchange for privates as well as for officers, and no doubt many valuable lives would thereby be annually saved.

The present Commander-in-chief, again, accuses the Company's officers of preferring posts of emolument to those of military duty, and yet recommends that the same inducements to withdraw from a regimental career should be extended to the Royals. The inconsistency is as evident as the difficulty of obtaining a sufficient number of officers for civil and staff employment from Queen's regiments. As a rule, it is only young officers who succeed in completely mastering the native languages, but these are the very men to whom service in India is most repulsive. The first few years are acknowledged to be the most trying, but the Company's officers, feeling the uselessness of indulging in vain regrets and longings, steadily applied themselves to the acquisition of the native tongues, and to the study of the native character. Of course, some of the Queen's officers would act in a similar manner, but the majority would have no thought but as to the means of bringing about their early return to Europe. And yet everything depends upon the "orientalization" of those who have to come into close contact with the natives, and it is ever to be feared that a feeling of mutual dislike and distrust will spring up between the native troops and the constantly changing European army. For the command of the irregular corps, which it is wisely proposed to substitute for the regular regiments, it is indispensable to obtain officers thoroughly conversant with the language, habits and prejudices of the natives; but this can hardly be expected of Queen's officers, except in the comparatively few instances of those who are willing to spend their whole lives in India, in spite of the "physical degradation" which is said to await them. It is admitted on all hands, that expense is a minor consideration to efficiency, but the advocates of a local army maintain that 50,000 local and 30,000 royal troops may be equal in every respect, and superior in many, to 80,000 of the latter, and cost the State a smaller sum per annum. The system of frequent reliefs cannot be otherwise than expensive, and it is also prejudicial to the interior organization of a regiment, inasmuch as the oldest soldiers generally prefer remaining in India, and the discipline of the others is by no means improved by four months' confinement on ship-board. There is also a waste of strength while the relieving and relieved regiments are at sea, to the extent of 12,000 men for the third part of every twelve months, supposing 80,000 royal troops to be kept in India. It is objected, moreover, and with much reason, that in the event of a European war ministers might be tempted to recall an undue number of regiments from the East, thereby exposing our Indian empire to a greater danger than any it has hitherto encountered and overcome. This is no improbable supposition, for the knowledge that a large force in India was at the disposal of the Horse Guards and the Secretary of State for War would have the effect of inducing a popularity-hunting ministry to reduce the home army to a mere skeleton, jeopardising the safety of the country in order to gratify the manufacturing interests. Neither is it altogether politic to augment the power and patronage of the Court and the Horse Guards. Jobbery is already prevalent to a sufficiently large extent, but there would be no limit to the means of corruption if the Indian service were added to the long list of good things, the distribution of which calls forth such frequent and unfriendly criticism.

These are a few of the arguments most generally adduced in favour of either side, according to the convictions or prejudices of each individual. Our readers are now in a position to judge for themselves in which direction inclines the balance of evidence and reasoning, and we can scarcely imagine that any impartial person will hesitate to give judgment in favour of the double system recommended by those who have had the largest and most intimate experience of India and its inhabitants.

ADMINISTRATION OF OUDE—1858-59.

It is gratifying to learn from the Annual Report made by the Chief Commissioner to the Supreme Government, how completely order has been restored in the province which was so long the focus of the rebellion. The Civil Courts, indeed, had little to do in the official year under notice, chiefly through the prudence of the Government in barring actions for the recovery of property plundered during the disturbances. The system, however, has been remodelled on the principle that has been found to answer so well in the Punjab, and the Statute of Limitation has been considerably reduced. It has also been ruled "that no ancestral property in land shall be sold in satisfaction of a decree without sanction of the Judicial Commissioner," and with regard to acquired property the permission of the District Commissioner must first be obtained. Steps, too, have been taken to regulate the costs of suits, by levying a uniform tax of 2½ per cent. on the value of the suit, with the institution stamp fee. Another improvement is the general use of English notes of evidence in civil suits, and the restriction of the much abused right of appeal.

On the restoration of tranquillity the extraordinary criminal powers with which officers had previously been invested were very properly withdrawn, and recourse was once more had to the ordinary procedure of the Court of Justice. Petty crime is reported to be on the increase now that men's minds are not exclusively engrossed by public affairs. Political trials in the year 1858-59 were comparatively few in number. The Rajah Lonee Singh of Mittowlee and Fuzl Huq were the two most notorious offenders, both of whom were transported for life. The murderers of Major Gall at Roy Bareilly—with one exception—were duly executed, and also some of the party who attacked the European fugitives from Futtehghur. Minor offences were summarily punished by stripes and fine, in consonance with the new system.

The military police has been formed upon the model of that which Sir Charles Napier initiated in Scinde. It is now entirely separated from the judicial branch of the administration, so that no investigations are conducted at the Thannah, and far less opportunity afforded for bribery and oppression. Upon the military police devolve the duties of prevention and detection of crime, the protection of jails and treasuries, and the furnishing escorts for civil officers, prisoners, &c., &c. But they have nothing whatever to do with the examination of witnesses, the administering of oaths, or taking confessions. The force consists of 30 European officers, 5 regiments of cavalry, 15 of infantry, and 16 companies of city police (paid out of the city funds), in all, 16,250 strong. Each regiment is commanded by a native officer, assisted by a native adjutant, under the superintendence of an European officer. It was owing to the efficiency of this force that the population were disarmed so effectually and without opposition. They also did good service in the field in watching and harassing the rebels who made an irruption into the Trans-Gogra districts from the Nepaul Terai.

The substitution of fines and flogging for short periods of confinement has been found to answer exceedingly well. It is also a more convenient system, as less jail accommodation is now required, to the advantage of all parties. There is to be only one regular jail, situated at Lucknow, where prisoners sentenced to long terms are confined, and a prison at the headquarters of each division, with a small lock-up house near the Court in the minor districts.

The land revenue has been settled on an extremely liberal basis. Under the last King of Oude the revenue amounted to Rs. 1,38,03,731, which was reduced in 1856 on the British occupation of the province to Rs. 1,04,89,755. It is now fixed at Rs. 1,04,20,990, of which Rs. 65,64,959 are paid by talooqdars, care being taken to secure from extortion the sub-proprietors whose villages have recently been absorbed in the Talooquas. The land confiscated for rebellion was valued at Rs. 9,46,833, of which Rs. 7,34,127 were bestowed upon natives who had proved by deeds their attachment to the British rule. Notwithstanding the presence of rival armies, and the still worse consequences of flying bands of armed men traversing the country in all directions, the tillage of the ground was but little impeded either in 1857 or 1858. In the immediate vicinity of Lucknow and between that city and Cawnpore cultivation was in some degree checked and limited, but in other parts the seed was sown and the crops harvested with normal regularity. The revenue, however, was in some districts collected by the rebels, so that the British Government actually received little more than one-half of their yearly demands.

An average tax of one rupee was for the first time imposed upon salt, and a large revenue is expected thence to accrue at an expense of 5 per cent. on the receipts. Customs there are none, and the income hitherto derivable from opium very small, though it is now proposed to cultivate that drug more extensively, as the soil is well suited to the growth of the poppy.

In the matter of public works the engineers' department was principally engaged with the construction of cantonments for the European troops. Seven were commenced, namely, Dilkosha, close to Lucknow, Fyzabad, Seetapoor, Gondah, Roy Bareilly, Sultanpore, and Baraitch. As the season was far advanced, nothing more could be done than the erection of temporary huts raised from the ground and sheltered from the sun by open verandahs. In Lucknow, however, fifty-two large buildings, including barracks, hospitals, and officers' quarters were nearly completed. Though little progress was made with military roads, nearly eleven hundred miles of district roads were rendered passable for carts and wheeled carriages. Under the head of Postal Service, we read that 1,367,844 letters were received and despatched, of which about one-third were unpaid. The financial operations for the year under review were as follows:—

INCOME.
Revenue collections ..	Rs. 76,55,024
Received for Supply Bills ..	1,53,88,157
Remittances from N.W.P. ..	78,88,765
	Rs. 3,29,31,946
EXPENDITURE.
Military charges ..	Rs. 1,42,27,658
Military police ..	9,98,283
Civil administration, including public works, &c., &c.	1,53,33,082
	Rs. 3,05,59,023

With all proper deference to the gallant Member for Aberdeen, we are disposed to attach much credit to the steady resolution exhibited in disarming the native population and dismantling the forts. Though naturally distasteful, the Chief Commissioner is convinced that these measures will "entail no lasting odium on the Government."

"The people of India"—he says—"respect power, and they can well understand how a strong Government will suffer no armies or strongholds but its own. Popularity is not to be gained by a display of weakness, and if the people would have felt no temporary irritation against, neither would they have felt any respect for a Government that, despite of the teachings of the late insurrection, had left them the power again to attempt its overthrow with the slightest prospect of success. The Chief Commissioner has never met a native really attached to our Government who did not consider the disarming of the population one of the wisest acts of our policy."

Up to the 2nd of July, 1859, there were given up 626 cannon, 172,761 firearms, 535,129 swords, 47,427 spears, and 626,435 miscellaneous weapons. It is believed that three-fourths of the arms of all kinds possessed by the population have been surrendered, and that the remainder would soon become utterly useless from being buried under ground. The demolition of the forts proceeded pari passu with the disarming, and large tracts of jungle and forest which surrounded them have been cleared away and brought under cultivation.

MR. HAMMACK'S REPORT.

On the recommendation of Major Graham, Sir Charles Wood selected Mr. Hammack, Assistant Superintendent of the Statistical Department, Registrar-general's Office, Somerset-house, as an impartial and unprejudiced person, to examine and report upon the comparative cost of troops of the line in India, and of the late Company's Europeans. The result justifies the major's recommendation and Sir Charles's selection, though Mr. Hammack's report is not likely to have been very agreeable to the latter. He acknowledges, indeed, that "materials are wanting for a complete and satisfactory solution of the problem;" but so far as can fairly be ascertained from existing available data, the local army is decidedly less expensive than Queen's troops in India. To use Mr. Hammack's own words, the following are the results at which he arrived:—

"1. That the cost of 1,000 men, including officers, of the line troops, under a system of frequent reliefs, will exceed that of the same number of the local European force.

"2. That the annual excess of cost of the line troops, computed according to the existing regimental organization, and allowing for the officers of both armies absent on staff employ, will be for infantry about £6,260 per 1,000 men of all ranks; cavalry, about £9,620, and artillery about £5,390; and if the establishments of the local army were assimilated to those of her Majesty's service, the excess would be for infantry about £9,410 per 1,000 men of all ranks; cavalry about £5,670, and artillery about £6,280.

"3. That the rate of mortality in the local European force has hitherto been lower than amongst the line regiments in India.

"4. That the proposed system of more frequent reliefs will probably equalise the mortality in the two armies, and render the men available for future service elsewhere.

"That, financially, these advantages will be counterbalanced by the increased expense incurred for the transport of the line troops to and from India, and for maintaining, out of the Indian revenues, the additional force requisite to cover the loss of service of the officers and men of relieving and relieved regiments constantly on the seas."

Mr. Hammack goes at great length into details to prove the correctness of these conclusions, which will hardly be disputed by any one who takes the trouble to examine the grounds upon which they are founded. Assuming, then, the accuracy of that gentleman's figures, we may proceed to consider the relative expense of large numbers of the line and local army, excluding differences of organization, and allowing for one company at an infantry depot. Taking 80,000 as the amount of the European force to be hereafter maintained in India, and supposing the proportion of troops of the several arms to be the same as was recommended by H.R.H. the Commander-in-Chief, we find that the total cost of 48,000 infantry of the line would be £3,918,384, and of the same number of local troops, £3,651,204—showing in favour of the latter a balance of £267,120. Of 9,000 cavalry of the line the cost would be £921,600, and of the same number of local cavalry, £870,507—leaving a balance of £51,093 in favour of the latter. Of 23,000 royal artillery the cost would be £1,925,000, and of local artillery, £1,780,545, making a difference of £144,555; or upon the whole 80,000 men, of £462,768. But if this force were divided into line and local troops in the undermentioned proportions, "the additional annual expense resulting from the employment of line regiments, instead of local troops exclusively, would be as follows:—

One-half line and one-half local ..	231,384
One-third line and two-thirds local ..	154,256

The strength of the local European army in India," continues Mr. Hammack, "at the commencement of the present year was about 19,500; namely, artillery, 7,500; cavalry, 3,000; and infantry, 9,000; the cost of this force, according to the estimate for the local troops, is £1,555,394. For the same numbers of the line the estimated cost is, £1,609,047. The difference, amounting to £114,253, represents the additional annual charge which would be entailed on the Indian finances by the substitution of line troops for the local European army as existing in February last." This statement the Times coolly distorted into an estimate of excess of cost of a line army over a local one of £114,000 per annum.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Since my last letter on the subject of the amalgamation of the European forces in India under the Crown the debate on that subject has been renewed, and Lord Stanley, the late Secretary of State for India, has spoken and taken a different view from that of Sir Charles Wood, the present Secretary. He has argued the question irrespective of one great and prominent feature of it, namely, the patronage, nor did he touch on the illegality, as stated by the Earl of Ellenborough in the Upper House, of absorbing the late company's European men and officers in the Royal army, and thus making them available (contrary to the terms of their taking service) to be sent either to England, or to any other part of the world, saving Asia. His Lordship contended that "India was not a colony in the larger sense of the word, but an empire—(hear, hear). It had its own laws, its own finance, and its own administration. It maintained an armed force of 300,000 men, and of the two anomalies it was surely less that that force should have an organization separate and apart than that it should be made a portion of another force existing separate from it, and at the distance of half the globe and actually inferior in point of numbers." He, speaking with his experience as ex-Secretary of State for India, having access to all the various opinions on the subject of the amalgamation, brought forth abundant testimony to show what was the opinion of the most experienced officers, whether of the Company's service or the Queen's, on the efficiency of the officers and men of the local army; nor was there living at the time he gave his evidence one who was better able to judge than that highly meritorious and distinguished officer the late Sir Willoughby Cotton, an officer who had served many years in India, as well as in the Peninsular war, under the Duke of Wellington. He had commanded, on different occasions, the troops of the three Presidencies in the field, was at one time Adjutant-General of her Majesty's forces in India, and, eventually, Commander-in-Chief in Bombay. His opinion was that "there could be no better staff officers than those of the Indian army (an opinion endorsed by the late Sir Charles James Napier), nor a more efficient force than the Indian Artillery." The slur that was attempted to be thrown on the discipline and internal economy of the local European force by Sir C. Wood was well met by Lord Stanley, who cast whatever blame there might be on the Commanders-in-Chief, and Sir De Lacy Evans fortified his lordship's opinion by referring to the numerous incompetent officers that had been chosen for a series of years to command the armies of India.

Lord Stanley went on to say, "He did not think they could separate the case of the European army from that of the local native army. He did not see how, if they attempted to dispense with them, they were to be supplied. They could not hold with any European force which might be at their command a country of one hundred and eighty millions of people. Sixty or seventy thousand troops could never suffice for the military duties of such a country. There were services besides which Europeans could not render, and he believed that no large body of Europeans had ever moved in the field in India without having been accompanied by a native force—(hear, hear)! I will, however, go farther, and say that no single European regiment ever made any lengthened march without being accompanied by a small portion of native troops to form safeguards to the bazars in the camp and in the neighbouring villages for their protection. This was most essentially necessary in the march of the Queen's regiments, whose officers and men were utter strangers to the native inhabitants."

Sir Charles Wood stated that the amalgamation of the European forces in India with those of the Queen did not necessarily involve any alteration in the native army, while in the formation of a staff corps separated from regiments derivable from European regiments only, and the project for converting the present regular native army into an army officered as the system of the irregulars, involved not only a totally new organisation, but carried us back to the times of Clive and Coote, a century ago, when native regiments were held by native commanders, when the whole internal economy was in the hands of the native officers, and when Mahomed Yusafs and Jemal Sahibs commanded divisions of the army of several thousand men, and among them portions of European troops. This state of things it was considered wise to change in 1796, since when the same class of native officers have never entered the service, while their place has been partially filled by European officers of education, and partly by uneducated native officers, so called, who have risen from the ranks. Before I enter upon this very important topic, on which I firmly believe our military power in India depends, I must premise, by a few remarks, first on the character of officers in all the armies of the world, and subsequently on the precautions taken by the Mahomedan and Hindu Governments to retain in the hands of the ruling power the entire control of the military authority, though they confided the administration of civil affairs to those who, from local information and experience, were most fitted to conduct them.

I assume, then, as an axiom that will not be disputed, that in order to ensure obedience and discipline, those who are to command must be selected and possess higher qualities than those in subordination to them. Thus the non-commissioned officers are chosen from the most fit men out of the ranks, but they are liable to be reduced to the ranks for misconduct. Superior to them come the educated commissioned officers, derived from a higher grade of society, accustomed to command servants and those of a lower class; while the privates come from a grade in society who are necessitated to obey for the means of a livelihood. It must be remarked here that the commissioned officers are only liable to punishment by a trial of a jury of commissioned officers composed of those of other corps, with a power of challenge; and whatever the nature of their crime may be, they are not subject to be reduced to the condition of non-commissioned officers or privates. This is the invariable practice, I believe, in all the armies of Europe. Admitting such to be the case, it is clear that there is a broad distinction between the commissioned officers who enter at once to command, and the non-commissioned officers and privates who are destined to obey. In all the foreign armies of Europe no one attains the rank of a commissioned officer till he has thoroughly learned the duty of a private, either in a military academy or in the lower ranks. First commissions in the French army are divided between the Secretary at War and regimental commanding officers, in the proportion of two selected by the former out of a military school, and one out of the ranks by the colonel. Now, it must be recollected that the conscription in France embraces all ranks of society without exception, and as the conditions of providing a substitute are heavy, both in a pecuniary point of view and with respect to responsibility, it happens that the lower ranks of the army contain young men of some of the best families in the country, who frequently obtain commissions, but who are, for the most part, favoured, in the first instance, by promotion to the non-commissioned ranks. In the German armies every commissioned officer is in like manner required to do the duty of a private for at least two years, however exalted his rank in society, after which he is eligible to hold a commission. In the British army, till lately, no probation of this kind was required, nor any qualification for obtaining a commission in the line, but the means of paying a certain sum of money. At present a further security is taken by requiring that the candidate for a commission shall undergo an examination, which he cannot expect to obtain without having acquired a certain amount of knowledge indicative of belonging to a class of society accustomed to have control over servants and inferiors; while those over whom he is to be placed are derived from that class of society destined to obey. The more complete this distinction pervades and is maintained in all armies, the more effectual are the means of ensuring discipline. In no army in the world is it more prominent than in the British army; nor are there any troops more distinguished for their superior discipline. Every day's experience proves that uneducated men who enter the ranks on wages lower than those of their own walk in life seldom become qualified for command. They neither secure the respect of the class from which they have risen, nor of those into whose rank they have been elevated. They are, however, entitled to reward for long and especially for distinguished services, but in nine cases out of ten they are more happy when they can retire into civil life than in the novel situation in which they and their families are placed while in the army. The position is anomalous, and in most cases painful to the party for whose benefit the change is made.

According to a well-authenticated and detailed statement of the Russian army in 1854, it appears it comprised,—

Cavalry ...	...	40,000 "
Infantry ...	...	283,000 "
Total ...	...	345,000 men.

Assuming there may be one officer, including all ranks, to twenty-five privates, this would give 13,800 officers; and I was credibly informed on the spot, that in order to keep up that number, there were from 10,000 to 12,000 cadets of noble families and landed gentry in the several military schools of the Empire, into which pupils entered at twelve years of age, and were examined and classed at eighteen, when they were drafted into the branch of the army for which they were destined. So that every officer of the Russian army passes through a military course of instruction for several years before he can obtain a commission. It was owing to that circumstance that Todleben, with the rank of lieutenant only, was enabled to form plans for the defence of Sebastopol, and that the mud works were so rapidly and effectually constructed through the agency of the regimental officers and their men, in a style and with a rapidity that no other army in Europe could have accomplished. Enough has been said to show that the duty of a military officer, in whatever branch of the service, can never be properly performed by uneducated men, such as enter the ranks for a bare subsistence. What is true of other armies is equally applicable to those of the native princes of India. The officers are derived from the higher grades of society, while the privates are either the peasantry of the estates of their superior officers, or their followers, who, in the case of the cavalry, ride the horses of their superiors, and are paid by them out of the amount allowed for the whole troop. The officers, however, seldom if ever attain the higher grade till they have learned their duty in the ranks, as in most of the European armies. It is true that in the rise of the Mahratta empire two or three rare instances of men of low origin became so distinguished as soldiers as to become great military leaders, and eventually independent princes. Such are the dynasties of Holkar and Scindia, but they are rather the exception than the rule. In the services of the Nizam, the Peshwa, and the Rajah of Mysore, there are many cadets of families of rank holding commissions, whose hereditary estates yield revenues varying from one thousand to twenty thousand a year, and which officers, while they continue so loyal, are in no respect inferior in gallantry to any troops in the world. Let us, however, advance another step in this inquiry, and see what was the policy of our predecessors, whether Mahomedan or Hindu, in confiding military power into the hands of others than of the race exercising royal authority. From the invasion of India by the Mahomedans in the latter end of the tenth century till the reign of Acler in the seventeenth, we do not find any instance of the employment of Hindus in the armies of Islam. The great Acler, who intermarried with the Hindu princes, was the first Mahomedan sovereign who entrusted the conquered race with military command. In the time of his great grandson Aurungzeb, some few of his generals were of the Hindu race. It was through their sympathies and collusion with the Hindus of the Deccan that the Mahrattas made head, and during the forty years succeeding the death of Aurungzeb a struggle between the Mahomedan and Hindu Governments arose which ended in the subversion of the former and the establishment of the supremacy of the latter. The Hindus followed the same policy as their rivals. Their armies were composed wholly of Hindus, and for the most part their own countrymen. I know of only one instance of a Mahomedan commander in the Mahratta army who came over with a body of regular infantry from the Nizam's service, and who fell at the battle of Paneput, just one hundred years.

Let us take warning from what has happened already, and from the lesson taught us by the history of India, of the fatal consequences of depriving ourselves of the faithful services of efficient European regimental officers, and confiding our discipline and our soldiery into the hands of either uneducated natives or of those of a superior grade, unless we are prepared to place them to the higher commands, which from their capacity and length of service they will undoubtedly expect and demand.

In my next I propose to take a review of the history of our native army, and trace not only the slackness of its discipline, where it may exist, to its true cause, the want of European officers both in numbers and efficiency—a deficiency to which may mainly be ascribed the late mutiny and the annihilation of the Bengal native army.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JUNE 21. EUROPEAN FORCES: INDIA.

The adjourned debate on Sir C. Wood's motion for leave to bring in a Bill to repeal the law enabling the Secretary of State for India to raise men for her Majesty's local European forces in India being resumed,

LORD STANLEY, after disclaiming party or personal motives, and frankly acknowledging the difficulties presented by Indian questions, and the intricacy and perplexity of this question in particular, observed that, knowing the opinions of high authorities upon this subject, he should think it an act of political cowardice if he hesitated to express his own sentiments and to claim for those of others a fair and full consideration. Having noticed briefly the objection to the maintenance of two European armies in India—that it was a theoretical anomaly, he remarked that the difficulty of dealing with this question was greatly increased by the absence of any distinct plan to be substituted for the existing scheme. In considering what should be the constitution of the European army in India it was impossible, he said, to exclude from view the native army, which would suffer in its character by the removal of a local European force, and would become a refuge only for those European officers who could find no other employment. He had never heard a satisfactory answer given to the objection that, by the removal of a local European force, the Indian Government would lose the valuable assistance of some thousand European officers immediately attached to the local Government. He thought, and this was the opinion of Lord Canning, that it would be difficult to get line officers properly qualified to stay in India; and young men, new to that country, could scarcely avoid giving offence to the natives. Great stress had been laid by Sir C. Wood upon the mutinous spirit exhibited by the discharged local European force; but it must be remembered that that force had been recruited by men hastily enlisted in this country and imperfectly disciplined, and he challenged proof that troops of the line placed in the same circumstances and influenced by the same feeling, would not have acted in the same manner. He read testimonies given by various officers of Indian experience in favour of the military qualities of the local European army, observing that, for high commands in India, there was always an opportunity of getting from the local service the best men. The jealousies and rivalry between the two services had been insisted upon; but the officers of the local army had been excluded from certain professional advantages enjoyed by the other service; this had naturally created a sense of injustice; the removal of the cause would banish the effects. It had been argued that the locking up a large European force in India was inconvenient; but he denied that the local force was "locked up;" it had been and might again be employed, in time of war, beyond the limits of India.

General PEEL stated that he had changed his opinion upon this question; he could not get over, he said, the fact of the mutiny among the local Europeans, and there were other reasons (which he detailed) that had contributed to the change. He was convinced that there would be no penalty of qualified line officers for continuous service in India; and as to the expense of maintaining a single army, he agreed with Sir C. Wood that the most efficient force was the cheapest, and did not see why the expense should be greater than at present. He gave his cordial support to the motion for leave to bring in the Bill.

Colonel SYKES contended that the grounds assigned by Sir C. Wood for the amalgamation of the two European armies were not founded on facts. He palliated the alleged mutiny of the local Europeans, suggesting instances in which regiments of the line had made a stand against what was deemed injustice, and read strong testimonies to the character of the local army. He insisted upon the question of expense, the constitutional question, and the question of patronage, as furnishing reasons why Sir C. Wood should not persevere in his measure.

Mr. PEACOCKE said he was a partisan of a thorough and entire amalgamation of the two armies.

Sir DE LACY EVANS objected to the form in which the House was called upon to give a vote upon the question, whether there should be a local European force in India. The alleged cause of the Bill was the mutiny of that force; but he contended that the soldiers had been led into the belief that they were entitled to the bounty or their discharge by the language of the First Minister of the Crown. He condemned in severe terms the conduct of the ruling authorities towards these men, and, adverting to the brilliant services and high character of the local corps, he expressed his astonishment that they should be now stigmatised as unworthy of trust. Assuming that the amalgamation of the armies would augment the military patronage at home, he expressed in very plain language his distrust of the Horse Guards and the War Department.

Captain JERVIS observed that this was not a question of amalgamating the two armies, but of creating a new local force.

Leave was then given to bring in the Bill.

THE REMOVAL OF SIR C. TREVELYAN.

The official correspondence between the Government of India, the Government of Madras, and the Home Government, relative to the minute issued by Sir C. Trevelyan, and to his subsequent recall, were published on Friday last.

On the 26th April Sir C. Wood writes to the Madras Government, cautioning them against allowing the minute to become publicly known:—

"To HIS EXCELLENCY THE HON. THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL, FORT ST. GEORGE.

"India-office, London, April 26, 1860.

"Sir,—I have had before me in Council the minute by your President transmitted by him in a letter to me dated the 20th of March last, on the subject of the several financial measures recently introduced into the Legislative Council of India by Mr. Wilson, and also the confidential despatch transmitted to you by the Government of India, under date the 9th of March, 1860, after the receipt of your telegraphic message of the 4th of that month.

"2. It is not only right, but desirable that you should confidentially communicate to the Government of India, in the most unreserved manner, your opinions on all questions of importance that may be under consideration; but when a decision on any subject has been come to by that Government they have a right to expect the most cordial support in reference thereto from all subordinate authorities.

"3. This observation is applicable at all times, but more particularly on the present occasion, when the Government of India, after most anxious consideration, and after consulting the principal authorities throughout India, including your Government, have felt it to be their imperative duty to propose to the Legislative Council financial measures of the greatest importance, in order to meet the existing large deficiencies.

"4. Any additional impost, and still more an income-tax, must necessarily be unwelcome in any country, but especially so in India, where direct taxation is almost unknown; and it would be difficult to conceive any circumstance more calculated to encourage opposition to the contemplated measures than its being known to the public that your Government had strongly opposed them.

"5. Your forwarding to the Government of India a telegraphic message, expressly referring to 'the important and critical plan of finance contained in the Licence and Income-tax Bills,' without taking any precaution by the use of cipher, or otherwise, to guard against its contents obtaining publicity, was therefore open to serious objection; and the danger of mischief arising therefrom would be greatly increased if the printed minute of your President, or any resolution of your Government in reference thereto, should be allowed to become publicly known.

"6. I cannot doubt that means have been taken by you to guard against such a contingency; but the considerations involved are of such great importance that I have deemed it my duty to direct your attention to the subject.

"7. I forbear from making any observations on the tone of the minute, as I trust that it may have been treated only as a confidential paper, and will not be seen by any persons except the members of your Government.

"I have, &c.

"CHARLES WOOD."

On the 10th of May Sir C. Wood, aware by that time of the publication of the minute, again writes, expressing his disapprobation of the course taken by Sir C. Trevelyan, and recalling him:—

"To HIS EXCELLENCY THE HON. THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL, FORT ST. GEORGE.

"India-office, London, May 10, 1860.

"Sir,—In the despatch which I addressed to you on the 26th of April I conveyed to you my opinion that, while it was the duty of the subordinate Governments of India to communicate to the supreme Government, in the most unreserved manner, their views and opinions upon all matters of importance, it was no less their duty, after communicating those views, to abstain from anything calculated to embarrass the proceedings of the Supreme Government, or to obstruct the execution of any measures which might become law.

"2. I did not think it necessary to make any observations on the tone of your President's minute, referred to in that despatch, in the belief that it would be treated as a confidential paper (as, indeed, it appears, from their recent minute, to have been considered by two members of your Government), to be communicated only to the Government of India, the members of the Legislative Council, and the Secretary of State for India.

"3. I learn with no less surprise than regret, from the letters which reached me by the last mail, that the minutes of your Government have been generally distributed and made public at Madras, and have appeared there in one of the newspapers; printed copies seem to have been sent to Calcutta, and, I believe, also, to Bombay. It appears that this distribution of these minutes was made by your President on 'his sole responsibility,' without the concurrence or even the knowledge of his colleagues, 'with a view to secure for them the greatest possible publicity,' and that this was done after the receipt of a letter from the Government of India, impressing upon you the importance of not making public the communications between the two Governments.

"4. Your President's minute is an elaborate answer to the speech by which the proposed measures were introduced into the Legislative Council, which he denounced in the strongest terms. The object of its publication was appeal to the people of India against those measures; and whatever Sir Charles Trevelyan's intentions may have been, at any rate, it is perfectly obvious that such publication could not fail to excite opposition to those measures, and to place the Government of Madras, in the eyes of the whole people of India, at the head of that opposition, in direct hostility to the Governor-general in Council.

"5. It is impossible to conceive a course of conduct more incompatible with the proper relations between the Governments of the minor presidencies and the Supreme Government of India, or more calculated to shake that authority which is intrusted to the Supreme Government over the whole of her Majesty's dominions in India.

"6. It seems to her Majesty's Government impossible that the Government of India can be carried on if such conduct is pursued by members of its subordinate Governments, or that the administration of your presidency can, with advantage to the public service, be left in the hands of Sir Charles Trevelyan, after the position which he has assumed in relation to the Government of India; and, while her Majesty's Government deeply regret that he will be prevented from pursuing the course of useful improvement in which he is now engaged in Madras, they feel that, with a due regard to the highest interests of the State, they have no alternative but to remove him from the Government of Madras.

"7. Sir Charles Trevelyan is hereby removed accordingly from the office of Governor of the Presidency of Fort St. George. A new commission of Government will shortly be issued. In the meanwhile the office thus vacated will devolve on the member of council next in rank to the Governor, other than the Commander in Chief, agreeably to the provisions of the law.

"I have, &c.,

"CHARLES WOOD."

Sir C. Wood accompanies this despatch with one in which he thanks Sir C. Trevelyan for past services:—

"To HIS EXCELLENCY THE HON. THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL, FORT ST. GEORGE.

"India-office, London, May 10, 1860.

"Sir,—In my despatch No. 23 of this date I have communicated to you the reasons for which her Majesty's Government has been compelled to take the painful step of removing Sir Charles Trevelyan from his appointment as Governor of Fort St. George.

"2. Her Majesty's Government desire, at the same time, to place upon record their high appreciation of the services which Sir Charles Trevelyan has rendered during his administration.

"3. They have observed with great satisfaction the careful attention which he has given to the numerous questions of importance which have been brought under the notice of your Government during this period.

"4. His observations upon the condition of the districts of your presidency which he has visited show that his constant aim has been to raise the moral condition and to increase the material prosperity of the people.

"5. No servant of the Crown has more earnestly endeavoured to carry out the great principles of Government which were promulgated to the princes and people of India in her Majesty's gracious proclamation.

"6. For these valuable services the thanks of her Majesty's Government are due to Sir Charles Trevelyan.—I have, &c.,

"CHARLES WOOD."

An interesting despatch from the Governor of India to the Governor of Madras, bearing an earlier date than those quoted above, is also published. In this despatch the views of Lord Canning with reference to the minute are expressed through his secretary, Mr. Beadon:—

"FROM THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA WITH THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT, FORT ST. GEORGE.

"Simla, April 18, 1860.

"Sir,—1. The Governor-general has been furnished by the President in Council with the copy of a despatch addressed by the Governor and Council of the Madras Presidency to the President and Council of India, No. 442, dated the 26th ult., forwarding the minutes recorded by the Governor and members of his Council, relative to the financial measures now under the consideration of the Legislature.

"His Excellency has also received a copy of the reply of the President in Council, dated the 7th inst., and of the further minutes by the Governor of Madras and the members of his Council, enclosed in Mr. Secretary Pycroft's letter, No. 514, dated the 5th inst.

"2. It is not his Excellency's intention to enter into a discussion of the main questions at issue between the Government of India and the Government of Madras, further than to observe that the Government of Madras seems to realise very imperfectly the grave necessity which has compelled the Government of India to resort to further measures of taxation, and to over-estimate the probability of serious opposition on the part of the people to the particular taxes which it is intended to impose. On these points his Excellency agrees with the views expressed in the letter of the President in Council, who, with his Excellency's full concurrence and support, will proceed with the measures brought into the Legislative Council by the Right Hon. Mr. Wilson.

"3. His Excellency desires to confine his observations to the publication of the minutes. This publication is an act of the Governor of Madras, which reaches far beyond the limits of the presidency within which his responsibility and authority are confined.

"4. The tenour of the minutes is such as not only to encourage, but to provoke opposition to the authority of the Supreme Government in other Presidencies and in Provinces under the immediate superintendence of that Government. The publication of them would, the Governor-general observes, have been inexcusable enough if there were still throughout India a clear stage for discussing whether new taxes are necessary, and whether direct taxes are fitting. But the stage is not clear.

"4. Already now and, for the most part, direct taxation has been imposed throughout the Punjab—a country which, if active and useful loyalty were a title to exemption, would have quite as good a claim to be exempted as Madras, and it has been accepted cheerfully. The form of the tax was faulty, and will be modified, but it was collected without a sign of opposition.

"5. Already in Oude, within the last three months, the first instalment of a direct assessment of more than 11 lacs has been levied from about half a million of payers; the assessment has been made according to the reputed means of the payers, but there has been no vexatious inquisition. The aid of the talookdars and zemindars has been used for it, but the lower classes have not been unduly burdened. The measure was introduced shortly after the strength of the local Government in troops and police had been largely and palpably reduced, but it was carried through without a murmur from any part of the province.

"6. For Bengal Proper and in the north-western provinces nothing has yet been done, because there it is necessary to await the passing of a law by the Legislative Council; but, so far as the Governor-general has heard, there is not under these two last-mentioned Governments, any more than in the Punjab and Oude, a disposition to question the necessity of some addition to the public burdens in order that the exigencies of the State may be met.

"As regards the form which the addition should take, direct taxation is, no doubt, even more unpalatable than indirect, but the Governor-general believes that the proposed measures have been received by the public at large, wherever the nature of them has been properly explained, as just and equitable—in the case of the income-tax as pressing on those only who can afford to bear it, and in the case of the licence-tax as being in accordance with native notions of fiscal policy.

"7. The Governor-general does not hesitate to say that, if this feeling should now give way to one of active hostility and opposition, the change will in a great degree be attributable to the act of the Governor of Madras, and to the encouragement thereby given to the native community, not in Madras alone, but throughout India, to expect sympathy, if not support, from that very high authority in resisting any new taxation that may be proposed by the Supreme Government and sanctioned by the Legislature.

"8. The President in Council has already pointed out to the Government of Madras the direct infraction of a positive order involved in the publication of these papers. The defence of the proceeding is to be found in Sir C. Trevelyan's minute of the 4th inst., but the Governor-general cannot accept the reasons there assigned as in any degree justifying the step, which appears to have been taken not only on the sole responsibility of the Governor, but without the knowledge, and contrary to the intentions and judgment, of those of his colleagues who alone had taken any share in the discussion. That the papers would have been printed by the Legislative Council is an assumption for which there is no ground whatever. That some of the circumstances stated by Sir C. Trevelyan afford good reason for expressing with the utmost freedom his own opinion and those of his colleagues in the form of official communications, or communications of any other kind, to the Government of India the Governor-general readily admits; but in the opinion of his Excellency they fail altogether to justify a course which must have the effect of exciting the native population against measures which they were otherwise disposed to accept, and which presents to the world the unseemly spectacle of deliberate disobedience on the part of one of the highest officers of the Government to the order of constituted authority.

"9. The means by which the local Government can make known their views to the Supreme Government with respect to all projects of law are duly provided; and, as the Government of Madras had already had full opportunity of expressing its opinion on the general character of the taxes proposed, there was the less reason why it should seek to rouse popular feeling against a measure deliberately resolved on by the Supreme Government, after consideration of all the arguments that had been brought against it.

"10. The Governor-general is therefore constrained to record his entire condemnation of the act of the Governor of Madras in publishing his minute of the 24th of March, and those of his colleagues. The Governor-general regards that act as one of dangerous insubordination, palliated by no exigency, calculated to bring the authority of the Queen's representative in India into contempt, and certain to suggest resistance to measures which are already in useful operation with the full force of law.

"I have, &c.,

"C. BEADON, Secretary to the Government of India with the Governor-General."

RENEGADES FROM THE CHRISTIAN FAITH.—Two Europeans are at present enacting a most prominent part among the followers of Mahomed in Bombay. It appears that these renegades came from Madras a few days ago, at which place they had embraced Islamism. What their ulterior object can be is a mystery, more particularly as they seem to be amply provided with funds, and have refused most tempting offers made to them by the "faithful" to remain in Bombay, or at least postpone their visit to the tomb of the prophet at Mecca to some more remote period, and not quit them, as they purpose to do, by the present mail steamer to Suez. All efforts to detain them are said to have been unavailing, as nothing but a sight of the tomb of Mahomed will satisfy these crazy European Mahomedans.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Home Agency, 27, Cannon-street,
June 4, 1860.

APPLICATIONS for the Office of HOME AGENT of the BENGAL MILITARY FUND will be received from Retired Officers of the Bengal Establishment up to the 7th of September next, when the names of candidates will be submitted to the general body of Subscribers, with whom the election of an Agent rests.

The salary of the appointment is £200 per annum—an allowance being made for office expenses actually incurred, not to exceed in the aggregate the further sum of £270 per annum, and the Agent will have to furnish security to the amount of £2,000.

By order of the Directors,
(Signed) E. G. DUNBAR, Sec.

Bengal Military Fund Office,
Calcutta, April 19, 1860.

TO GENTLEMEN or LADIES travelling, TRUSTEES, and Others, requiring a really CONFIDENTIAL REPRESENTATIVE for Superintending their Affairs.—A BARRISTER, age 48, of active business habits, would be glad to undertake the foregoing for one or more parties, and for large or small affairs. Being independent, and non-sedentary occupation his object, remuneration is a secondary consideration. Security on his own freehold landed property. Advances of rents, &c., made if required.

Address LEX, care of H. ROSE, Esq., 2, Tanfield-court, Temple.

LADIES proceeding to INDIA, either per P. and O., or via the Cape, wanting a Native Female SERVANT, can hear of one wishing to proceed home, by applying to H. L. INN, Esq., care of Mr. MARSHALL, 134, Regent-street.

A YOUNG PERSON, age 19, who can be well recommended by the lady she is now leaving, wishes to PROCURE a SITUATION to go abroad (India preferred), either as Nursery Governess to take charge of one or two young children, or to wait upon a lady.

Address, F. S., St. Vincent's Lodge, Southsea.

FINE HEAD OF HAIR.

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL

POSSESSES wonderfully nourishing powers for the growth, restoration, and improvement of the human hair. It prevents it from falling off or turning gray, strengthens weak hair, and makes it beautifully soft, curly, and glossy. In the growth of the beard, whiskers, eyebrows, and mustachios it is unfailing in its stimulative operation. In reference to the hair of early childhood the use of the oil is attended with the happiest effects; mild, invigorating, and purifying in every instance, it dispels scurf and dandruff, and renders unnecessary the use of the fine comb. In all climates it alike displays its incomparable results, and has long been an established favourite in India. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (equal to four small), and 21s. per bottle.

On the wrapper of each bottle are the words, "ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL," in two lines.

Sold by A. ROWLAND AND SONS, 20, Hatton-garden, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

COMMANS'S CELEBRATED ARECA-NUT TOOTH-PASTE is used by her Majesty and the Royal Family.—Has been examined, approved, is used and recommended, by many of our first physicians and dentists as the best preparation known for cleaning and preserving the teeth. Testimonials have been received, unsolicited, from many of the nobility and gentry. The following is amongst the many in testimony of its high value.

"Liverpool, August, 1859.
"I have much pleasure in offering my testimony to the value of your Areca-nut Tooth Paste, and have no hesitation in saying that it is the most efficacious and agreeable Dentifrice ever produced. I have recommended its use to my patients for some years."
"W. J. NEWMAN,
"Surgeon-Dentist to the Liverpool Infirmary for Children."

Prepared only by COMMANS, Chemist, Bath, in pots, 2s. each; to be procured of all Chemists, through the Wholesale Agents, Barclay, Edwards, London; Oldham and Co., Dublin; Duncan and Flockhart, Edinburgh.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH, SET in the new CHEMICALLY PREPARED INDIA-RUBBER, forming a beautifully fitting plate to the gums, or over stumps, without producing the slightest pain, and on this plan it is impossible to detect them as artificial when the workmanship is of superior order. Mr. BRADSHAW can, with the greatest confidence, undertake any case, no matter how difficult, with certain success, being a thoroughly practical workman, supplying for many years the first dentists of the day with their most particular work in Artificial Teeth. Doing all his own work himself, he is enabled to supply his patients at an exceedingly moderate price. Single Tooth, from 3s. 6d. to 10s. 6d.; a Complete Upper or Lower Set, from £2 to £5. Preparing for publication, in One Volume Octavo,

BY J. R. YOUNG,

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS, PURE AND MIXED.

WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. YOUNG has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. YOUNG's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

ALLEN'S

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 6s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or, on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

HAND-BOOK to the MAPS of INDIA, giving the Latitude and Longitude of all places of note. By Major H. V. STEPHEN, late of Bengal Army Revenue Survey Department. In 18mo. bound, price 5s.

MAP of INDIA; from the most recent Authorities, showing the railways and telegraphs. On two sheets. Size, 2 ft. 10 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high. 10s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1s. 1s.

MAP of the STEAM COMMUNICATION and OVERLAND ROUTES between ENGLAND, INDIA, CHINA, and AUSTRALIA. In a case, 14s.; on rollers, and varnished, 18s.

NO ICE REQUIRED to produce common

Ice, Dessert Ices, to Ice Wines, &c., in SIMPSON'S NEW PATENT FREEZING VASE.—This Apparatus is, without exception, the most efficacious, simple, and portable ever produced. By using the Patentee's Freezing Powder, Dessert Ices and Common Ice can be frozen by the most inexperienced, in a few minutes, on the table, or in an invalid's apartment. Residents and travellers in hot climates will find it invaluable, as it produces that luxury—Ice!—at command, and only occupies the space of an ordinary hut-case.

Prices: one pint, Four Guineas; three pints, Five Guineas. Freezing Powder, 31s. per cwt. Freezing Pots, Ice Moulds, &c., &c.

SODA-WATER, &c.—Use the "Seltzogene"

(solely of one piece of glass), the only portable apparatus that has the patronage of the medical profession, who recommend it for making pure Soda-water and Aerated Beverages. Metallic impregnation is avoided, there is no leakage, and it is not affected by hot climates.

Prices: two pints, 23s.; three pints, 30s.; five pints, 42s. Powders (forty charges in box), 8s., 10s., and 16s. each. References and descriptive catalogues sent free.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

—OBSTACLES OVERCOME.—The Dyspeptic, Consumptive, and all suffering from congestion or disordered action of any organ, may be relieved of their maladies by the diligent use of these two inestimable remedies. The Ointment penetrates to the affected part, whether situated near to, or remote from the skin, and acts most gently with the Pills in removing all obstructions to the free circulation of pure blood through the deranged organ; over which this Ointment should be rubbed as briskly as possible without increasing pain, or producing an additional pang. By such a course every obstacle to circulation, secretion, and excretion will be overcome, and each function resume its natural state. Vigour, vivacity, and health will reward the patient's diligence.

Price 1s. post-free.
